Action by League On Franco Sought

The European Situation.

Gen. Emilio Kleber, self-styled "professional revolutionary" and leader of Loyalist Spain's international brigade, yesterday was named supreme commander of the northern section of Madrid as a reward for his services. Rebel bombers again raided the city early today as inhabitants dug tunnels under homes to expedite escape.

At Geneva, Spain's Leftist government asked the League of Nations to consider Italo-German recognition of the Spanish Insurgent regime, holding the step a threat to peace. Britain was reported to be opposed to such action by the League.

From Rome it was reported an accord is being considered whereby Italy will recognize Manchukuo and Japan will recognize Ethiopia.

Kleber Elevated.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Nov. 27.—Gen. Emilio Kleber, picturesque leader of the Socialist "International Brigade," today was named supreme commander of the northern sector of the capital, where the hottest fighting of the siege has taken place.

The naturalized Canadian, who describes himself as "a professional revolutionary," conducted his defense of the northern approaches to the city with such brilliance, government sources said, that his new command was the reward.

Gen. Kleber, a solidly built man in his early fifties, boasts of his "experience in directing the proletariat's struggle in Russia, Germany and China."

Of mixed French and German descent he became a naturalized British subject as a youth when his parents moved to Toronto. After going through the Great War, he found himself in 1919 in one of the White armies sent to Siberia, but deserted to join the Bolshevist forces, he said, and participated in the organization of the Red Army.

Went to China in 1927.

Kleber said he worked for the Communist cause in Hamburg and then went to Central China in 1927. There, he said, he was instrumental in welding the Chinese masses into "a powerful workers' army."

In the Northwestern University section of the city, where he has commanded the Eleventh International Brigade, composed of volunteers from many countries, Gen. Kleber declared government forces "will drive the insurgents from the gates of Madrid by Christmas."

Government commanders, asserting the general had brought new enthusiasm into the fight against Fascist insurgents, declared his life "too precious" to be exposed to unnecessary risks. They provided him with a bullet-proof automobile and an escort of armored cars.

Cartagena Attacked.

Paris, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—The newspaper Intransigeant reported tonight from Gibraltar ten Spanish rebel bombers and three warships had attacked the loyalist port of Cartagena, sinking three government cruisers, damaging an arsenal and blowing up a munitions depot. The newspaper also reported three squadrons of trimotored bombers had flown over Malaga, setting fire to the arsenal there.

Madrid Bombed Again.

Madrid (Saturday) Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Rebel bombing planes, protected by low-hanging clouds, swept over Madrid today in an attack on the capital's last lines of defense.

Loyalist antiaircraft guns blazed away at the attacking planes, believed to number two or three, in a staccato clatter but were unable to bring them down.

Loud explosions resounded throughout the city as panicky residents ran for shelter in cellars and subway stations.

Rebel artillery on the northwestern outskirts beyond University City joined in the early morning bombardment, throwing tons of screaming shells upon loyalist positions.

Madrid Digs Tunnels.

Madrid, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—Madrid citizens dug underground tunnels today to speed their flight from house to house in the bitter siege against the capital by Spanish Fascists.

With bare hands and what shovels they could find, the householders burrowed from one cellar to the next to assure some means of exit if their homes were demolished by bombardment.

Zaharoff, War's Mystery Man, Dies of Heart Attack in Hotel

World Armament Merchant to Be Buried Today at French Chateau.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Monte Carlo, Nov. 27.—Sir Basil Zaharoff, one of the most sinister forces the world has ever known, died here today at the age of 86.

Sir Basil will be buried in the same secrecy which made him a mystery man while he lived.

Without a ceremony, his body is to be taken from Monte Carlo at 4 a. m. tomorrow to his isolated chateau at Balincourt, near Vallangoumard, France, where he had resided quietly for the last few years.

The early hour apparently was selected to avoid the gathering of curious persons who have heard tales of Zaharoff.

A gray, withered wisp of a man, he was the No. 1 mystery of modern times.

His beginnings were unknown and his later life he cunningly cloaked in secrecy. He made one of the world's half dozen largest fortunes trafficking in arms.

He sold to both sides during the World War. It was charged that he arranged international agreements that air attackers would never bomb munitions factories on either side.

Clearinghouse For Dying U. S. Units Proposed

By Robert C. Albright.

Creation of a Federal liquidation agency to close out affairs of scattered emergency bureaus not slated for permanence is being considered by some influential members of Congress seeking an effective Government reorganiaztion formula.

The proposal, broached in the course of Congressional reorganization studies, would transfer to the new agency those units already in process of liquidation and others nearing expiration dates, for which no extension is contemplated.

Sponsors of the plan point out Government boards and bureaus have a manner of extending their lifetime, in skeleton form, long after their original functions have ceased.

They argue that unless such a central clearing house for doomed functions is established, dead limbs from the New Deal's alphabetical tree may continue indefinitely. They cite such wartime activities as the War Finance Corporation and War Minerals Relief, still a part of the administrative set-up, 18 years after the war.

RA Transfer Hinted.

As three independent re-organization committees, Senate, House and President's, continued their quest for a re-organization solution, it was learned yesterday the Resettlement Administration, one New Deal function the President will make permanent, may be transferred to the Agriculture Department by executive order before Congress convenes.

RA originally was created by executive order, and the President has authority to transfer its functions by the same medium. This would eliminate both the need of making Congress judge of Resettlement guardianship and prevent probable legislative controversy over recommendations of Rexford Guy Tugwell, retiring administrator, that his set-up, intact, go to Agriculture.

Once it is a part of the department, Secretary Henry A. Wal-

Decree Abolishes Adverse Criticism Of Nazi Literature

By decree, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels abolished all hostile critisms of theatrical and literary works and declared that henceforth there would be only "contemplation and description."

While Reichsfuehrer Hitler cocked an attentive ear, Dr. Goebbels told the annual meeting of the Reich Culture Chamber that 50 years from now nobody could look back and say that creative genius in the Reich today had been "pestered and martyred by critical gadflies."

2 Plants Burn In Waterfront Blaze in Boston

Harbor Shipping Imperiled in Spectacular Fire; Navy Yard Safe.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Nov. 27.—A spectacular waterfront fire, fanned by a high wind, destroyed a warehouse and grist mill late tonight and only desperate work by firemen saved several vessels tied up at nearby docks.

Several freight cars on adjacent tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad were damaged.

Sparks, carried high aloft, were a constant threat to other industrial buildings and piers. The Boston Navy Yard, only a quarter-mile distant, was not endangered.

The freighter Mobile City, tied up several days ago by a "sit down" strike of seamen, was saved by emergency work by a fireboat which dragged it out in midstream. Another freighter, The Cody, also was pulled from the danger zone.

Sure It'll Be Boy, Mme. Sarga Picks 'Duel' as His Name

Budapest, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—It's going to be a boy at the Franz (Bring 'Em On) Sargas' some time around Christmas.

Mme. Sargas (she's not sure it will be a boy) is going to call him "Duel" if the priest will let her. It was the unborn Sarga who prompted his frowsy-headed father to challenge upward of 100 men to duels.

"I can't let my son grow up knowing his father was a coward," said the chesty Cyrano.

Mme. Sarga insisted on perpetuating the battling fame of Sarga in naming her son even after the spread of nasty insinuation that there is something phoney about the bullets her husband uses in his dueling pistols.

Italo Santelli, one of Sarga's seconds, said the chances of anyone being killed in the duels was less than 1 in 100, and added: "Ask the man who loads the pistols."

Sarga was to have exchanged pistol shots at 15 paces today with his wife's cousin, Laszlro Gebei, but Gebei's illness delayed the bout.

The doctor has three saber duels scheduled for tomorrow. From now on it's sabers or no fight, he said.

Japanese Arms Budget Of 400 Million Adopted

Tokyo, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—The Japanese cabinet approved today a record-breaking budget of 3,041,000,000 yen ($869,726,000), with almost half the sum devoted to the Japanese army and navy.

The 1936-37 defense appropriation alone was 1,409,000,000 yen (about $400,000,000). The army was given $205,000,000 and the navy $194,480,000.

Breaks Liven Peace Hopes In Sea Strike

Strike Developments.

First actions toward a general breakup in the maritime strike that has crippled United States shipping at nearly all coastal points resulted yesterday in settlement between some shippers and workers on the West Coast and in New York.

At San Francisco Steam Schooner Operators and the Marine Cooks and the Stewards Association announced an accord. The schooner operators man about 70 of the 221 ships tied up.

At New York, three maritime unions signed an agreement with operators to return to work immediately.

On the West Coast, union representatives began signing contracts to man Government-chartered supply ships to Alaska, to carry food.

McGrady Encouraged.

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Steam Schooner Operators and the Marine Cooks and Stewards Association today reached a peace agreement which may open the way for settlement of the Pacific Coast maritime strike.

Ralph W. Myers, president of the Ship Owners Association of the Pacific, operators of the steam schooners, announced the accord after a conference with union members and Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

"We reached a complete accord for an agreement," Myers said. "The terms of the agreement will be compiled tomorrow from the data submitted this afternoon."

It was the first successful peace conference of the strike. It gave McGrady, leading the Federal Government's efforts to settle the entire maritime dispute, new encouragement as he went to work immediately to bring the masters, mates and pilots union members and the schooner operators together as the next step of his program.

Two Peace Wedges.

San Francisco, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—Two potential peace wedges were driven into the knotted maritime strike situation today with the furtherance of Government plans to move ships to Hawaii and Alaska and the resumption of settlement negotiations in one quarter.

Union representatives began signing contracts to man Government-chartered supply ships to the northern territory and the Interior Department announced the Coast Guard has "agreed to co-operate" in the movement of food supplies to strike-isolated Hawaii.

Interior officials said efforts were being made to obtain the release by coast strikers of one or more merchant ships for emergency service to the islands.

International complications developed, however, with the refusal of French stevedores to unload American vessels. R. J. Baker, president of the American Steamship Owners Association, said this might cause a stoppage of commerce between France and the United States. He urged French operators to act against the boycott.

Joseph P. Ryan, head of the International Longshoremen's Association, threatened to boycott French vessels when he learned that striking American sailors had volunteered to fill the places of stevedores on the French liner Champlain.

D.H.Delano, Cousin Of Roosevelt, Dies

Orting, Wash., Nov. 27 (A.P.).—Daniel H. Delano, 94, fourth cousin of President Roosevelt, died at his home here today. He had been ill a month.

A life-long Republican, Delano intended, however, to vote for "Cousin Frank" and fretted November 3 because he was too ill to go to the polls. He sent his 88-year-old wife to vote for Roosevelt.

"We have to keep things in the family if we can," he said.

Green Named A. F. L. Chief For 13th Term

New Call Is Issued for Return of Insurgent Units to Fold.

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 27.—The American Federation of Labor re-electing William Green president for his thirteenth term, urged today legislation for a 30-hour week and referred to its executive council demands for indorsement of a constitutional amendment.

These important subjects disposed, of, the federation adjourned its fifty-sixth convention, marked by efforts to bring peace with a faction of ten rebel unions headed by John L. Lewis.

The federation voted to hold its 1937 convention in Denver, Colo., the date to be selected later.

For the first time in 12 years, Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, did not nominate Green, who is a member of the miners' union.

Meanwhile, associates of Lewis in his Committee for Industrial Organization, said at Pittsburgh they had filed charges of unfair labor practices against steel companies whose employes the C. I. O. is attempting to organize. Philip Murray, chairman of the organizing committee, and Michael F. Tighe, head of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, suspended by the federation, filed the charges against United States and Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporations.

Interference Charged.

They said the steel concerns had "interfered with and coerced" employes to prevent them from joining labor organizations; had "dominated and interfered with" administration of the "employe representation" plan in their plants, and had contributed financial support to the Labor Names Barber For Coronation Rites

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 27 (A.P.).—W. D. Mahon, president of the Street Railway Employes, told the American Federation of Labor convention today it would be a good idea to have an American barber in England before King Edward's coronation.

Proposing William C. Birthright, secretary of the Barbers' Union, as delegate to the British Trades Union Congress, Mahon said:

"Since Britain is soon to have an American Queen, it is necessary to array the next Queen as a true representative of the American people.

"He (Birthright) has all the arts necessary to prepare the coming Queen for her high station."

Roosevelt Pledges U.S. To Resist Aggression; Rejects a New League

Leave by Plane for Peace Parley

Nine prominent American women, interested in the abolition of war, left here yesterday to fly to Buenos Aires for the Peace Conference. There they will present the People's Mandate to End War. Among them were these seven, caught by the camera as the plane was about to take off. They are, left to right, Mrs. Eve Garette, of New York; Mrs. P. J. Simmon, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. Cecil Ira McReynolds, of Washington; Mrs. Albert Lytle Deane, of White Plains, N. Y., Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York; Miss Mabel Vernon, of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. Lionel Sutro, of New York. Twelve-year old Janet Clapper is presenting them with flowers from Mrs. Roosevelt.

All American Conflict Is Capable of Peaceful Solution, He Says.

Monroe Doctrine Cited by Brazilian

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 27.—President Roosevelt, welcomed tumultuously by thousands of Brazilians as the highest emissary of peace from their sister continent, today pledged the United States against any invasion of the "New World."

He departed tonight for Buenos Aires to open the Inter-American Peace Conference. It was estimated 300,000 persons had cheered him on his drive through the city.

At a press conference, President Roosevelt declared the question of organization of an American league of nations would not come up at the Buenos Aires parley.

His remark went unexplained, but in diplomatic circles it was interpreted as a crushing blow to the slowly weakening idea suggested by several countries, which proposed the American League of Nations should complement the Geneva body. Besides the United States, other large American nations were known to have opposed it.

Speaking before a joint session of the Brazilian Congress after an official automobile cavalcade had borne him through wildly cheering crowds, the President of the United States declared:

"We cannot countenance aggression from wherever it may come.

"It is unthinkable to me that in this time of world-wide apprehension we should fail to seize the opportunity to meet what is a heavy responsibility.

Arbitration Urged.

"There is no American conflict that cannot be settled by orderly and peaceful means.

"This is no time to hesitate; we must be guided by a serene and generous view of our common needs."

President Roosevelt's address, delivered from the tribune of the chamber meeting, followed tremendous ovations which started when he debarked from the cruiser Indianapolis in Rio Harbor, and lasted all along the route to the congressional building.

The tumultuous reception and farewell was contrary to custom, for Brazilians, as a rule, do not cheer. A tremendous crowd packed Maua Square at the foot of Avenida Rio Branco and snarled traffic for 20 blocks as Mr. Roosevelt, in full dress tonight, went aboard the ship. A few moments later he papeared on the forecastle, waving a Panama hat to the acclaiming throng.

Children Sing Anthem.

Huge electrical displays were staged for the President's departure from Rio after a banquet given in his honor by President Vargas.

U. S. Constitution, High Court Ridiculed at Soviet Congress

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 27.—One of the highest Soviet prosecutors today attacked the United States Supreme Court, the American Democracy and Constitution, before the all Union Congress of Soviets called to promulgate the new Russian constitution by Joseph Stalin.

The verbal attacks on American legislative procedure came after the congress received reports of a new border incident in the Far East, made public while 1,000 picked Russian soldiers paraded in the Kremlin, where speakers denounced enemies of the Soviet.

At the session completion of steel laying on the most important military railroad in the world—the Soviet Great Northern to the Pacific—was announced. G. M. Krutoff, premier of the Far Eastern area of the Soviet Union, disclosed the first supply train reached Komsomolsk yesterday from Moscow. The railway, a keystone of Soviet defense against any Japanese attack, parallels the Trans-Siberian Railway.

Krutoff declared the Soviet Far

Officials Lured To Philadelphia's Football Classic

By Sidney Olson.

Quite unofficially, the seat of Government was moved to Philadelphia last night, leaving but a hollow shell of officialdom behind.

With the annual service game, Army versus Navy, proving as usual to be an attraction superior to that of administering the Government, the big shots and the little shots and even quite a few of the undershots began yesterday to make the trek to the Municipal Stadium in the City of Brotherly Love.

Most Cabinet members are staying in Washington Saturday, a hasty check showed, but telephone calls to many administrators' offices averaged about the following result:

Q. "Is Administrator Pfumpf there?"

A. "No—er—he's out of town."

Q. "Where is he?"

Seek Army Money.

A. "Well—I don't know—I mean, I couldn't say, offhand . . . Do you know where I can lay five frogskins on Navy to win?"

Philadelphia was the Capital of the United Colonies of North America in 1781. Then it was the Capital of the United States from 1781 to 1800, the last ten years under the Constitution.

That year the founding fathers moved the Capital to Washington, and every year the citizens move the Capital back to Philadelphia when the Army-Navy game is played there.

Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, of the WPA, is combining business with pleasure today by dedicating the new State University stadium at Baton Rouge between halves of the Louisiana State-Tulane game.

Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes will work; so will Acting Secretary of State R. Walton Moore; so will Attorney General Homer S. Cummings; so will Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

2 Convicts Killed Attempting Break

McAlester, Okla., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Two young convicts at the State penitentiary were killed today when guards halted their escape attempt with bullets.

The convicts, Harlan Wells, 22, and Roy Glasby, 24, turned on Guard Rich Owens unexpectedly as he was watching a group of 90 convicts working outside the prison walls.

Wells smashed Owens to the ground with a hatchet blow on the head. Glasby slashed the guard with a knife. The convicts then tied the unconscious but not seriously injured guard with wire and dragged him along with them as a shield.

As they moved threateningly upon another guard, guards from all over the prison began sniping at them. Both men were hit, Wells dying immediately. Glasby succumbed several hours later.

Roosevelt, Jr., Treated.

Boston, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—Massachusetts General Hospital reported tonight Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., spent "a fairly comfortable day" under observation for a sinus infection.

Only Giant Panda In Captivity Held In China for Tax

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Nov. 28.—Chinese maritime customs officials today seized the only giant panda in captivity as Mrs. Ruth Harkness was about to embark with it for New York.

Officials said no export tax had been paid on the animal. Mrs. Harkness, who captured the panda in Szechuan Province, near Tibet, missed the boat on which she was to have sailed for Vancouver at midnight.

Fearful the bushy-tailed bear, which lives only at high altitudes, might die of neglect, Mrs. Harkness remained in the customs house until dawn, feeding the cub from a baby's bottle.

She hopes to sell the panda in the United States for $10,000 or perhaps $15,000. She refused an offer of $2,000 cabled from New York.

2 Sailors Injured As Skylight Falls In Ice Cream Shop

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 27.—Two members of the crew of the United States cruiser Chester were injured today when a skylight fell on them while they were sipping soft drinks in an ice cream store.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Race track racketeers have tricked thousands of race fans out of a run for their money by sponging horses at Bowie—the fourth being Chatmoss which ran last in a Thanksgiving Day feature event.

Bowie's fourth sponging case within a week was revealed yesterday after Dr. Henry J. McCarthy, Maryland Racing Commission veterinarian, was called upon to examine Chatmoss, which had been a 5-to-1 choice in the four-horse field.

Track stewards had detected no signs of lameness in the horse, and already panicky at the epidemic of sponging, called for the veterinarian. Using special implements, he extracted a sponge from the horse's nostrils, and thus was recorded the latest incident in the long and black history of race-track sponging.

The "fixers" had done their work well. Chatmoss was second to the leader during the first quarter mile. At the half-mile post in the mile and one-half race, he had faded to third. At the three-quarter pole the 7-year-old, fighting hopelessly against the obstruction to his breathing, was a hopeless last. At the finish, Chatmoss staggered across the wire, 30 lengths behind the leader.

Bowie officials last night explained the sponging of Chatmoss had been perpetrated several days ago, before posting of armed guards at the stables, an action taken when Moon Side, favorite in last Saturday's handicap, was tampered with by "fixers." Moon Side, however, won his race.

Vigilance of Bowie officials was increased earlier in the week, when Troubador, a 2-year-old filly, also was found to be a victim of spongers. Their alarm was limitless on Thursday, when Aneroid, the prerace favorite in the Thanksgiving Day Handicap, coughed up a sponge before the

Hellen, Premier Boulevardier, Dies Still Champion of Leisure

The gay, erect figure of George Hellen, 74-year-old sportsman and bon vivant, has been removed by death from the boulevards and circles he loved to stroll, cane in hand and favorite dog on leash.

Hellen, throughout his life a model of fashion and a champion of leisure, died yesterday afternoon in his small, fashionable apartment at 3000 Connecticut avenue, where he had lain ill for almost a week.

Illness was alien to George Hellen, and his friends believe that when he died he still was vaguely conscious of that portrait of him in his youth, which hung in the hallway and never was allowed to become dusty.

For the George Hellen in the portrait, painted by an artist crony of his decades ago, was a young and spirited fellow, ready to ride with the hounds after the fox down in Virginia. And the George Hellen in the portrait wore a scarlet riding coat and a shiny top hat, and toyed with a riding crop which reached trapped in basements during the last three weeks of siege. Others were crushed to death by falling debris and the tunnels were designed to guard against this.

Lack of food was becoming more acute and most of the city was on a vegetarian diet. Pigs were reported fairly plentiful, but fish were not. Some residents ate fish taken from ornamental ponds.

Skirmishing in Suburb.

Light skirmishes marked the battle in University City, northwestern Madrid suburb, but neither Fascist nor Socialist troops made apparent advances.

Americans still living within the United States embassy organized on a communal basis, chipped in funds for housekeeping, and planned for some sort of amusement program to relieve the strain. The embassy was closed officially yesterday with departure of its staff and 76 Americans for Valencia. Those remaining do so at their own risk. They were much relieved today that Spanish government guards continued at their posts about the building.

(A delayed dispatch from the Fascist front outside Madrid reported capture of five young girls who entered the insurgent camp by mistake while en route to meet food trucks en route from Valencia. Fascist commanders indicated they hoped to starve the capital into submission rather than overcome the Madrid defenders by continued offensive.)

League Action Asked.

Geneva, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Spanish Socialist government asked the League of Nations today to deal with the menace to "peace and good will among nations" allegedly created by Italo-German recognition of Fascist insurgents.

Premier Francisco Largo Caballero, of the Socialist cabinet, appealed to the League Council to convene in special session to determine officially whether international peace was menaced—acting under Article 11 of the League Covenant. This article may be invoked to deal with "any war or threat of war."

The Socialist government charged armed intervention by Germany and Italy in favor of the Spanish insurgents was followed by recognition, "virtually an act of aggression against the Spanish republic."

Germany, out of the League, vannot answer in person any charges which Spanish Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo is expected to make before the Council, observers pointed out.

Doubt Italy Will Attend.

Italy has boycotted the League since seating of the Ethiopian delegation at the last assembly and League circles believed she would not be represented at any council session to consider the civil war—because it would be addressed by representatives of the Spanish Socialist government which Italy contends no longer exists so far as it concerned.

(The Spanish government declared last week recognition of the Fascist beslegers of Madrid by Italy and Germany was in effect a declaration of war against the Spanish republic.)

The note was dispatched from Valencia, present seat of the Socialist government and its text was to be published here later. The League Council was expected to call a meeting next week to consider the appeal.

Menace to Peace Charged.

Recognition of the Fascist junta constituted a situation "affecting international relations and menacing peace and good will among nations," the Valencia communication charged.

Under Article 11 the League is authorized to take "any action that may be deemed wise and effectual to safeguard the peace of the nations."

The secretary general must summon the Council in the event of emergency at the request of any League member which has "the friendly right" to bring up:

"Any circumstance whatever affecting international relations which threatens to disturb international peace of the good understanding between nations, on which peace depends."

Paris Fearful at Move.

Paris, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Spanish Socialist government's appeal to the League of Nations because of Italo-German recognition of Fascist insurgents is "a frightful development," sources close to the government said tonight.

Foreign office spokesmen admitted officials were worried and view the move as endangering France's desire to keep the Spanish civil war in Spain.

"This makes it an affair in which all Europe will be involved," one official said.

Raleigh Ready to Start.

Valencia, Spain, Nov. 27 (AP).—The United States warship Raleigh was to weigh anchor tonight for Barcelona en route to France with American refugees quitting the war zones.

Italy, Japan in Parleys.

Rome, Nov. 27 (AP).—A treaty between Italy and Japan providing for reciprocal recognition of Manchukuo and Ethiopia is under way, a well informed source said tonight.

The treaty, containing the recognition clauses, would be mainly a commercial accord between the two nations, this source said, emphasizing negotiations were begun before the German-Japanese alliance against communism was announced.

American Business World Executing an About Face After Roosevelt Victory.

By Franklyn Waltman

WHEN the country recovered from its shocked gasping over President Roosevelt's tremendous landslide victory, voices seemed to unite in one refrain: "Will the President now turn to the right or to the left?" Mr. Roosevelt has contended that such a question represents a sophomoric approach to governmental policy—high school sophomoric, at that.

WALTMAN.

And so it does. But that is not the point here. While the journalists and some business spokesmen asked each other about this right-and-left business, some of the older heads among the "economic royalists" in business and finance apparently did some thinking—some quick thinking in some instances.

None asked "will business and finance now turn to the right or to the left?" But that, as recent events have shown, really was the pertinent question of the hour. All the turning done in the last three weeks has been done by the critics of the New Deal. President Roosevelt, like the Mississippi, "don't say nuffin—he must know sump'n" and he went rolling down to Rio.

Meanwhile, the country has been witnessing the first evidences of the anxiety of the "economic royalists" and the Roosevelt critics to climb aboard the bandwagon. One of the du Pont clan, with a trace at least of pride, has announced the engagement of his daughter to Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.

William Randolph Hearst, preferring several months ago to let his Seattle newspaper close up shop rather than agree to the demands of the Newspaper Guild, overnight capitulates completely to the Guild and then announces the selection of the President's son-in-law as the publisher of that newspaper. The election apparently made it clear to Mr. Hearst that there was something about these Roosevelts he had not seen before, that they are really nice people!

The American Molasses Co., with offices in Wall Street, does not believe that Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell is so impractical and theoretical after all and hires him away from the New Deal to be its executive vice president. Several New Deal lawyers here, incidentally, have suddenly found knocking at their doors prospective clients with Wall Street—or at least New York—addresses.

With the blessings of John D. Rockefeller, jr., on his hairless head, Smiling Jim Farley—the greatest prophet of them all—will be back from Ireland next week to look over offers for his services after the first of the year. Rubber Tycoon Litchfield, finds virtues in the social security program and hurries to tell the country about them, as if none previously had found them. Chase National Bank's Aldrich—brother-in-law of Jim Farley's new patron—commences to talk like a New Dealer instead of a hard-boiled banker.

But that is not all the turning we have had recently. The National Retail Dry Goods Association, representing some 6,000 merchants who come in direct contact with the consuming public, has broken away from the rigidly conservative United States Chamber of Commerce and proposes to set up among its members voluntarily a baby NRA along State lines. Merchants who meet the public every day hear the people's voice more distinctly than do manufacturers back in their factories.

And into that holy of holies, where the ordinary sounds of life are not supposed to reach, the Supreme Court, apparently has come a new beam of light, judging from the tribunal's action in upholding the validity of the New York unemployment tax law. Looks like Mr. Dooley was a pretty smart fellow, after all.

* * *

It is all very funny—has made the weeks since the election very gay indeed. But there is more than humor in this scene. It is evidence of the seaworthiness, the strength and virility of American democracy. What has happened since the election demonstrates that when a majority in this country speaks clearly, the minority is willing to abide by the results.

More than that—the enlightened among the minority are willing to admit errors and the necessity for a reorientation of viewpoint and a re-examination of principles regarded as fundamental. Such is the stuff that has made America great—and will keep it great.

And President Roosevelt "don't say nuffing." If this parade to his band wagon keeps up, perhaps by the time he gets back from Rio and Buenos Aires, he will have to break his silence by defending himself against charges that he has become too conservative.

Soviet Congress Hears Assault On U. S. System

Vishinsky Assails Constitution, Supreme Court; 2 Skirmishes Reported.

East was "ready for defense," and sounded a stern warning to Japan.

A. J. Vishinsky, noted prosecutor who handled the case against the executed counter-revolutionaries Zinoviev and Kameneff, praised the Soviet judicial system and comparing it with the United States procedure, said:

"Our judicial system is the backbone of democracy. In the United States, the Supreme Court appointed by the President is called upon to cover up the reactionary actions of the ruling minority.

Quotes Jefferson.

"It was well described by Jefferson who said 'the Supreme Court is the hawk which soars over Congress to keep the chickenyard in order.'

"In all bourgeois countries the courts protect the moneybags and the judges are usually rich politicians.

"The Soviet constitution is the only true constitution in the world. The basis of bourgeois constitutions is the private property exploitation of man by man."

Vishinsky went on to similar criticism of Japanese, German, Italian and Polish constitutions.

The prosecutor's indictments of "capitalistic countries" was about the only act of the day's congress not concerned with the Far Eastern situation.

It was reported Russian and Japanese Manchurian border patrols clashed in an hour-long battle in the second frontier incident charged by Russia in three days.

Two Clashes Reported.

Reports reaching Moscow from Khabarovsk said three Japanese soldiers entered Russian territory Thursday and were fired on by Russian soldiers who killed one Japanese.

Later, these reports said, a detachment of 50 Japanese-Manchurian soldiers crossed the frontier and battled a Russian border patrol for one hour with many killed on both sides.

Grenades and machine guns were brought into play, it was reported, before the Japanese-Manchurians finally were driven back across the frontier.

Shichi Sakoh, Japanese Charge d'Affaires at Moscow, calling upon Benedict Kozlovsky, Russian undersecretary for foreign affairs, to protest a similar incident of November 24, was met by a rejection and a new Russian protest against Thursday's incident.

The importance the Soviets attach to their Far Eastern frontiers was demonstrated plainly at the congress when Gen. Vassily Bleucher, Far Eastern commander, was given a ten-minute ovation as he appeared on the stand.

Numerous speakers repeatedly referred to Russia's readiness to repulse any invader in the Far East and her determination "not to surrender 1 inch of territory."

First Train Through.

Informed observers found great significance in the announcement that the first train had got through to Komsomolsk on the Soviet Great Northern Railway to the Pacific, paralleling the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

It was announced that the steel-laying had been completed, but it was not made clear whether the steel into Komsomolsk was that of the new railroad or a spur from the Trans-Siberian.

At any rate, it meant the Soviets were nearing completion of the new road, and now can speed up construction from both termini. Indications were the railroad will be ready for heavy traffic in 1937.

The first stage of the congress, consisting of speeches approving the new constitution, was expected to wind up tomorrow or Sunday. A few days later the congress is to reassemble to promulgate the new charter.

Soviets Complete Military Railroad

Announcement was made at the All-Union Congress of Soviets of completion of steel laying of the most important military railroad in the world, the Soviet Great Northern line from Taishet to Komsomolsk, paralleling the Trans-Siberian Railway.

below the tops of his brilliantly polished boots.

Saw No Reason to Work.

Known and loved by several generations of Washingtonians for his keen wit and kindliness, Hellen, wealthy in his own name, saw no necessity for working. His world was a plum pudding which needed no baking. He devoured it like an epicure.

His one adventure into the workaday world occurred about 20 years ago, when his friendship with newspapermen led him to an unneeded job in the city room of The Washington Post.

Here he found a new and fascinating empire. There were typewriters and telegraph instruments, linking such remote spots as Bangkok and Nome, cities with unpronounceable names on the Siberian steppes with Paris and London, New York and Washington.

For a number of years thereafter Hellen, at his first and only job, lived in a smoke-clouded atmosphere. He was "one of the boys," to be sure, but they always addressed him as "Mr. Hellen," and he always beamed and liked the formality.

He remained dapper even in the news shop. He never removed his coat. To the office he carried his cane. His linen always was spotless. His spats were immaculate. His gray hair was brushed at his temples. He changed his attire twice a day, even while working.

Hated to See Him Go.

Several years ago Hellen retired once more to the avenues and the boulevards. The men with whom he had worked hated to see him go. He had been most considerate, especially when they needed to borrow money.

"Certainly," he would say, and then he would smile and accommodate them. When his work was done, he would take down his cane, don his hat, and stroll elegantly out onto E street, bowing first and saying, to editor and copy boy alike:

"Good day, gentlemen."

"I've found the business fascinating. It's interesting as anything I've ever done," he often told his cousin, Miss Georgiana Todd, who survives him.

When Hellen said this, there could be no sincerer compliment.

At one time master of the hounds at the old Washington Hunter Club, a splendid rider, a dog fancier, he had tasted most of the pleasant things in life.

Inherited Fortune.

He inherited a comfortable fortune from his father, Clifton Hellen. So he knew what it was to spend months in Paris with money in his pockets to bet on the races at Longchamps. He knew the reflective pleasure of sipping champagne at Cafe de la Paix.

Often he packed up his belongings and left Washington for Aiken, S. C., for the hunting season. He was almost as familiar a figure to society at Newport, R. I., as he was here.

Hellen was born in Washington in 1862 while his father was serving aboard a man-of-war in the Federal Navy. He grew up in the gaslit era. His education was by private tutors. Miss Todd last night recalled him as a cousin, somewhat older, who was "like a big brother."

"He always was particular about his clothes. He always was neat and careful and had excellent taste," she said.

Until the last week of his life, Hellen remained a sartorially perfect person. He was more than six feet tall, and moved with impressive dignity, always swinging his cane.

"He never resented growing old," recalled Miss Todd. "He had a young heart."

Surviving Hellen are Miss Todd, a nephew, Arthur Heller, and two nieces, Mrs. Thomas Bowers, of New York, and Mrs. Walter Garisch, of Concord, Mass.

Burial will be private.

Ethiopian 'Capital' Taken by Italians

Rome, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Italian government officially announced today that Gore, "Ethiopia's second capital," had fallen to an Italian flying column.

The official communique said that the Italians found Ras Immeru and his followers "prisoners of the tribesmen of the region who were supposed to support Haile Selassie's so-called provisional government," which was centered at Gore.

Gore, Ethiopian delegates declared at Geneva, was the seat of the Ethiopian government following Emperor Haile Selassie's flight and the fall of Addis Ababa.

Today's occupation gave the Italians possession of a vast, rich zone. Gore is the capital of the province of Ilu Babor.

Roofer Badly Injured In Plunge of 65 Feet

Elmer Johnson, 18, a roofer of 1108 Wilkes avenue, Alexandria, Va., was injured critically yesterday when he fell 65 feet from a scaffold of the Seventh Day Adventist General Conference Building, 6840 Eastern avenue, Takoma Park, D. C.

He was treated at the Washington Sanitarium for internal injuries, compound fracture of the right leg and fractures of both arms.

Alberta Scrip Validity Case Is Nearing Trial

Edmonton, Nov. 27 (Canadian Press).—A court case to test validity of Alberta stamped scrip and the power of Edmonton to accept it moved today a step closer to trial. All legal requirements were settled except the trial date.

Britain Frowns On Reich-Tokyo Anti-Red Pact

But London Is Opposed to Study by League of Spanish Situation.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 27.—Britain looked with cold suspicion today upon the German-Japanese anti-Communist pact, renewed her pledge to protect little Belgium, and in emergency cabinet session reviewed the danger to European peace presented by international tangles of Spain's civil war.

Success of the British ban on arms shipments by ships of the empire will determine whether the present non-intervention policy will be changed, close observers predicted.

Britain was represented as opposed to the Spanish demand made today for a meeting of the League of Nations Council to consider the civil war situation.

Committee's Work Cited.

The council could accomplish only a reaffirmation of the principle of non-intervention, a high government source said, and the European neutrality committee already is trying to enforce this principle.

The nonintervention sub-committee recommended today that the full committee meet December 2 to decide whether to adopt some regulation of arms transportation to Spain.

A program of regulation for everything except airplane exports has been ready for some weeks. It was recommended sea and land supervision be begun immediately, but Germany, Italy and Portugal objected. The full committee session was suggested by Britain and France to decide the question.

Arms Aid Possible.

The possibility Italy, having recognized with Germany the Fascist junta, might see fit to send arms openly to Franco was another matter. Such aid "obviously" would destroy Italian hopes of a Mediterranean accord with Britain, authoritative sources said.

An "overture" toward lining up Great Britain with Germany and Japan in the pact against communism, completed this week, met cool and quick rejection, informed circles revealed.

'Marian's Lamb' Comes to Market, Bears Own Photo

Omaha, Nebr., Nov. 27 (AP).—Marian's little lamb came to market today with a note reading "This is Billy; take good care of him" around his neck. The note was on the reverse side of a picture of Marian and Billy. Marian Leaders, 4½, of Mineola, Iowa, sent the note.

Last spring the girl's father gave Billy, an orphan, to Marian, who raised the lamb on a bottle. When the time came for Billy to leave the farm for the market, Marian insisted the picture be attached to a cord around the lamb's neck, and that Mrs. Leaders print the note on the reverse side of the picture.

Steel Plant Is Closed Over Sit-Down Strike

Detroit, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Midland Steel Products Co. announced it was closing its plant today because of a "sit-down" strike of 1,100 workers on the day shift. Some 800 workers were informed of the shutdown when they reported for work.

Gordon Stoner, general manager, said the local union of the United Automobile Workers of America called the strike. The plant fabricates and produces automobile parts and steel body frames.

Stoner added the strike interrupted negotiations over wages, hours and union recognition.

David Shelton Kennedy, N. Y. Publisher, Is Dead

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—David Shelton Kennedy, publisher and advertising executive, died today at his Long Island home. He was 44.

He formerly was marine editor of the New York Herald Tribune and was secretary and treasurer of Shipping Digest at his death. In 1928 he helped form the Kennedy Co. to handle travel and resort advertising. He was a United States Army flier in France in the World War.

Chicago Stock Show Entries Set a Record

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—Record entries in the International Live Stock Exposition were declared tonight by show officials to be representative of agricultural recovery.

A total of 14,653 head was entered, B. H. Heide, manager, said.

The kings and queens of the farm animal kingdom, sleek and shiny from hundreds of groomings, filled the huge amphitheater in the stockyards district to capacity tonight. Tomorrow doors of the building will be opened for the eight-day exposition.

Norway Bans All Arms Shipments to Spain

Oslo, Hungary, Nov. 27 (AP).—The Norwegian government today prohibited Norwegian ships from carrying munitions, arms or airplanes to Spain or any territory belonging to Spain. Norway yesterday charged two Norwegian vessels had been seized and their cargoes confiscated by Spanish insurgents.

The government instructed its minister to Lisbon, Portugal, to protest the incidents to the Fascist commander, Gen. Francisco Franco.

Peace Pledged To 'New World' By Roosevelt

as he sailed out of the harbor on the Indianapolis.

The President, speaking of the Inter-American Peace Conference which he will attend in Buenos Aires December 1, declared:

"World horizons may be dark, but the time is auspicious for our task in America. The rest of the world presents a grim picture of armed camps and threats of conflict.

"But in our own continent the armed clashes which in recent years have divided American countries have been happily brought to an end.

Confident of Future.

"I think I can say that, in generations to come, democratic government throughout the Americas will prove its complete ability to raise the standards of life for those millions who cry for an opportunity today.

"The motto of peace is: 'Let the strong help the weak to survive.'"

Roosevelt's address followed a speech of welcome in the chamber by Roaul Fernandez, diplomat and former majority floor leader, who declared the American President "admitted he brought about a revolution, but was proud it had been a peaceful one.

"The Monroe Doctrine must be recognized as a permanent force for peace on the American continent," he said.

At a "stag" dinner given by the foreign ministry in the evening, President Getulio Vargas of Brazil praised the United States Chief Executive as "a man of thought and of action, a sower of ideas, a social reformer and a generous idealist."

He gave assurance that the Brazilian government and people would support President Roosevelt's effort for lasting peace in North and South America.

Blue-beamed reflectors played on the Indianapolis as it sailed out of the harbor followed by its companion cruiser, the Chester. Rio de Janeiro glittered with lights. Fireworks exploded and Roman candles traced paths in the sky over Corvea Hill.

In his farewell remarks at the dinner tonight President Roosevelt expressed hope "that in the not too distant future we in Washington will be able to welcome President Vargas as our visitor in the United States."

Jose Carlos Macedo Soares, Brazilian foreign minister, said privately later the statement could be interpreted as an invitation to the Brazilian President to visit the United States.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said he had informally suggested President Vargas make such a trip.

Cheered Wildly.

Following his arrival this morning the North American Chief Executive, smiling broadly and bobbing his head right and left in greeting, was cheered wildly by the crowds.

Dressed in a white business suit, Mr. Roosevelt waved his soft gray felt hat repeatedly in acknowledgment of the ovation of crowds which lined the route of his automobile procession to the Congress building and to the official residence turned over to the President during his stay in Rio.

Thousands sprinkled white and red roses in the path of the procession.

The usually punctual President Vargas arrived some 40 minutes after the Indianapolis was made fast to the pier, but laughingly explained he really was 20 minutes early for the scheduled 10 a. m. arrival of Mr. Roosevelt, because the ship put into the harbor ahead of time.

Ambassador Gibson Present.

Other members of the welcoming committee for Mr. Roosevelt included Hugh S. Gibson, Oswaldo Aranha, Brazilian Ambassador to Washington; Gen. Rodney H. Smith, chief of the United States Coast Artillery Mission at Rio, and Capt. C. C. Gill, chief of the United States Naval Mission.

While the Indianapolis was sliding slowly toward the pier the school children sang "The Star-Spangled Banner." After disembarking, Mr. Roosevelt stood with head bared during singing of the Brazilian national anthem.

Music from military bands was everywhere throughout the route of the official cavalcade.

Those who saw the embrace between Mr. Roosevelt and Senor Vargas noticed the tall North American President, 6 feet 3 inches tall, had to bow low to greet the Brazilian President, who just tops 5 feet 4 inches in height.

Marines Flank Route.

With Senor Vargas personally acting as Mr. Roosevelt's escort, the United States Executive drove up the Avenida Rio Branco, the city's main thoroughfare, while thousands leaned and waved from office building windows.

Scarlet-uniformed marines, with russet leggings and white breeches, flanked the route.

At the foot of the avenue, the entourage turned and followed to Beiramar drive along the ocean and seawall. Reaching Botafogo Beach, the cars turned into the grounds of the Carlos Guinle estate.

Street Scene in the 1936 Manner

At Independence avenue and First street southwest. Police gave this version: Automobiles of Egbert H. Everett, of 1918 Benning road, and Annie Thomas, of 120 Fourth street southeast, collided. William C. James had just obeyed a stop sign when Everett's car flopped over onto his. No one was hurt.

Young Wife Asks Liberty for Mate Who Shot at Her

A young bride who missed death by a hair in her first quarrel with her husband after vainly pleading with police yesterday to release him was searching for a defense attorney.

"I love him and I hope I can get him off on probation when he is brought to court," sobbed Mrs. Ruby King, whose hair was clipped by a bullet fired through a locked door Thursday by her husband, Carl, 23, while police were attempting to arrest him.

"We have only been married since June, and this is the first time he ever has been cross with me," she explained.

Policemen R. R. Maust and R. D. Edwards were summoned to the King home by a roomer after Mrs. King fled from her room and collapsed. Mrs. King revived when the officers arrived and was pleading with them when her husband called through the locked door:

"Look out or I'll shoot."

One of the policemen shoved Mrs. King just as a bullet crashed through the door and clipped off a lock of her hair. The husband fired two other shots, the policemen said, before they kicked in the door and overpowered him.

King is being held for investigation.

Mother Slays Herself, 2 Children in Boston

Boston, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Returning home from work tonight, Richard Mahas, 40, found the bodies of his wife and two small children sprawled on a bed and five gas jets open.

Police said it was a case of double-murder-suicide.

The mother, Clarabell, 26, and the children, Mary, 2, and Donald, 8 months, had been dead more than six hours when their bodies were found, according to medical authorities.

Mexico Army Maps Future War Plans

Mexico City, Nov. 27 (A.P.).—Mexico's army leaders let it be known today they have given thought to the possibility of war with a foreign power and are planning a small but highly efficient army.

Italy's conquest of Ethiopia was cited as warning Mexico might some day have to fight an invading army in a survey of armament organization by Captains Rogelio Guedea Romo and Alfonso Carrasco, of the commission of military studies.

Clearinghouse For Dying U. S. Units Proposed

lace could dovetail RA activities into departmental operations as he chose, and the functions could be financed after the current fiscal year under regular Agriculture Department appropriations.

The Resettlement Administration has funds probably sufficient to carry it through June 30, when its present extension expires.

Perkins Appointed.

At least one important resettlement operation may not be transferred to Secretary Wallace's domain, although Wallace himself will be final judge. That unit is the Suburban Resettlement division, now building a series of model towns at Beltsville, Md., Cincinnati, and Milwaukee. It has little in common with agriculture. One proposal is to place Suburban Resettlement in a projected new housing set-up to carry forward work of FHA, HOLC and the PWA housing division.

As the transfer date neared, Dr. Tugwell yesterday appointed Milo R. Perkins, assistant to Secretary Wallace, as assistant Resettlement administrator. Perkins on December 1 will take over the duties of Judge Joseph L. Dailey, retiring, and will be directly in charge of rural rehabilitation work.

Although Resettlement, WPA and some functions of PWA appear due for permanence, all alphabetical units expiring in the next year are not, and it is to cope with the problem of their slow death that a Federal liquidation agency has been proposed. It is known some members of the Senate reorganization committee favor the scheme, but whether it will be included in the committee's pending report, or advanced as an independent legislative proposal, could not be determined.

Of the three organization committees now functioning, only one, the President's Committee on Administrative Management, is likely to present a report in anything like final form. Both Senate and House committees are expected to offer "progress" reports at the outset of the session. Both will seek funds for extended studies, and the House committee, its five members cut down to three in the last election, will ask an extension of authority and new blood.

Hearings Likely.

Hearings probably will be held by both groups, with a report of the Brookings Institution as a base, shortly after Congress gets under way.

All three now are working together co-operatively. The President himself ultimately may lead these efforts. A persistently gradual approach, rather than a mass spurt attack on the problem, is planned.

Among agencies slated for liquidation, unless Congress extends their inspiring authority, are the Electric Home and Farm Authority, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation, the Export-Import Bank of Washington and the National Resources Board.

Lending functions of R. F. C. will cease January 31, unless extended, and HOLC lending operations already have terminated. But both of the latter have an allotted term of years to bring their collection activities to a close.

Police Judges Commit Selves To Workhouse

First Inspection Trip by Four Jurists Reveals Overcrowding

All four members of the District Police Court bench sentenced themselves yesterday to Occoquan to see what happens to the men and women they send there for drunkenness, simple assault, traffic violations, etc.

Executing sentence immediately, they drove down to the institution in nearby Virginia and came away deeply impressed by conditions of overcrowding, mingling of first offenders with callous recidivists and the inadequate housing of women inmates.

For months Judges John P. McMahon, Isaac R. Hitt, Walter J. Casey and Edward M. Curran had read of and been told about congestion in the workhouse, the jail and the Lorton Reformatory.

First Visit for Jurists.

Yesterday, for the first time, the judges saw at first hand how the sentences they hand down are carried out. None of them had ever visited the workhouse before.

Conducted by Capt. M. M. Barnard, general superintendent of penal institutions, and Arthur L. Petitt, workhouse superintendent, the quartet viewed overcrowded dormitories, watched 700 prisoners sail into a luncheon of turkey stew, walked through the antiquated frame buildings that house the 96 women and inspected "bad actors" in isolation cells.

They observed conditions under which as many as 1,320 inmates are obliged to sleep, work and have recreation in quarters whose proper capacity is 800.

Even Prod Cots.

They prodded dormitory cots to test their softness, spoke to a 23-year-old Washingtonian who tried to escape the day he began serving 90 days for first offense drunkenness and saw chronic lawbreakers mingling with callow youths "down the river" for the first time, all the while pumping Barnard and Petitt with questions.

Judges Curran and Casey were interested particularly in the young prisoner up for intoxication. He has been in an isolation cell since arriving a month ago because he tried to run away.

"Why did you try to get away?" asked Judge Casey.

"Because the dormitory was too crowded," came the reply. "There's a bed for each but man they are so close together the men have to sleep right next to one another."

"Who sentenced you?"

"Judge Mattenger," replied the rebellious prisoner. When Capt. Barnard asked him if he meant Mattingly, he answered that he did. Judge Mattingly of Municipal Court serves occasionally on the police bench.

The eight dormitories have 140 to 160 cots each. Some of the wings are so crowded that to get into bed the men must climb over the footposts.

Judge Hitt plied Mrs. L. E. Holland, head matron, with questions in the women's section. He wanted to know how the inmates in her care pass the time, why they are there and whether they are healthy.

About 40 are employed in the laundry, 30 in the sewing room and the remainder do domestic work, Mrs. Holland said. Drunkenness and prostitution account for a large percentage of the cases, Judge Hitt was told.

"I am strongly in favor of severe sentences for habitual drunkards," Capt. Barnard informed the judges, "but the present system of handling them is all wrong. Instead of being sent here to stay 30 or 60 days, only to come back a few days after their release, they should be placed on an inebriates' farm where they can receive special attention.

Legislation Fails.

Establishment of such a farm, as well as a separate institution for first offenders, was advocated at the last session of Congress, but the necesary legislation was not introduced.

James A. Nolan, chairman of the corrections committee of the Council of Social Agencies, invited the judges to make yesterday's trip and took them to the workhouse.

Judge McMahon, presiding judge on the Police Court bench, asserted afetrward that he and his three colleagues would get together soon to discuss what they saw and exchange conclusions and recommendations bearing upon future sentencings.

employe representation groups. They also asserted the companies had coerced employes into accepting a cost-of-living wage plan.

Green received an ovation on his election. He was nominated by George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Clerks and the federation's chief peacemaker and was re-elected unanimously.

Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation for upwards of 40 years, and 15 vice presidents were re-elected.

Green's union status was not mentioned in the election proceedings. The American Federation of Labor constitution provides officers must be members of unions in good standing. Green holds several honorary memberships in unions other than those in the rebel group.

Only last week the miners' executive board ordered Green to quit associating with the miners' foes. It has been generally expected that Green would be expelled from the United Mine Workers, although he said such action was "unthinkable."

Asks Rebels to Return.

"Neither foe within nor foe without" can stop the A. F. of L. from "going forward toward its objectives," Green told the cheering convention.

"I take advantage of this occasion to plead with those who should be here to come back to our home and fight our common fight," he said. "My efforts will be directed along that line."

Only William L. Hutcheson, president of the carpenters' union and chairman of the Republican National Committee's labor division, expressed opposition to a resolution calling for indorsement of the Black-Connery bill to limit industrial workers' hours to 30 a week.

"If Congress can fix a six-hour work-day, it can order a 10-hour day," Hutcheson said.

The convention's shorter work-week committee, on the other hand, called a compulsory 30-hour week "the only means of mastering unemployment."

Resolutions calling for labor indorsement of a constitutional amendment that would permit enactment of such New Deal measures as the NIRA and the Guffey coal control act—both outlawed by the Supreme Court—were sent to the executive council for "careful study and appropriate action."

Delegates Re-elected.

In answer to Hutcheson, Edward J. Gainor, president of the letter carriers and chairman of the shorter work week committee, told the delegates he had "no illusions" about enactment of the Black-Connery bill this winter.

Consideration of the measure, however, would serve to focus interest on the unemployment situation "and one remedy," he added.

"This grave problem should be of vital concern to every citizen," his report said. "We know, through hard experience, that there is no escape from the staggering cost that unemployment levies on society."

The convention adopted a resolution curbing the right of city control bodies to place businesses on "unfair lists."

William C. Birthright, secretary of the Barbers International, and James J. Ryan of the sheet metal workers, were selected as delegates from the A. F. of L. to the British Trades Union convention, and R. A. Henning, of the machinists, as representative of American labor at the annual meeting of the Canadian trades unions.

Two Taxi Drivers Cleared in Deaths

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated two taxicab drivers of blame in the traffic deaths early this week of Emil Maul, 64, of 513 Rittenhouse street northwest, and an identified colored woman whose body still lies in the Morgue.

Maul, who had been employed by the George P. Killian Paper Box Co. for the last 43 years, was struck by a taxicab driven by Parker Tyler, 38, of 1802 Fifth street northwest, as he crossed Twelfth street at Pennsylvania avenue northwest. After a short hearing Tyler was exonerated of any blame for Maul's death.

Another driver, C. B. Oliff, 25, of 510 T street northeast, was found not guilty of negligent homicide in the death of a 25-year-old colored woman who died in Gallinger Hospital Tuesday. She was struck at Sixth and M streets northwest Monday. Police have been unable to ascertain the woman's identity since she entered the hospital. Her body has lain in the Morgue since Tuesday.

Hoeppels Assigned To Clerical Duties At D. C. Workhouse

Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles J. Hoeppel, yesterday were assigned convict numbers and put to work on clerical jobs in the District Workhouse at Occoquan, Va.

The elder Hoeppel was designated as "Convict No. 107702" and was assigned to duties in the Commissary. His son, "Convict No. 107701," was assigned to the machine shop.

The Hoeppels were sentenced to serve from four months to a year in the workhouse for conspiring to sell a West Point appointment. The Congressman, whose term expires at the end of the year, conferred with his attorneys yesterday on plans for an appeal.

Signature Attributed to Bard Found in Palo Alto Book Store

Dr. Gray, of Stanford, Reports Discovery by Campus Librarian and Prizes Specimen for Its Bearing on Shakespeare-Bacon Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 27.—A newly discovered signature, provisionally accepted as that of William Shakespeare, proves that he was an educated man, Dr. Henry Gray, of Stanford University, concluded in a paper read to the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast here today.

Dr. Gray described the discovery as "absolutely revolutionary to those of us specializing in the Shakespearan field."

"This signature of an expert penman," he said, "definitely disproves the contention of the Baconians and anti-Stratfordites that Shakespeare was an uneducated man incapable of producing the masterpieces attributed to him. Although resembling the existing 'Will' signatures which are the uncertain scribbles of an aged man, this is a beautifully, surely executed piece of handwriting."

Dr. Gray said the new signature was penned with the ornate flourish which literate men of Shakespeare's time practiced. He suggested the age of the penman as the explanation of the other autographs.

Dr. Nathan Van Patter, Stanford librarian, discovered the new signature on a Shakespearean document in a Palo Alto book store, Dr. Gray said. Tests of the paper and ink, he said, are to be made soon to determine their age, but every piece of information so far developed points to genuiness of the signature.

Rapid Gain Shown By Siamese Twin

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—Simplicio Godino, 28-year-old Filipino surgically severed from his dead "Siamese twin" brother Tuesday night, continued to gain in health tonight. A bulletin issued by the New York Academy of Medicine for the York Hospital said "his prognosis continues to be favorable."

The surgeon who cut the tissue, 24 inches in circumference, connecting Simplicio with his brother, who died of rheumatic fever, was revealed today to be Dr. H. M. Wertheim, of the Bellevue Hospital psychiatric department.

Wertheim, whose identity had been kept secret, was aided in the operation, it was stated, by Dr. Leonard Winter, York Hospital superintendent, and Dr. Benjamin Febricant.

Resettlement Offices Threatened by Fire

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Fire tonight threatened to destroy the large brick building housing administrative offices of the Resettlement Administration, Region 1.

A general alarm was sounded when first efforts of firemen failed to halt the blaze. Valuable Government papers are stored in the burning building.

Mrs. Whiffen's Body Is on Way to Capital

Bedford, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Accompanied by her son, Thomas, the body of Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, the "grand old lady of the stage," was taken by train from here tonight to Washington, where it was to be cremated tomorrow morning.

After a brief funeral service in the crematory chapel, the ashes will be sent to the village of Hartford, near London, England, where Mrs. Whiffen's husband is buried and where other relatives reside. It was from England that Mrs. Whiffen came to America more than three score years ago.

Kermit Roosevelt, Jr., To Wed Miss Gaddis

Milton, Mass., Nov. 27 (AP).—The engagement of Miss Mary Lowe Gaddis to Kermit Roosevelt, jr., grandson of the late President, was announced today by the young woman's mother, Mrs. Avery Gaddis, of Milton.

Miss Gaddis was graduated from Milton Academy in 1935 and now is a sophomore at Radcliffe College. Roosevelt is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, of Oyster Bay, N. Y. He is in his senior year at Harvard. The date for the wedding was not announced.

Senate Inquiry In Rail Finance Set for Dec. 7

Transportation Magnates and Bankers to Face Questioning.

By the Associated Press.

Dominant figures in the railroad industry and leading bankers, including J. P. Morgan, probably will be called in the Senate's long-pending investigation of railway financing, scheduled yesterday to open December 7.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is conducting the inquiry, announced the Missouri Pacific System would be the first line studied by the investigators.

This road is part of the $3,000,000,000 Van Sweringen rail empire, which J. P. Morgan & Co. aided in financing. Committee attaches said he might be called early in the hearings.

Committee officials said their work would not be hampered by the death last Monday of O. P. Van Sweringen, who had directed the system single-handedly since his brother, M. J. Van Sweringen, died last year.

The most carefully prepared of any recent Senate investigation, the inquiry is expected to develop long-held secrets on rail financing. Twenty-five railroads, designated by Federal Transportation Co-ordinator Joseph Eastman, have been studied.

Senate agents, aided by the Interstate Commission staff, have been gathering data for more than a year. Many times the agents had trouble getting access to the records they wanted. Last June the committee called hearings to force a showdown, but an agreement was reached with Van Sweringen attorneys satisfactory to the committee.

Although subpenas have not yet been issued, committee officials said a score of the railway industry's dominating figures probably would be summoned to the witness stand.

Members of the subcommittee conducting the inquiry are Senators Wheeler, Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky; Wagner (Democrat), New York; Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), Minnesota; Donahey (Democrat), Ohio, and White (Republican), Maine.

The preliminary investigation has been directed by Max Lowenthal, committee counsel, who formerly served as research assistant to Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate Banking Investigating Committee. Lowenthal once served as secretary to President Hoover's Commission on Prohibition Enforcement, headed by George Wickersham.

Dr. Curtiss to Lecture.

Dr. F. Homer Curtiss, who has just returned from a four months' tour of the New England States, will begin a new series of lectures on Cosmic Soul Science at Theosophic Hall, 1216 H street northwest. The first lecture on the significance of the physical body will be at 8 p. m. Tuesday.

Autoist Delivers Job for Firemen To Station Door

It would have been a cold job to answer a fire yesterday, so members of the Bladensburg Volunteer Fire Department considered themselves lucky when a Washington motorist delivered his flaming automobile to their front door.

The motorist, who gave his name as C. Ratner, 2 Hanover street, Washington, rushed into the station, wringing his hands and shouting his car was on fire.

"Where is your car?" the firemen queried.

FIDAC to Hold Arlington Rite This Afternoon

D. C. American Legion Will Sponsor Honors for Unknown Soldier.

The Department of the District of Columbia, American Legion, will sponsor the annual Fidac exercises at 3 p. m. today at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery.

The International Fidac Congress is composed of representatives of 11 countries, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Italy, Yugoslovia, Poland, Rumania, Portugal, Czechoslovokia, Greece and the United States. Invitations to attend the exercises have been sent to the ambassadors of all countries.

The president of the International Fidac Congress is Carle Del Croix, of Paris, who will place a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Paris, while the same time a wreath will be placed by a member of the Sons of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary Juniors in the name of President Del Croix at Arlington today. Similar services will also be held in all the allied countries at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of each country.

Mrs. Joseph H. Thompson, who is the president of the International Fidac Congress Auxiliary, will also place a wreath at the tomb during the exercises in the name of the auxiliary.

Department Commander Horace W. Lindburg, of the American Legion, will deliver the principal address and will also place a wreath at the tomb in the name of the American Legion. He will be escorted to the tomb by the American Legion guard of honor, under command of Captain Guy C. Nadeau.

The Rev. Father Robert J. White, of Catholic University, who is the representative from the United States serving as a vice president to the International Fidac Congress, and who is also a member of the Fidac executive committee, is also expected to appear on the program.

Water Main Begun.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 27 (AP).—Work on a water main from Cheverly to the new Glenn Dale Sanitorium has begun and is expected to be completed in about four months. The main was begun after a number of wells failed to yield enough water to supply the institution.

Blum Demands Power to Meet Striker Crisis

French Walkouts Spreading; Dock Workers Refuse to Unload Ships.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 27.—Premier Leon Blum, his administration menaced by fresh strike waves, tonight appealed to the Chamber of Deputies for "strong arm" legislation enabling him to cope with the industrial crisis.

After winning the support of his cabinet in individual visits, the premier presented his bill forcing arbitration of labor disputes, which would place upon his government all responsibility for ensuing developments.

The lower house immediately sent the bill to the labor committee, which was expected to report it back to the chamber Monday.

Throughout France strikes spread, with employers adamant against strikers' demands, nevertheless expressing willingness to abide by any measures the government might enact into law.

More Power Sought.

Presentation of the bill followed closely upon the premier's invocation of his power to compel labor disputants to arbitrate costs of living and demands for higher wages.

The bill presented today would empower the premier to force arbitration of disputes not covered by the decree he previously invoked.

Meanwhile, employers refused to meet with labor representatives so long as the strikers occupied their factories. In the Sambre Basin, 20,000 metal workers struck, many occupying their plants.

Similar strikes were under consideration in the Valenciennes region, where there are 25,000 metal workers.

The strike of 8,000 metal workers at Lille, union officials said, might spread to include all 12,000 industrial workers in that area.

Liner Sails Unloaded.

The U. S. liner Washington sailed with its cargo still unloaded after the company abandoned its efforts to persuade the French sympathy strikers to reconsider their decision.

At Marseilles, dock workers worked cargo on the liner Escambion after her officers showed the vessel left the United States before the American strike affected her home port.

The premier late in the day called off a scheduled cabinet meeting, but informed quarters said he would summon another for Saturday.

Beset by internal political difficulties as well as the strikes, the Blum government was heartened by the decision of the council of state in rejecting the appeal of Col. Francois de la Rocque and other Rightists against the government's disbanding of the old Croix de Feu.

Sharp Drop Noted In Imports of Gold

By the Associated Press

Bearing out forecasts by Administration fiscal experts that the flow of gold into the United States has reached its peak, the Commerce Department yesterday reported a substantial decline in yellow metal imports for the week ended November 20.

Imports were $15,210,464 for the week, compared with $26,628,084 in the previous week and $20,015,211 the week of November 6. Of the total imports, $6,501,253 came from the United Kingdom. Gold exports were $24,400, compared with $41,707 for the same period.

Silver imports were $901,186, compared with $1,386,813. Silver exports were $63,346 and $161,667 for the respective weeks.

Brig. Gen. Rees's Services Monday

Burial services will be held in Arlington Cemetery for Brig. Gen. Robert I. Rees, who died last Monday in Detroit.

Rites for the 65-year-old assistant vice president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. have been delayed pending arrival of a son from Honolulu.

Gen. Rees resigned from the Army in 1924. Following the armistice he was a member of Gen. Pershing's overseas staff, in charge of educational work. During the World War he served as a member of the General Staff Corps.

15 Companies Battle Fire in Cincinnati

Cincinnati, Nov. 27 (AP).—Fifteen fire companies, working in relays because of dense smoke, battled a stubborn three-alarm fire in a pipe-shaft in the Hotel Gibson, in the center of Cincinnati, late today. Smoke pouring from upper windows attracted thousands of persons. Many guests deserted their rooms.

Firemen ran hose lines from the street through eighth-floor windows. Firemen chopped through the eleventh floor only to find that the flames had reached the roof and ignited heavy beams. They tore out a section of the outer wall at the roof garden.

Searchers Fail to Find 2 Men Missing on Ranch

San Perlita, Tex., Nov. 27 (AP).—The last searching party rode in tonight from the vast King Ranch, unsuccessful in their hunt for Luther and John Blanton, who disappeared on the 1,000,000-acre cattle domain more than a week ago.

After days of searching in the ranch lands where the San Perlita farmers went duck hunting November 18, rangers and local officers said tonight their investigation was in vain; that they had found no trace of the missing men or any explanation of their disappearance.

Chiang Will Hire Deserters, Pay Fees of $12,500 to $2.50

By the United Press.

Shanghai, Saturday, Nov. 28.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has resorted to use of "silver bullets" in an effort to break the combination of pro-Japanese Manchu-Mongolian armies now invading Suiyuan Province in North China.

The chief of the Nanking government, dispatches revealed today, has offered the following "rewards" to pro-Japanese commanders who surrender to the Central government armies:

Pilots, with airplanes, 20,000 yuan (about $6,000) each.

Anti-aircraft battery commanders with their weapons, 10,000 yuan (about $2,500) each.

Other "rewards" range down to 10 yuan ($2.50) each for common soldiers without arms.

Chiang's offers were made in a proclamation dropped on camps of pro-Japanese forces by Nanking airplanes—numbers of which have been sent to Suiyuan.

It was signed by the generalissimo at his temporary headquarters in Loyang and was interpreted by Chinese as final proof Chiang has determined to resist Japanese aggression in the north with all the military strength at his command.

The document calls on the Manchu-Mongols to pledge allegiance to the Central government in Nanking and to present a united front to foreign aggression.

Deaths of Faculty Wife, Children Called Murder

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27 (AP).—A coroner's jury decided today Mrs. Eleanor Feely, 30-year-old wife of a University of Pittsburgh instructor, and her two children, Janice, 3, and Robert, 5, were murdered last June 18.

The decision that the three were slain "at the hands of a person, or persons, unknown" and recommending apprehension of those responsible climaxed a three-day inquiry into the mysterious deaths.

At this gathering, the first since early summer, the group will receive a report from a sub-committee headed by Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Army Air Corps, on the results of its study of possible sites.

Couple Offers Baby For Sale on Street

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—A two-months-old baby was offered for sale today on the streets of Baton Rouge as other street vendors hawked football souvenirs and flowers.

The sheriff's office announced arrest of Lillian Cornell, 18, and her father, Jim Cornell, 52, who said they were hitch-hikers from Montgomery, Ala., in connection with the alleged offer. Cornell readily admitted the attempt to sell the child, officers said.

They said the girl admitted the baby was hers and that she is unmarried.

3 on Trial for Spoiling Earl Browder Speech

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 27 (AP).—A hearnig for two peace officers and a former special deputy sheriff charged with participation in an attack on a meeting for Earl Browder, Communist leader, was continued until Monday by County Judge George H. Cornelius today after he denied a motion for release of two of the defendants.

Constable Fred Newberger, Deputy Constable John R. Parrish and Larry Ponder, former special deputy sheriff, are charged with assault and affray in connection with an attack which broke up a meeting held on a vacant lot here October 25.

2 Virginians Wounded; Pistol Duel Is Reported

Rocky Mount, Va., Nov. 27 (AP).—Bernard Stanley, 30, and Eugene Mason, 30, were wounded near here this afternoon in what officers said was an exchange of pistol shots between the two. The shooting occurred at Stanley's filling station. Stanley was shot in the hip and Mason in the left leg. An officer swore out warrants charging both with maiming. Doctors ordered them sent to a hospital.

Civil Liberties Inquiry Extension to Be Sought

By the Associated Press

Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., said yesterday he will ask the Senate for additional funds to continue the investigation of alleged violations of civil liberties he began last summer.

La Follette did not reveal how much money he would request. The American Federation of Labor, in one of its resolutions at Tampa, Fla., suggested that the committee be given another $200,000. The original appropriation was $15,000.

Van Sweringen Lines Personnel Shift Denied

Cleveland, Nov. 27 (AP).—George A. Tomlinson, one of the two owners of Midamerica Corporation, which controls the Van Sweringen railroad empire, announced tonight there will be no personnel change in the Van Sweringen system.

Tomlinson said both he and George A. Ball, of Muncie, Ind., co-owner with him, wanted it emphasized no "shakeup" is being considered.

Sex-Switched Youth Wants to Be Girl Again

Vienna (Saturday), Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Bosilko Stoyanoff, 22-year-old Bulgarian bank clerk, whose sex was changed from female to male by an operation in 1930, wants to become a woman again because feminine characteristics have reappeared and he has fallen in love with a man, it was reported here today.

The Sofia correspondent of the newspaper Stunde, said that Bosilko was raised as a girl and bore the feminine name Bosilka until the age of 16, when a doctor, discovering male characteristics in her, performed a sex-changing operation.

2 Baltimoreans Guilty Of Counterfeit Charge

Oklahoma City, Nov. 27 (AP).—Howard M. Dailey and James Deal Banks, both of Baltimore, pleaded guilty in Federal Court today to passing counterfeit bills.

Dailey, 34, was fined $2,500 and sentenced to three years in jail. Banks, who is 17, was fined $500 and sentenced to 18 months, but was paroled on condition that he return to Baltimore and finish high school.

C. Mason Clark Dies In Rockville at 76

C. Mason Clark, 76, a member of one of Montgomery County's oldest families, died unexpectedly of a heart attack late Thursday night at the home of his son, Charles P. Clark, of Rockville.

Mr. Clark was born in Silver Spring, spending the first 50 years of his life on the farm which is now Indian Spring Country Club. His father was the late O. H. P. Clark, a member of the House of Delegates and a county commissioner for years.

He spent most of his life farming. About 20 years ago he entered the service of the Federal Government and was employed in the Custodian Service of the War Department until several years ago when he retired. His wife was Kate Lamb, of New York.

Four years ago he moved to Rockville. Besides his son he is survived by three sisters, Miss Rose Clark, Mrs. J. H. Cissel and Mrs. Kate Fenwick, of Silver Spring, and two brothers, Bouie Clark, of Baltimore, and Berry Clark, of Silver Spring.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at St. Mary's Catholic Church, Rockville. Burial will be in St. John's Cemetery, Forest Glen.

Funeral Service Today For Mrs. S.E. Riggleman

Funeral services for Sarah E. Riggleman, 83, mother-in-law of Dr. R. L. Runk, specialist at the Washington Sanitarium, Takoma Park, Md., who died Thursday night, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Nevius Funeral home, 924 New York avenue northwest. Burial will be in Memorial Park, Md. Dr. D. H. Kress, of Takoma Park, will officiate.

Mrs. Riggleman was born in Upper Tract, W. Va., in 1853, where she passed most of her life. She has been living with her daughter for several years. Mrs. Riggleman had been ill only three days. Besides her daughter she leaves a son, John Riggleman, of Akron, Ohio.

Suit in Montgomery Attacks Police Court Law as Invalid

Defendant's Counsel Claims Legislature Acted Illegally in Establishing Branch; School Board Reports Expenditure of $1,034,751.

Constitutionality of the Montgomery County Police Court was attacked yesterday in a demurrer and motion to quash a warrant filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md., by Attorney Horace J. Donnelly, jr., on behalf of P. A. Knox, of Washington.

Knox had been arrested on a charge of tampering with an automobile belonging to Charles H. McDaniel, of Washington, on the parking lot at the Manor Club near Norbeck, Md. He was convicted by Judge Harold C. Smith in county police court and a fine of $100 imposed. Knox appealed the case to the circuit court.

The demurrer lontends that the Police Court of the county was withodt jurisdiction to issue the warrant or to try Knox snce no such court has been established by the General Assembly of Maryland and cannot be established under provisions of the Maryland Constitution.

The demurrer also contneds that the section of the motor vehicle law under which the warrant was drawn does not apply in this case since the law is for regulation of vehicles on the public highways and this took place on private property.

Donnelly said that he will contend that the Legislature has no right to establish a police court or to designate one justice of the peace to try all county cases because no provision is made in the Maryland constitutino for such an office.

The demurrer also alleges that Knox was deprived of his constitutional rights in that he was not served with a copy of the warrant and has not been so served and that the "so-called police justice before whom appellant was tried did not comply with the provisions of the Code of Laws of Maryland requiring such justice to inform defendant o his right to trial by jury and that the jurisdiction o the police justice did not appear on the face of the proceedings.

The Montgomery County Board of Education expended a total of $1,034,752.90 during the fiscal year 1935-36, the annual report of Superintendent of Schools Edwin W. Broome revealed yesterday. Total receipts for the year amounted to $1,406,751.38, leaving a balance on hand as of July 31, 1936, of $371,998.48. This compares with a balance on hand at the close of the previous fiscal year of $7,851.57.

School teachers' salaries accounted for the largest item in the budget, requiring the expenditure of $537,125.49. New buildings required the disbursement of $189,773.56, while land and improvements, equipment, and alteration of old buildings brought the total capital outlay up to $227,746.87.

Other expenditures were: Administrative expense, $18,650; instructional service and supervision, exclusive of teachers' salaries, $49,679.37; operation of school plant, $76,874.44; maintenance of school plant, $30,850.06; auxiliary agencies, $68,056.65; insurance, $7,768.15; short-term bank loan and interest, $17,771.25, and county celebrations, $229.78.

During the year the school board received $229,790.07 in State and Federal unds and $1,124,345.89 in county funds of which $565,691 was for current expenses and $558,654.89 for permanent improvement. A total of $14,763.85 was received from other miscellaneous sources.

Social Security Answers

By the Associated Press.

My father is now 65. Will his pay be taxed for a Federal pension under the social security act?

No.

If a man gets paid $200 a month and $50 of that is for traveling expenses, does he pay pension taxes on the $200 or $150?

He is taxed on the $150, plus whatever of the $50 traveling allowance is not used for expenses.

Does a real estate salesman working only on a commission basis come under the pension provision?

Yes. The commissions are taxed.

I do accounting work periodically for several firms but am not considered an employe. Should each firm deduct the pension tax from my check?

Not if you work as an independent contractor. The degree of control the hiring firm exercises over you will be a determining factor in such cases.

How about lawyers who are paid monthly retainers?

Ordinarily a lawyer is considered an independent contractor, and hence exempt from this tax. The degree of control exercised again will govern here.

I employ one man in a small gardening business in San Francisco. Is he included in the pension plan?

Agricultural labor is exempted. Whether this man is exempted depends on the extent to which the work is agricultural.

I am a barber, 66 years old. Where do I apply for a pension?

People over 65 are not included in the Federal plan. If needy, they are eligible for Federal-State old-age grants.

If a man gets pensioned at 65, can he do odd jobs and still collect his check?

Yes; but regular work in an employment covered by the law is penalized.

Are special nurses eligible for pensions or are they considered domestic help?

They are eligible if working in an industry covered by the law, ineligible otherwise.

Which tax is deductible first, the Federal pension or State unemployment tax?

Both taxes are on gross wages.

The writer is 72 years of age and employed by a steamship company. Will I have to pay this pension tax?

No.

A company employs two men, one past 65 and the other almost 64. Do either of these men have to register?

Only the younger one need register.

Does a man who reaches 65 without qualifying for a pension have to stop work then to get the "lump sum" payment of 3½ per cent of the amount on his wage account?

No.

If I died after receiving a pension for a year, would any money be paid to my family?

Your estate will be entitled to 3½ per cent of your wage account, less whatever you had collected in pensions.

Juniors Active For Red Cross In Alexandria

Program in City Schools Includes Many Phases of Work for Needy.

Miss Margaret Moncure, chairman for Junior Red Cross activities in Alexandria, has begun a widely praised program in the schools. Booklets are being prepared to exchange with other juniors in schools throughout the United States. Christmas plays are being rehearsed, calendars, greeting cards and favors are being made, and many toys have been donated toward the Christmas collection for the needy.

George Washington High School, Principal Henry T. Moncure; Mount Vernon School, Mrs. Elizabeth Kirchheimer; Jefferson School, Miss Frances Gaines; Washington School, Mrs. Pauline Gorham; Lee School, Mrs. L. P. Woodward; Maury School, Miss Bessie Parrish; St. Agnes School, Mrs. Helen Arny Macan; St. Mary's Parochial School, Sister Florence Lucille; St. Mary's Academy, Sister Asumpta; St. Joseph's School, Father Philip Kirrane; Parker Gray School, Wesley Elam; Lyles-Crouch School, Julia Pritchett, and Seminary School, Geraldine Stevenson.

The school has enrolled virtually 100 per cent in the Junior Red Cross, except the George Washington High School, where school activities have been such the campaign was delayed until after Thanksgiving.

Robert Ritzler, Playwright, Dead

Dayton, Ohio, Nov. 27 (AP).—Robert Ritzler, 44, actor, playwright, author, and prominent in conservation circles, died of a heart attack in his home tonight.

Born in New York City, the son of Charles E. Ritzler, Dayton soft-drink manufacturer, Ritzler was a co-author with Winthrop Ames of "Alloy," produced on Broadway in 1926.

He evolved a scheme of stream control and erosion prevention which drew national attention and only recently outlined a conservation plan for the State of West Virginia.

Prosecution Rests Case In Black Legion Trial

Detroit, Nov. 27 (AP).—The State rested today at the murder trial of five alleged Black Legion members after a stenographer read what she said was one defendant's statement corroborating Dayton Dean's testimnoy that Silas Coleman, colored, was shot to death for "target practice."

The statement was attributed to James Roy Lorance and was read from the witness stand by Miss Ann Sennick, who testified she took it in the prosecutor's office. It said Harvey Davis, another defendant, directed the shooting in May, 1935.

Grace McKinstry, U. S. Painter, Dead

Minneapolis, Nov. 27 (AP).—Miss Grace E. McKinstry, internationally known painter, died yesterday. She was born in Fredonia, N. Y.

Much of Miss McKinstry's early painting was done in Spain. She opened a studio in Washington, D. C., and later went to California.

She was a member of the National Arts Club, the Pen and Brush Club of New York, the San Francisco Society of Women Painters and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Banks' Slips Sold For Yuletide Funds

Depositors in two of the largest closed banks in Washington, the District National Bank and the Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., have begun to sell their "receiver's certificates" at a discount to a dealer here in order to raise funds for Christmas shopping, it was learned last night.

This dealer, it was explained, is paying 40 per cent of the balance due the depositors of the Federal and 50 per cent of the balance due the District depositors. Already each bank has paid 50 per cent dividends.

The Treasury Department explained that the transactions are being carried out according to established practice, and that both the depositors and the agents have a right, under law, to such dealing in negotiable paper.

Dr. Alice M. Caporn Not League Member

In describing plans of Dr. Alice M. Caporn, Australian health authority, to establish a new civilization in British Honduras, The Post on Friday erroneously reported that she was a member of Washington's League for the Larger Life.

Officials of the league yesterday declared that while Dr. Caporn was at one time their dietician she was not a member of the organization. The Post regrets the error.

An unidentified colored man was critically injured last night when he was struck by a Capital Transit Co. street car at Hyattsville, Md. Suffering from internal injuries and a probable skull fracture, the injured man was unconscious in Casualty Hospital early this morning.

Chew Expects 'Equalization' Of Tax Burden

Arlington Board Member Explains His Position on Assessments.

F. Freeland Chew, county board member, last night charged he has been misrepresented regarding his views on real estate assessments in Arlington County and issued the following statement:

"In two recent speeches this week before citizens associations of the county, I called attention to certain wide discrepancies in real estate assessments which existed as of January 1, 1935, six months before the present assessors were appointed by the court.

"An examination of the public records will disclose numerous undeveloped properties and many business properties which are assessed at between 6 and 10 per cent of their market value, while the average home owner must pay taxes on the basis of 30 and 40 per cent. If these properties, which fall within the low assessment brackets, were made to carry their fair share of the tax burden, the same as home owners do, there could be a substantial reduction in the tax levy.

"I have no knowledge whatever of any of the new assessments now being made and have never at any time referred to the work the present assessors are doing or urged residents to check their own property.

"I have every reason to believe the new assessment will result in a much better equalization than before and all of us should hope for this result."

Chicago Slayer Doomed.

Chicago, Nov. 27 (AP).—A criminal court jury decided after two hours deliberation tonight that Rufo Swain, 27, a college bred colored person, must die in the electric chair for the murder of Mrs. Mary Louise Trammell, 24.

Maj. Hesse Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Maj. Edwin B. Hesse, 64, former superintendent of police, who died late Wednesday night, will be held today at 2 p. m., in the Lutheran Church of the Reformation, with the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, the pastor, officiating.

Special Masonic rites will be held in the church by the Orient Commandery, Knights Templar, of which Maj. Hesse was a past commander, and further Masonic services will be held at the grave in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

In addition to his Masonic activities, Maj. Hesse was one of the organizers of the Washington Board of Trade and a member of both the Society of Natives and the Association of Oldest Inhabitants. He belonged, also, to the Organized Reserve Corps of the Army and the Heroes of '76.

Basil Zaharoff, Mystery Arms King, Dies at 86

triotism brought him business, and of war he said "as long as people want it, they shall have it."

The United States Senate armament investigation indicated he enjoyed the "confidence" of President Wilson during the writing of the Versaillies Treaty.

That investigation also showed he was the dominant figure in the munitions business of half a dozen nations.

He was called an "instigator of wars," a "merchant of death," and a "trafficker in blood" by Senators conducting the inquiry.

Sir Basil, from his castle in England, where he enjoyed the honor of being a Knight of the Garter, directed a submarine firm in America, the Electric Boat Co., of New York. It was one of his lesser enterprises, but one deal on submarines to Spain alone was revealed to have paid him a commission of $2,000,000.

He is known to have made 7,000,000 pounds out of sales of bullets and guns to Russia in the Russo-Japanese war, his first big deal.

Kept Informed on Spain.

The current Spanish rebellion held him fascinated until his death yesterday. A battery of secretaries were with him on his annual tenday visit to the Riviera, preparing him day-by-day accounts of the progress of the revolutionists.

The mystery man was apparently in good health almost up until the moment of his death, which came at 9 in the morning in a Monte Carlo hotel, according to the Associated Press.

Employes of the hotel said he collapsed in the arms of his valet as the valet was dressing him following his morning bath. Sir Basil was quite enfeebled and was moved about in a wheel chair.

Hours after he expired, Sir Basil's body lay fully clothed on the bed in his hotel room. His foster daughter told the hotel management that he had left a standing order there must be no flowers in the event of his death. She also had requested the hotel to keep his death secret.

So well hidden were the personal facts of the man's life that it was not definitely known until yesterday that his age was 86. A death certificate gave the place and date of his birth—never known before—as Phanaz, Turkey, October 20, 1850.

It had always been believed before that he was born in Constantinople of a Russian father and a Greek mother.

Europe's Richest Man.

Among the world's wealthiest men, Sir Basil was credited with having piled up the greatest individual fortune that ever has been accumulated in Europe in one generation. He was a member of the board of directors of 300 corporations.

A Levantine, he loved gold, and he set about getting it in the streets of Constantinople 70 years ago, where he worked for a money changer, exchanging copper coins for silver on the crowded sidewalks.

He is reputed to have departed from Constantinople one morning with $2,000 in funds from the "bank."

The young adventurer fled to Athens by boat. It was not long before he was apprehended for further illicit business and jailed in a filthy Greek prison. But he had gold on him.

A prisoner died in the next cell, and Zaharoff bribed guards to put the corpse in his cell and free him. He hastened to Spain.

En route he is said to have met an attractive young Spanish woman belonging to the highest nobility, the Duchess of Marchena. He was then a handsome young man, of brilliant intelligence, and she fell in love with him.

She offered to help him, and circumstances in Spain made that possible in a short time. Vickers, Ltd., was attempting to get control over Spanish copper mines but had been unsuccessful.

Demanded Cash, Stock.

With the aid of his influential duchess, he obtained an option on the mines and sailed for London, where he offered his option to Vickers. The British firm jumped happily at the chance and offered him a large sum of money, but Zaharoff demanded not only cash but shares in the company.

That shrewd demand was the initial step in his career with the weapons of death.

He is said to have originated the system of selling weapons to both sides during war when he sold a submarine to the Greeks and then hurried to Turkey to sell that government two submarines to offset the new device in the hands of the Greeks. The Greeks retaliated by buying more, and Zaharoff had a gold mine.

For his excellent work in the Balkans he was advanced by Vickers to its Russian agency. It was here he made $35,000,000 in war profits.

Next step in his fantastic rise in an incredible business was appointment to the chairmanship of the board of Vicker, Ltd., and Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd. He became one of its principal shareholders.

Subsequently Zaharoff's fortune grew as his arm profits in various wars all oved the face of the globe continued to enrich him. He acquired vast banking, oil, shipbuilding and other interests, including the casino at Monte Carlo, which was a sideline plaything.

He never gambled in his world-famous casino.

In the palace at Madrid, during the late eighties, he was descending a staircase one night, when he saw a man wearing the great Collar of the Golden Fleece seize a woman by the neck and shake her.

Zaharoff jerked the man backward violently and separated the couple. As the woman swayed and started to fall, he encircled her waist with his arm and supported her.

The man was His Royal Highness Prince Francisco de Bourbon, a cousin of the King of Spain. The woman was the 20-year-old wife of the prince.

The prince's mind became disordered some time later and he was confined to a castle by royal decree. He died in 1924. After many years of waiting Zaharoff married her. He was by then aged and decrepit. She died a few years afterward and her death was said to have been a blow to the munitions salesman.

During the World War it was learned by investigators for the British Government in that nation's arms inquiry that Sir Basil made $150,000,000 in profits. At one time he owned 67 per cent of the stock of Vickers.

One of the Quloxtic pleasantries of this scheming gentleman was contributing to culture by founding professorships of aviation at the universities of London, Paris, and Leningrad.

Sir Basil had several residences in Europe. His country place at Balincourt, formerly belonging to King Leopold of Belgium, is one of the most beautiful in France.

There he has been seen of late dressed in the fashion of the hour, a different outfit every day, sunning in his wheel chair. One of his exercises was rowing in a little lake on the estate.

Knighted and honored by most of the nations of Europe, he was a grand officer of the Legion of France, Grand Cross of the British Empire, Knight of the Bath and Knight of the Garter. He had no less than 298 foreign decorations heaped upon him by 31 different nations.

He was often a confidential intermediary between Briand and Lloyd George and later between Clemenceau and Lloyd George. He traveled mysteriously alone by automobile between London and Dover and then moved to France on British destroyers, returning the same way.

Lloyd George ordered the British secret service to investigate him at one time, but that organization failed to turn up many facts about him. He had, it seems, spread throughout his rise, contradictory tales about himself, leaving a trail so confused that no one knew anything.

He would tell one acquaintance one thing about his antecedents and another something else, with the result that it was decided all were fabrications for the purpose of concealing his business and affairs.

Anderson Urges Poetic Drama In Quoteless Interview Here

Literary, Other Gossip Deplored by 'Wingless Victory' Author.

By Eugene Warner.

This interview with Maxwell Anderson, the playwright, will have to be somewhat unusual. Anderson does not care to be quoted directly, which always seems to complicate an interview.

Therefore, if a one-hour conversation with the author of Wingless Victory, Winterset, and numerous other successes, is to make sense the reporter will have to quote himself, reversing the customary practice. Which should be a novelty if nothig else. Especially since Anderson was once a reporter (on the old New York World).

"Mr. Anderson, what are your reasons for never allowing direct quotes?"

The large, lumbering and meek one-time farm hand said he thought maybe that was the best way to do it. He is a man who prefers to let his work speak for itself.

The custom in America of letting the public know what kind of cigarettes a writer smokes seems to him to be plain gossip. He cannot understand why people are nowadays more interested in men than their works, but if they are he doesn't care.

"I's probably the curse of psychoanalism. Everybody wants to be a psychoanalyst these days. Or maybe it's an artistic curiosity. After all, Mr. Anderson, you authors like to pry into the insides of your characters, and you're not very delicate about it, either."

Dislikes Gossip Columns.

Well, if the public's curiosity was the same as that authors feel toward people, that would be all right, Anderson seemed to think. However, he was convinced it was love of old-fashioned gossip. The country has come to a fine state of affairs when gossip columnists can enrich themselves writing snide remarks about their neighbors, he intimated, mentioning one by name.

"Have you observed any interesting trends in the theater?"

Anderson thought he had, the most important being a retreat from the realistic, repertorial theater, toward the old poetic forms, in which playwrights tried to contribute something ennobling to mankind instead of laying the species on a laboratory dissecting table and finding out what kind of mud he was made of.

"Is there any real demand for that type of play?"

If all the poets in the country, Anderson indicated, would get busy and write plays in verse (as he does) the theater would be vastly improved and also a lot of plays would be sold. The demand for plays in verse far exceeds the supply, and any poet who will write a fairly decent play in blank verse will have no trouble in selling it.

"Isn't poetry a heart--breaking enough trade without getting into the theater, which is the toughest racket in the world?"

Recalls Disappointments.

Anderson thought writers should take a long gamble. The emoluments of the theater are so much greater than in any other field. Yes, he had taken a good many hard cracks on the head. He had known the lowest depths of despair. But now he was chastened. He came out of it stronger and better. Everyone who plays around with the theater is due for disappointments which are not to be compared with those in other endeavors. They are the worst.

Yet think of the triumph when it comes, and it will come. When a person reaches the top in newspapering, for instance, where is he? Anderson held his hands close to the floor. When you're a success in the theater you're up there.

MAXWELL ANDERSON.

"What are your best thoughts on politics?"

Anderson had thought a great deal. He disapproves of Communism because it is a repressive force which snuffs out individualism. The only hope of the race is in encouraging individual thought, not in standardizing it. He has never vsited Russia and doesn't want to, especially. He is aggrieved at the decay of religion.

Government when it becomes powerful is dangerous, because governments are always made up of men, and men are fallible. He does not look with approval on the tendency toward increased centralization of power in this country. Power is the fountainhead of abuse, power is always constrictive rather than expansive, in the encouragement of thinking.

"By the way, Mr. Anderson, how do you do your thinking?"

Couldn't Concentrate.

The playwright's mind has been disciplined after an enormous effort. It once was flighty, and no matter how much he tried to concentrate on any given problem, in ten seconds his mind had wandered away. But he forced himself, through years of deliberate effort, to make his mind stay on what he wanted it to.

"That must be a great help in writing a play."

Wonderful. He is now able to sit down and think uninterruptedly for hours on his situations, his scenes, his characters. Incidentally, he writes his plays very rapidly once he sets to work. But frequently two years of contemplation precede the writing of a play which takes two months.

He knows every second of action before he puts it on paper. He has glimpses of whole pages of dialog in his mind before he begins. The play comes out of his typewriter easily, fluently, because he knows it perfectly from first to last, before the first word is typed.

"What were some of those knocks on the head you spoke about?"

Anderson said that in his opinion no one had ever felt lower than he did after writing one fairly successful play and then having four failures in uninterrupted succession. It is bad enough to spend years on a play and have it fail, but when you get four in a row it is a unique experience in defeat.

The playwright concluded the interview by saying he would enjoy going down into Sixteenth street from his room at the Hay-Adams and trying out one of the pneumatic drills which were rattling outside. He had tried farming in Iowa, had tried poetry, had tried railroading, and he thought the feel of a drill in the hand would be a rather exciting feeling. He departed at noon yesterday for Manhattan.

Security Bill Session Called By Gov. Nice

Legislature to Meet Dec. 15 to Enact Law to Save $3,000,000 in Taxes.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 27.—A special session of the Legislature—the second this year—will convene at noon December 15 to enact unemployment insurance legislation assuring Maryland's participation in the Federal social security program.

Enactment of such legislation, confidently predicted by Senate and House leaders as a matter requiring but a "few days" of consideration, will mean a saving to the State of about $3,000,000 in social security taxes collected during 1936.

Gov. Nice announced his intention of calling the extraordinary session at a meeting here today of a score of legislative and social welfare leaders.

After instructing Attorney Herbert R. O'Conor to prepare an official proclamation, the Governor named a committee of 21, headed by Simon E. Sobeloff, of Baltimore, to prepare an unemployment insurance bill for submission on the first day of the session.

The Governor prefaced today's conference with an assertion he believes the Legislature could pass the needed law within five days. Both Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Senate, and Emanuel Gorfine, speaker of the House of Delegates, concurred in the estimate.

A need for prompt action on Maryland's part was cited by Merrill Murray, representing the Federal Social Security Board. Merrill said the board would require at least a week to examine and approve the legislation enacted, and pointed out the deadline for its enactment is December 31.

He said it was "up to the State" to make its decision, but added there is nothing to indicate Congress will postpone the deadline. Every assistance will be given Maryland by the Federal agency, Murray said, in making the legislation passed in the special session "as perfect as possible."

Two Slain in Gun Battle At N. C. Filling Station

Wadesboro, N. C., Nov. 27 (AP).—Two men were dead and three persons under detention today after a burst of gunfire at the filling station of Roy Kirk, 38, near Polkton.

A coroner's jury held that Kirk killed S. R. Hyatt, 23-year-old CCC worker, and then was killed himself by the accidental discharge of his own gun.

Merit System Technique.

Enactment of some measure to extend the civil service system during the next session of Congress may be taken for granted. The period of emergency expansion is over. Retrenchment, reorganization and abolition of useless agencies is now the order of the day. Under such conditions the spoils system can yield very little fruit. It is to the advantage of the party in power as well as the Nation to oust the unfit and give more secure status to competent employes whose jobs are likely to be permanent.

Interest properly centers, therefore, in the form which this legislation should take. It is generally agreed that the examinations to be required of employes before they are granted civil service status should be non-competitive. Suddenly to open 300,000 jobs to competitive examination would place an intolerable burden on the Civil Service Commission, disrupt the work of many important organizations and impose hardship upon many thousands of Government employes who are doing satisfactory work.

Some efforts are being made, however, to open the proposed non-competitive examinations only to those employes who can obtain an indorsement for that purpose from their administrative superiors. Such a provision would tend to supplant political favoritism by personal favoritism, which may be equally detrimental to the public interest. Whatever method of distinguishing competent public servants from mere place-holders is selected, it should be applied equitably to all employes.

One other prerequisite to any effective reform in the civil service system has been emphasized by Senator Logan in connection with the bill he proposes to introduce in the Seventy-fifth Congress. "I don't see any use enacting this legislation," he said, "unless we get full value from thorough administration." Obviously the Civil Service Commission must be given an adequate staff and facilities if a real merit system, covering all permanent Federal agencies, is to be developed.

The examination of employes in the New Deal units is only the first step toward modernization of our personnel system. After all permanent employes have been granted the protection of the classified service, there will still remain the problems of improving its techniques and developing a genuine career service. In these fields aggressive leadership is expected of the C. S. C. The building up of a strong and well-equipped commission might easily prove to be the most important safeguard against future reversion to spoils.

A Product Of His Period.

No man could possibly be quite as sinister as Sir Basil Zaharoff was often believed to be. The mystery of his origin, the secrecy of his movements, the fabulous extent of his holdings, his own intense aversion to publicity of any kind, would have made him a marked man even had he made his living as a poet. When these phenomena were added to his occupation, poor Sir Basil was fortunate not to be portrayed with horns and a cloven hoof.

In the vivid language of our times, Zaharoff was a "merchant of death." By selling arms he battened on other men's misery and coined a fortune out of blood. That he was in no way distressed by those international rivalries out of which armaments grow, is well attested. Yet it is taking much too dangerously simple a view of international relations to harbor the illusion that, had Zaharoff remained in the complete obscurity from which he sprang, the world would be a better place now.

Mankind craves a personal devil as the explanation for the existence of evil. Because the world, during recent years, has shown a distinct tendency to go mad; because one of the clearest manifestations of the developing insanity is the present race in armaments, and because Zaharoff sold arms, therefore it was Zaharoff and his fellow munitions makers who were the cause of wars. Stop the sale of arms and neutrality becomes possible, cried some; stop the private manufacture of munitions and wars will cease, said others.

But these beliefs confuse cause and effect. They ignore, far too much, the tragic forces operating in international life; they ignore the really great price that must be paid if peace is to become a permanent possession of the human race. It is the existence of the war spirit that made Zaharoff; not Zaharoff that created the war spirit. And it is a certainty that with his passing the chance of war will be no whit diminished.

The President At Rio.

Clear indication that far-reaching measures to develop Pan-American solidarity will be presented at the Buenos Aires peace conference was given by President Roosevelt in his address to the joint session of the Brazilian Congress yesterday. Mr. Roosevelt made his stopover at Rio de Janeiro the occasion for observations which go far beyond the customary platitudes of a diplomatic courtesy visit. And the weight which must be attached to his words is emphasized by the new German-Japanese agreement and other indications of increasing tension in the international relations of both Europe and Asia.

For the first time, in this speech, it was openly and officially suggested that the current imperialist designs of certain non-American powers are a matter of grave concern to the government of the United States and are being closely scrutinized from the viewpoint of possible repercussions in the New World. The republics of this hemisphere, said Mr. Roosevelt, including Canada as a nation which seeks the same objectives, "wish to lead their own lives free from desire for conquest and free from fear of conquest . . . Our aims will best be served by agreements which bring peace, security and friendship among us and all our neighbors."

In the language of diplomacy the expression of a desire to be "free from fear of conquest" implies the presence of a threat of conquest. Similarly, the expression of a desire for agreements promising "security" indicates a condition in which such security is held to be lacking. And in the President's speech yesterday there were other indications that recent diplomatic negotiations between Germany and Italy, and Germany and Japan, call for a new orientation in the Pan-American outlook. It is not enough, said Mr. Roosevelt, that peace now prevails throughout the New World. "All instrumentalities for the maintenance of peace," he added, "must be consolidated and reinforced. We cannot countenance aggression — from wheresoever it may come."

Words of this character, spoken by the President of the United States to the Congress of the largest South American republic, could easily lend themselves to sensational interpretations. It might readily be assumed that Mr. Roosevelt has in his possession information indicating that some unnamed power has in mind definite colonization or other imperial designs affecting the political independence and territorial integrity of one or more American republics. Probably such an interpretation would outrun the facts. But it must be remembered that the facts, even as generally known, are sensational enough.

Recent developments in Spain have made the most profound impression on all Latin-American peoples. They have witnessed, with all the emotions aroused by consanguinity, the tragic results of active intervention by Italy, Germany and Russia in the Spanish Civil War. As countries not entirely free from domestic upheavals of their own it has naturally been concluded that similar intervention might be attempted on occasion in other Spanish-speaking countries. The value of the original conception of the Monroe Doctrine, as an understanding which would militate against European domination rather than one which would encourage domination by the United States, has recurred to many a South American statesman lately.

That President Roosevelt should seek to encourage this attitude is entirely natural and desirable. He has demonstrated by actions which speak louder than words that the period of attempted overlordship by the United States in the New World is at an end. He is now stating with equal clarity that the United States, having abandoned any thought of imperialistic designs in Latin American, "cannot countenance aggression" by others. It may be anticipated that this very significant statement of policy, made in the Brazilian capital yesterday, will receive cordial acceptance in all the other American republics.

The speech at Rio adumbrates a policy of collective action against aggression such as has heretofore never been attempted in the New World. And the program, at present only vaguely defined, is specifically stated by Mr. Roosevelt as one calculated to forward "the principle of interdependence." In other words, it is one which should be welcomed by the League of Nations and is open to mistrust only by those self-defined aggressor nations which have shown willingness to violate the Covenant of the League of Nations and the Kellogg Pact.

It is for the Buenos Aires conference to say how far, and by what specific measures, the program of unification sketched by Mr. Roosevelt at Rio shall be carried forward. But in that sketch the President of the United States has made abundantly clear that the forthcoming parley has implications far beyond those of any preceding Pan-American political gathering.

Not Qualified.

When Thomas L. Blanton decided to hang out his shingle in Washington many local residents, familiar with his long warfare against the District, were frankly puzzled. Why should the former Representative from Abilene, Tex., wish to settle down in a city inhabited by "damned doctors" and wicked parasitical groups who try to wheedle pin money from the Government? As a Congressman Mr. Blanton found so many causes for irritation here that, as a lawyer, he was expected to give this "Communist-ridden" metropolis a wide berth. But he has not.

Current reports possibly provide an explanation of Washington's "Capitalary attraction" for Mr. Blanton. He is said to be looking for continued support by the taxpayers. Indeed, he seems to be out for any position that offers an unusually good salary. Otherwise he would not be interested in the vacant post on the Board of Tax Appeals, for which he can scarcely be said to qualify by either temperament or training.

Mr. Blanton's prospect of securing this particular $10,000 plum appears to be pleasingly small. In the first place, the chairman of the board is a Texan and it is not customary to appoint more than one member from a single State. Of far greater importance, however, is the clause in the law requiring the President to appoint members of the Board of Tax Appeals "solely on grounds of fitness to perform the duties of the office."

Members of this board function as judges. They hear witnesses, and the arguments of counsel for taxpayers and the Government, preliminary to the decision of highly technical cases. A large measure of judicial temperament is their first prerequisite. Beyond that, special training in tax law is essential to intelligent adjudication of the disputes with which this special taxation court deals.

The mere mention of Mr. Blanton's name in connection with the Board of Tax Appeals arouses anticipation that he would threaten to "thrash" all attorneys who chanced to disagree with him. The President has already appointed to this board too many members with virtually no experience in the field of tax law. But even those appointments afford no precedent for consideration of so injudicious a lame duck for a judicial post.

Thinks On Skinks.

"They ain't no sech animal," exclaimed the hayseed on first viewing a giraffe. And so we, on receipt of the news that a skink has been installed in a Staten Island zoo.

Without a doubt, the gnu is a reality. It's not quite so certain that an olm exists, but the fact that the great London Zoo recently announced acquisition of one is strong evidence for the plaintiff. But when it comes to a skink, either Staten Island has become a second Winsted, Conn., which regularly for years reported red, white and blue eggs laid on the Fourth of July, or a Carrollian influence is dictating our correspondence from the New York Bay region. May we not soon expect reports of bandersnatches frabjiously invading back yards as a result of the abnormally cold winter?

Still, the dictionary says there are skinks. Lizards they are, "mostly small, with stout scales and slightly notched tongues covered with scalelike papillae." Obviously a notched tongue first called them skinks. Certainly no rhyme warranted the appellation. And there could have been no reason in it but malice of a sort that should long since have brought the S. P. C. A. a-running.

At the time of their baptism—probably half a century ago at least—there were plenty of other names still unused. For example, they might have been called saxophones or schizophrenes or surrealists—anything but skinks. But skink it was, scarcely better than skunk, which, unless the printers are even more co-operative than usual, will be what they will have been called during the whole of this powerful essay, anyway.

Out West already 40 men have been shot by mistake for deer. It seems that one simple rule would prevent such tragedies: If you look like a deer, don't hunt deer.

A Big Job.

From the Minneapolis Tribune.

Whether or not the rapid expansion of the Federal bureaucracy was justified by the emergency is a question on which there may be honest differences of opinion, but if the emergency has passed, as the President maintained in the campaign, then there is only one consistent course open to him. That is to start restoring the Federal establishment to something approaching a normal basis, both with respect to numbers and to civil service. There is need for a thoroughgoing reorganization of governmental agencies in the interests of efficiency and economy, and for a reapplication of merit system principles where they have fallen into bad neglect.

President Roosevelt can hardly be insensitive to the opportunities for solid achievement which confront him here. With the people's smashing vote of confidence behind him he is in an excellent position to do this difficult job courageously and well. It is not a job that can be done overnight, or that should be done with a brutal disregard of those who now earn their livelihood in the Federal service. But a gradual housecleaning is clearly in order, and Mr. Roosevelt cannot proceed too quickly with the task of placing the civil service on a securer foundation than it has ever known.

Dare And Impeachment.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The type of editorial comment contained in The Post of November 25, under the heading "Lost His Spurs" does not speak well for the editor or editorial staff.

"G-men," as they are so dramatically referred to, have been involved in numerous similar incidents, in which they have been disarmed and their weapons used to kill other "G-men" and innocent bystanders, but such incidents are either portrayed in such a light as to reflect gory glory upon Mr. Hoover, or are carefully eliminated from the day's news entirely.

A knowledge of the special orders for the sentry post at Hatfield would be the primary requisite to discussion of this unfortunate incident. Hatfield is so located that challenging is not practicable. A soldier who had the temerity to challenge occupants of cars at this point would probably find himself the unwilling center of a congressional investigation.

It would delight the undersigned beyond expression to place one of your soft, pudgy boys in just such a predicament as that guard found himself. If he recovered I am sure that his printed discussion, and possibly that of his editor, would be considerably more charitable than he was wont to adopt toward other misfortunates.

D. I. BURNETT.
Arlington, Va., Nov. 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Your vicious attack upon our Army in your editorial of November 25, "He Lost His Spurs," is quite understandable.

Your known affection for the Red naturally makes you hate the soldier, for he alone will save us, when you intellectuals (?) have sold us out to communism.

Red Rider Reaction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

You are to be congratulated for your positive stand on the red rider issue. The article which you reprinted from "The American Observer" was obviously so fair and impartial that it seems an educational crime to prevent such a calm and objective treatment of the subject from being read by our high-school students.

I do not recall having read a fairer description of the Soviet experiment than that reprinted from "The American Observer."

Washington, Nov. 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

After reading "The American Observer" article on communism which you carried in The Post, it seems ridiculous to think that Washington students should not have been allowed to read it.

The article did not make a Communist out of me. I am as much opposed to it as ever. What is more, the disputed article gives me more facts on the subject so I can argue more convincingly against the Soviet system of regimentation. Why not let students study about these problems realistically? Are we afraid that our system will not stand up under the comparison? I'm not.

I admire your editorial policy, because you strongly defend the democratic system of free speech.

MRS. E. D. PHILIPS.

Dodd As Ambassador.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In The Post of November 17 there was a resume of an address I delivered at a meeting of the Presbyterian Ministers Association of Washington. On the whole this resume was admirably done, but I should like to clarify one point which is very important. In my address I alluded to the fact that an impression widely prevails in Germany that the attitude of America toward the Nazi government is "not friendly." I then said that one of the reasons for this impression is the belief that the American Ambassador, Dr. William E. Dodd, is unsympathetic toward the present regime.

My remarks with reference to Ambassador Dodd were based exclusively on conversations I had with Americans resident or traveling in Germany. These Americans deeply deprecate the alleged fact that Dr. Dodd does not desire to cultivate friendly relations with the Nazi government. I did not hear from any German official or publicist any remarks of any kind relative to Dr. Dodd. There was no reason for his name to be brought up, and his record as Ambassador was never alluded to.

I have never passed judgment upon Dr. Dodd as Ambassador to Germany and have no desire to do so. His continuance in office is a matter for the Department of State to settle, and I do not presume to offer suggestions to officials who are highly qualified to handle all questions with regard to the personnel of the diplomatic service. My only purpose in writing this letter is to make clear the fact that from no official quarter in Germany and from no group of German publicists did any criticism come to me with reference to Dr. Dodd.

Infantry Scores.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Not long ago The Post carried a letter signed by "Proud But Angry Father," resenting the policy of certain apartment building managements of rejecting as tenants families with children.

In order to taste the joys of restful, suburban living, we braved increased costs of transportation, gas, motor license fees and high personal property tax assessments and moved our lares and penates to a nearby Virginia apartment project. The quiet and rest we sought, however, was short-lived. In no time, this apartment development became transformed into a concentration camp of wailing infantry, with reinforcements arriving daily.

I have no doubt that this stentorian, stagger chorus—broadcasting blatantly from 7 p. m. until 7 a. m.—would welcome into membership Proud Father's "knockout," provided she sign a pledge to be personally responsible for at least one case of insomnia in her particular apartment unit. The organization boasts no slackers. Lest any insomnia victim be caught dozing, the parental canteen crew swings into action between 2 and 3 a. m., heels clacking, with sustenance guaranteed to insure reserve for uninterrupted tone volume all through the night. In event Babe, the old circus pachyderm, is missing, I can assure Zoo officials that she can be found, in the wee morning hours, stalking about in the flat above me, disguised in hard-heeled bedroom slippers.

Even Edison, who reputedly slept but four hours during the night, would be unable to get in his quota in these living quarters. A villa in Spain would prove a refreshing surcease but prohibitive in price, so we needs must flee to the traffic-torn city in order to obtain a night's rest.

If Proud Father can put us in touch with the apartment managements to which he referred, I know he will be charmed with the address which I shall give him.

Required Charity?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In regard to the lag in Community Chest contributions, would the fact that some firms arbitrarily force employees to make contributions they can ill afford have any connection? There are firms here where two days' pay or more is arbitrarily deducted from all employees. The alternative is loss of job, I believe.

Palestine's Hope.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In answer to Mr. Knott's letter of November 19, I wish to say as a 100-per-cent American Jewess that, in my opinion, the non-Jews are the cause of our so-called segregation.

The world is fully aware that we are not an inferior race. Our people have contributed more than their share in culture, arts, sciences, etc., and yet the doors of some of our leading colleges are closed or limited to Jewish youth, because of racial prejudice.

As a minority, without a country, we are in my opinion held in contempt. Our only solution is to establish a homeland in Palestine. Perhaps, as a nation, we shall be looked upon as a people deserving of respect.

For me, America is a land of freedom and opportunity, but what of the Jews in war-torn and prejudiced Europe? Their only escape is Palestine.

When Palestine is recognized as a Jewish nation, I am certain freedom will prevail there. To compare German nationalism with Jewish love for freedom and justice is to put a stigma on Jewish ideals.

AMERICAN JEWESS.

The Cost Of Electricity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I refer to Mr. Nicholas Norborne's letter of November 23. Mr. Norborne asks a question and does then unconsciousously answer it, and accurately. Tugwelltown? $9,000 houses? Select few? Then he asks "Why not take over and run the public utilities where all the people will be benefited?"

"Benefited," and how! If a Federal agency had our public utilities we would be going to bed by candlelight.

Your electric light and power bill, Mr. Norborne, costs you but one-third your milk bill, one-third your gasoline bill per month, for one car driving 11 miles to work and 11 miles home. It only equals your bread bill, and, perhaps, one-third of your butter bill.

A kilowatt-hour is approximately one and one-third horse power of energy for a period of one hour. The price of one egg would, therefore, keep about 16 100-watt lights burning for one hour.

Farming on a small scale is highly inefficient and unorganized. Public utilities are efficient and highly organized and serve the public at low cost. Now then, if you sincerely wish to do something "where all the people will be benefited alike," put the Federal Government into the milk, bread, egg and butter producing business (then live on white potatoes). And for your own sake, study your economics, have more faith in organized industry and less in a Federalized bureaucracy of hired hands to perform miracles.

Applause For Quezon.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Being a Filipino, I was stirred recently by letters in The Post advocating the appointment of a hard-headed high commissioner to the Philippines. Every broad-minded Filipino knows that it is contrary to democratic principles to have an ever-ready "yes, sir" as the American representative in the islands.

The vital need is to have somebody who is brave and intelligent enough to speak the truth; somebody who is an indefatigable worker and possesses a deep understanding of the people.

There is nothing now wrong with the administration of President Quezon. Like President Roosevelt, he has more human sympathy and goodness in his heart than any one of those who had wished to occupy his chair and now who privately tag him as a dictator. Under his guidance the one-year-old Philippine Commonwealth shall continue to develop rapidly in the spirit of peace, unity, as well as friendship with other nations.

SYLVESTER SATURDAY.
Washington, Nov. 26.

Wellington At War

Extract from an article in the current Infantry Journal by Maj. Gen. J. F. C. Fuller, British Army.

WELLINGTON'S foresight never failed him, in this most difficult of wars. Therefore it comes as a distinct surprise to find him taken off guard at Waterloo—his last and most decisive campaign. Undoubtedly he misjudged the Royalist strength in France, and was deceived as to the nature of Napoleon's movements. Yet, also, I think that there were too many attractive women in Brussels at the time. For instance, on June 13, when Napoleon was but 30 or 40 miles away, Wellington "took Lady Jane Lennox to Enghien for the cricket match . . . apparently having gone for no other object but to amuse her." And it is somewhat instructive to find him at 3 o'clock of the morning following the battle writing to Lady Frances Webster, "a very pretty woman," to tell her she might remain in Brussels "in perfect safety." Anyhow, the Duke of Richmond reports that during the famous ball given on the eve of the battle Wellington said to him, "Napoleon has humbugged me, by G——! He has gained 24 hours' march on me." Napoleon had gained the 24 hours all right, but it was Wellington himself who was responsible for the humbugging.

As a strategist Wellington was a truly great artist, because he possessed the faculty of being able to combine foresight with common sense. Consequently he never allowed his imagination to run away with his reason. Upon this foundation he built his tactics, and here again the same mental process is to be seen at work. Unlike most generals, he did not merely accept his army as a fighting instrument; instead he gauged its powers and limitations and devised his tactics accordingly. As an aristocrat he stood apart from his men. He disdainfully looked upon them as potential rabble and called them "the scum of the earth." Nor was he altogether wrong. For instance, in the winter of 1813-1814 the French peasants refused to accept Spanish dollars and English guineas. Therefore Wellington decided to set up a mint and appealed to his colonels to find him professional coiners. Forty were produced! Often has he been condemned for his cynical outlook; yet, in my opinion, it was justified, because whenever his men got out of hand, as they did at Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajoz, they behaved like fiends.

* * * *

Though he sometimes dealt leniently with desertion, he would never tolerate plundering. As an aristocrat his nature revolted at the thought of inflicting such hardship upon the common people; but more important still, he realized that plunder led to a relaxation of discipline and thereby impaired the fighting power of his army. It was for these reasons that his discipline was so severe and at times brutal. There are ten recorded cases of 1,200 lashes and 50 of 1,000 being given; up to 500 was a common punishment. Yet whatever we may think of this today, we must not overlook the fact that the age was brutal and that, tactically speaking, brutality paid. It was not the kindly general, such as Sir John Moore, who succeeded, but men like Wellington and Craufurd. Once when a commissary of the light division complained that Craufurd had threatened to hang him if supplies were not punctually delivered, Wellington replied: "Then I advise you to have them up in time. For Craufurd is just the man to keep his word." Further, it should be remembered that Wellington's system did succeed in fashioning an army which in 1813 "could go anywhere and do anything." Also he said: "There is but one way—to do as I did—to have a hand of iron."

* * * *

In spite of the fact that until near the close of the Peninsular War, his army was almost always outnumbered by the French, he was not one of those generals who saw strength numerically; he saw it in relation to bread and beef. He realized that a small army that could be adequately fed was tactically superior to a larger army that was reduced to foraging. As Sir Charles Oman says: "Wellington's salvation lay in the fact that he could hold his entire army together, while his adversaries could not." Even more clearly than Napoleon, did he realize that "an army marches upon its belly;" in other words, that there is a definite relationship between bread and bullets.

Since his army was small, he was compelled to be prudent; yet it is a great mistake to think, as many have done, that he was no more than a cautious general. Though a master in defensive war, he could, when conditions were favorable, be audacious in the extreme; witness Assaye and Argaum in 1803, the Vimiero and Talavera Campaigns, and the storming of Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajoz. His Fabian tactics were sheer common sense.

Indeed, few generals have understood the ingredients of tactics as thoroughly as he. He grasped the limitations of the musket of his day—that it was a deadly weapon at pointblank range, but next to useless at a distance. He realized that the dominant characteristics of the English soldier were steadiness and stolidity, two things that the French soldier did not possess. Therefore he could risk opposing the column tactics of the French by a two-deep line, thus developing his full fire power. In order to protect his men and also to mystify his enemy, he made the fullest use of cover by ground. This skillful use of terrain completely deceived Junot at Vimiero, and at Bussaco, caused Massena to mistake the British center for its right. At Salamanca and at Waterloo it was the same.

YOUR CORRESPONDENT is one of the 10,000 who have had a great human document, or book, this year, and while it is a nice looking book, with plenty of long words and shrewd insight calculated to make the people think, it begins to look as though it will be just one of the 9,999. The other book is "Gone With the Wind," which has become an industry by itself, with gross receipts of $3,000,000 assured by Christmas. Book people tell your correspondent that this was indeed an unfortunate year in which to have booked, so to speak, because Miss Margaret Mitchell, of Atlanta, is making all the money.

Just for an illustration, some dealers send in orders for maybe a dozen or possibly as many as a hundred copies of your correspondent's great human document, but when they order "Gone With the Wind" they want 10,000. Assuming that Miss Mitchell is receiving 15 per cent of the retail price, which is $3, she will have earned $450,000 by Christmas, not counting the moving picture rights, and, of course, the book will continue to sell in those big, clearing house figures for some months beyond that. Then it probably will drop to $2, like Hervey Allen's "Anthony Adverse," which hit the jackpot in 1933 and ran up a score of about 600,000 copies at $3 and 200,000 more at $2.

The book people say neither of these books will ever get mixed up with the percolators and bathing caps in the drug stores because the United States Pharmacopoeia calls for a price of not more than $1, and these are fat books which can hardly be manufactured for that.

STILL, H. G. Wells eventually reached the drug stores with his "Outline of History," which is a big, long book, and Will Durant's "Story of Philosophy" has become a popular sedative at $1 a copy after sales of 225,000 at $5 each. So maybe when "Tony" and the "Wind" have mopped up at $3 and $2 someone can sequeeze them into dollar compass, too.

Having a steady job, your correspondent is not seriously upset to discover that Miss Mitchell's book is almost a monopoly this year, but it must be depressing to some who are book writers by trade. This is a hazardous calling at best, because even in normal years a writer puts in months writing, rewriting and conferring, and then runs the risk that the customers will not buy, even if some publisher is willing to take a chance. But in normal years an ordinary reading book may draw a little attention and run up enough margin to see the author through another frugal summer in a farmhouse somewhere while another book is taking place.

Authors turn out some very nice books among the 10,000, and when they appear in the windows each one bespeaks much work and probably great anxiety and a little hope, like the hope of a man who owns a lottery ticket and doesn't really expect to win the capital prize but can't help thinking that he might.

Yet your correspondent is told that this year, as in Hervey Allen's year-and-somewhat on top of the trade, a book must be uncommonly swift or powerful to draw a dollar away from the big winner, because when people think of wanting a book they think of just one book.

THREE DOLLARS is an investment nowadays for people who buy reading, and Miss Mitchell gives them 1,300 pages—enough to last most of the winter, unless they skip or read fast. That tends to smother interest in the 9,999 others, and maybe the 9,999 other authors ought to have a law limiting the amount of reading that a writer can sell for $3.

That is just a thought, however, and not a definite proposal, because the others might not sell in Miss Mitchell's brackets, if they were twice as fat and twice as cheap, including, your correspondent is forced to believe, his own great human document. Another and perhaps better thought is that too many people write too many books, because surely 10,000 is overdoing it by eight or nine thousand. Your correspondent has just determined to take the lead in this laudable movement, if only to relieve the heterogeneous confusion in the drug stores.

The story of Miss Mitchell's strike is almost as fascinating as the story she wrote between boards. A year ago she was unknown, but today, through the merit of a great job of work in a crowded field, she is famous and also rich. Unfortunately, her success, far from deterring authors, will be more likely to provoke even more books, but it is possible that in causing more writing she will inspire the 9,999 others to try a little harder and write a little better human documents.

A Poet's Birthday

By William Lyon Phelps

William Blake.

Today we celebrate (that is, all who read this article (the birthday of the English poet, William Blake, who was born on November 28, 1757, and who died in 1827, on the verge of 70.

The eighteenth century began with the death of Dryden and the rise of Pope, both famous poets, but both children of this world, and wiser in their generation than the children of light. The eighteenth century ended in a blaze of romance and amid the wildest flights of imagination—the extreme range of poetic genius is shown if you compare Pope with Blake.

• • • •

The poetry of William Blake is far better known today than when he was alive; few paid any attention to him, he had the greatest difficulty in getting his poems published, he died in obscurity and was buried in a pauper's grave.

His father was a small London shopkeeper; at 10 years old he was apprenticed to an engraver. His own engravings today occupy a distinguished place in the history of art. They are as original as his poems.

When he was 25 he married an ignorant daughter of a market gardner. She was a splendid girl, one of the best wives a man of genius ever had. She believed absolutely in the genius of her strange husband and her influence on him was both inspiring and profoundly wise.

Blake was a mystic, living not in time but in eternity; the figures of his powerful and radiant imagination were more distinct to him than anything tangible; during his earthly pilgrimage he was homesick for heaven. Even when he was a child, on returning from a walk in the fields, he said he had seen angels walking among haymakers, for which remark his father was going to give him a sound whipping, believing him to be a liar.

• • • •

It is significant that his best poetry was written early and his best engraving done late; but he was always original.

Before he was 14, he wrote a poem which begins as follows:

"How sweet I roamed from field to field.
And tasted all the summer's pride,
Till I the Prince of Love beheld,
Who in the sunny beams did glide!

He showed me lilies for my hair,
And blushing roses for my brow;
He led me through his gardens fair,
Where all his golden pleasures grow."

"Tiger! Tiger! burning bright
In the forests of the night,
What immortal hand or eye
Could frame thy fearful symmetry?"

China's New Yuan

Chinese Economist Indorses New Currency, Seeing In Its Stability A Turning Point For Nation's Commerce.

By Lin Lin.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

CHINA has now established a unified and stable national currency. Much of its success might be credited to the co-operation of the United States. A year ago this month (in November, 1935) China surprised the whole world by announcing that she was abandoning silver as money and was embarking on a new monetary system. This is, indeed, the most drastic monetary and banking reform that China has ever undertaken. Though well received and highly praised throughout the world, doubts as to the possibility of its success were voiced in many quarters. Some observers abroad even predicted its immediate failure.

In an article published in The Post November 10, 1935, the writer expressed his firm belief that the new system would be carried out with success and that both China and other countries having trade with her would greatly profit by its successful operation.

Twelve months have now elapsed since the new system came into existence and not only has the domestic exchange business greatly improved, but also foreign exchange has been held remarkably stable. Prior to the introduction of the new system an advance or a fall of 20 to 30 per cent within a single year in the foreign exchange rates was not an unusual experience. China's foreign exchange was then tied to the fluctuating world price of silver, and was "managed" by a corps of speculators at home and abroad at the expense of the Chinese government and the legitimate and honest investors and business men.

Now, under the new arrangement, the tie between China's currency and silver price has been cut loose and foreign exchange is under the control of the government banks. Under the direction of T. V. Soong, China's ablest financier and banker, the new "management" has proved itself to the benefit of all concerned. The remarkable steadiness of the yuan (the basic unit of China's money) under the new system will be seen by an examination of its exchange rates.

Since November, 1935, the highest average weekly rate in terms of the dollar is $0.3007 per yuan, and the lowest, $0.2932, a small range of $0.0075. For the pound, the highest is £0-14 20-32, and the lowest, £0-14 9-32, a spread of only 11-32.

Monetary Reforms Have Broad Effects.

THE EFFECT of the new monetary system, so successfully operated, is far-reaching. It was, the writer believes, the turning point in China's finance and business.

First of all, it restored confidence in the yuan. Along with this restoration of confidence there came, temporarily, at least, a halt in the flight of capital and a check on the drain of the country's stock of silver. General improvement is further evidenced by the absence of runs and bank failures during the past year. Banks in general are reported to have made profits for the first time since the depression. There is an abundant supply of cash available for the use of commerce, agriculture and industry.

The note issues of the three government banks since the change have been more than double the total issues outstanding at the end of October, 1935. This increase is a logical outcome of the policy of the nationalization of silver and of the program of exchange stabilization at a lower rate. It can hardly be interpreted as inflation for the very fact that all the notes issued, new and old, have been safely secured by cash reserves of more than 60 per cent—a margin of safety which is greater than that maintained by a large number of central banks in the world today. However, the wisdom of tying up all the "profits" derived from the program of reform by the issuance of notes is subject to criticism. It would seem desirable that an exchange stabilization fund be set aside out of these "profits" in order to meet any contingencies or emergencies.

Secondly, the recent reform at once stopped the distressing trend of depression. The downward movement of commodity prices, especially for farm products, was immediately halted. At the end of August this year, for example, the index of wholesale prices and that of export prices of agricultural products in Shanghai showed an increase since October of last year of 14 per cent and 38 per cent, respectively. It is worthy of notice that the general index of the cost of living in Shanghai increased by only 11 per cent.

Forward Strides Won By Foreign Trade.

THE FOREIGN TRADE of China is unmistakably improving. Net imports, for the first nine months of this year, are valued at 685,000,000 yuan; net exports at 508,000,000. Total value of the imports and the exports combined amounts to 1,193,000,000 yuan. This shows an increase of 77,000,000 over the same period last year.

On closer examination two other factors stand out with equal significance: the steadfast increase in exports and the sharp decrease in the adverse balance of trade. The total gain in exports of this year over the same period of last year is more than 111,000,000 yuan, while the adverse balance is decreased by 146,000,000. If, however, the value of goods smuggled into North China, of which no record is available, but an estimate of 200,000,000 yuan has been suggested, is added to net imports, then the size of the adverse trade balance may appear as large as that of a year ago. Undoubtedly the wholesale smuggling sponsored by Japan, as reported, has greatly reduced the national revenue of China and threatened the stability of China's new currency. It has also cut into the profits of the legitimate exporters and importers alike. Nevertheless, the foreign trade as a whole still points in the direction of material improvement.

It must be understood that China's monetary reform is only one factor in the generally improved condition of the country. Recovery has been further aided by the cessation of civil wars, the restoration of order in the bandit-stricken interior, the development of better means of transportation and communications and, finally, the general recovery of the whole world. For the first time since the establishment of the republic in 1911, the writer sees political and economic factors working together toward the unification of China.

Overseas Chinese Swell Trade Balances.

ONE OF the important factors in the economic welfare of China is the remittances made by overseas Chinese, which are reported to be increasing largely as a result of the world's general recovery. With the possibility of further increase in these remittances from overseas and the reduction of the adverse trade balance, the seriousness of the problem of the unfavorable balance of international payments will be greatly lessened.

It is the opinion of the writer that what China needs most today is foreign credit in the form of long-term investments for the development of new industry in various fields. It is highly important, of course, that such loans or investments be made entirely without political commitments. It is encouraging to note that Great Britain has recently sent a new envoy to China with the aim of promoting Sino-British trade by means of state export credits. It is uncertain whether the United States, the best seller and the best buyer in Chinese markets, contemplates a similar plan for the furtherance of trade in China.

As the writer sees it, the silver purchase policy of the United States has greatly helped in the process of the stabilization of China's currency, but at a high price! In the first place, though quite contrary to its own intent, the United States silver purchase policy forced China to abandon the silver standard and thus paved the way for the sorely needed but long belated monetary reform. In the second place, it assured China a market for her nationalized silver and thus provided her with substantial amounts of foreign exchange balances, without which the maintenance of the new exchange level would be very difficult. However, it is highly debatable whether China could not have achieved the same result at a smaller cost. The great sufferings China endured from the United States silver policy have already been pointed out by many writers and no further elucidation is needed here.

Nevertheless, here is the most significant point: The United States authorities did give China timely assistance after she abandoned silver. It indicates, above all, what good might be accomplished in the matter of exchange stabilization by means of international co-operation.

Red Herring

Behind Tokyo-Berlin Smoke Screen.

IT IS BEING taken for granted that the German-Japanese agreement of November 25 conceals more than it reveals.

Its real importance, many say, is not that it constitutes an alliance against the moribund Third Internationale, but that it secretly paves the way for joint military action against the Comintern's host—Russia—with the ultimate purpose of partitioning the Soviet union.

Others point out, however, that Japan is far too busy in China right now to have any energy left for a conquest of Eastern Siberia; that Germany cannot directly attack Russia without the consent and the co-operation of Poland, a consent not likely to be granted. They argue, therefore, that the threat embodied in the Tokyo-Berlin accord does not immediately concern Russia at all. It is Czechoslovakia, on the one hand, and China, on the other, they say, that may first feel the force of this agreement. And from London comes the report that British statesmen are fearful that what is really behind the drawing together of the Nazis and the Nipponese is the ambitious design of dividing the rich Dutch East Indies between Germany and Japan.

THAT THESE various interpretations have some point cannot be doubted. Both Japan and Germany are aggressive powers and the unfortunate presumption behind every act of diplomacy entered into by either is that in one way or another it is intended to make possible some act or acts of aggression.

Yet it would be absurd to dismiss the anti-communist phase of the agreement as in itself meaningless. On the contrary it suggests in very startling form the technique which the German and Japanese warlords propose to apply as the diplomatic and propagandist annex to direct war preparations. It is the technique of the Eumenidae, that sting their opponents into insensibility before devouring them.

The key to German-Japanese plans is to be found in the supplementary protocol of the agreement. This pledges the two nations to joint measures against all those who "at home or abroad, directly or indirectly, are active in the service of the Communist Internationale or lend a helping hand to its disruptive work."

• • • •

THE PRESUMPTION it embodies is that both Germany and Japan feel themselves threatened by communism which, in turn, is so powerful a force in the world that a union of all anti-communist nations is peremptory.

Now as it happens both Japan and Germany would vociferously deny that the danger to the regimes at Tokyo and Berlin from native communists is particularly great. Japanese spokesmen never cease boasting of the deep-seated patriotism of the Nipponese and their intense devotion to the Emperor. Moreover the authorities have seen to it that communism is dealt with as the most dangerous of "dangerous thoughts." Open propagation of the Comintern's creed is out of the question in the Japanese islands. As for Germany, it is part of the official thesis that Hitler saved the Reich from communism. Presumably it remains saved.

IS THEN the alarm of Germany and Japan artificially created to disguise some other purpose than anti-communism? This is no doubt largely the case. Yet there is a sub-stratum of fear in the minds of Japanese and German leaders which cannot be ignored. Japan's social, political and economic structure is far from stable. Underneath the placid surface, volcanic forces are raging as the February, 1936, uprising clearly revealed.

And as for Germany, it is a fact not sufficiently comprehended that the Nazi regime, though elevated to power on a program of anti-Marxism resembles to a fundamental degree the Bolshevist system which it so thoroughly hates. In the Third Reich, in fact, free capitalism has disappeared and the institution of private property which is capitalism's greatest bulwark, exists no longer by right but by sufferance.

• • • •

THERE APPEARS to be no possibility of any immediate communist coup either in Japan or Germany. If it has any substance at all, therefore, the anti-communist fears of the two nations must be regarded as a fear from without.

But is it true that communism today constitutes a real threat in the world? The only contemporary communist movements of any importance, outside of Russia, are (a) in China and (b) in Spain. But in China the Red armies constitute no real or immediate threat either to the Nanking government or to Japan. Far more dangerous to the hegemony which Japan has been seeking to establish in Eastern Asia is the development of Chinese nationalism and the growth in power of an increasingly nationalistic Russia.

When Japan speaks of the threat of communism it means, therefore, the threat of a combined effort against the island empire by China and Russia. The Chinese Reds are merely the excuse. As for Spain, communism there is only one element in the Popular Front. If support by Communists makes a man or government communistic then Mr. Hearst was right about Mr. Roosevelt and the United States today is a Communist state.

THIS, OF COURSE, is nonsense. But the argument can, nonetheless, have a persuasive force among all those opposed to all economic reforms and hence prone to regard all liberal and radical movements as communistic. It is to this element which Germany is appealing as well as to the element which, for whatever reason, hates Russia. It is with their aid Germany hopes to conquer. The point of leverage is the identification of Russia and communism. But it is Russia, rather than communism, which is the real enemy in the eyes of the Third Reich.

At any rate Germany and Japan, declaring themselves menaced by communism, have now informed the world that they are out to smash it. If it no longer exists at home, they will smash it abroad. If national sovereignty stands in the way they will ignore that doctrine as they have respectively ignored it so far as China and Spain are concerned. Those not with them will be against them; those refusing to join in the anti-communist crusade will be looked upon as Red nations. And it is they who will say what is communist and what is not. It is a doctrine of war and aggression. And so far as this hemisphere is concerned the answer was given by President Roosevelt at Rio de Janeiro when he said that the nations of this hemisphere "cannot countenance aggression—from wheresoever it may come."

There is such a thing as taking in too much ground. The Germany of William II forgot that point and destroyed itself. Is history about to be repeated? In arousing the alarm at one and the same time not only of Russia, but also of France, Great Britain, Czechoslovakia, Holland and China, Germany and its newest partner have adumbrated a program which may prove to be just a trifle too ambitious.

The Trotting Horse Club of America announces that it is going to do something about all the hocus-pocus that mars the start of all trotting races. The suspension of a driver who deliberately gums up a good start just because he hasn't the best of it is proposed in 1937. That howl you hear shaking the hillsides comes from those hardboiled, shrewd and designing fellows, the trotting horse drivers who have spent their lives making it a fine art to delay the starts until they had all the best of it.

Burglars took over a New York apartment house, ran it for half a day, ripped out a floor while they robbed a store below and got away without even seeing a policeman. This brings up once more the mystery of where those great hordes of policemen go when not at a world series.

Cultured Olympics

Philadelphia Philanthropist's Aim To Promote Esthetic Life Of Youth Furthered By U. Of Penn. Announcement.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

A FEW DAYS ago the president of the University of Pennsylvania announced that the institution will sponsor an annual Cultural Olympics, consisting of competition in the fine and applied arts among amateurs of all ages and conditions. At first covering Philadelphia and contiguous territory, it is hoped, he said, that the event will become national. Thus it may take its place in the program for destroying leisure that has been built up by local, State and Federal agencies.

The news was sufficiently different to receive extensive publication in out-of-town papers, but in Philadelphia it was printed concisely, and on inside pages. The last was because the city has been prepared to become the Athens of America over at least the past seven years, by various pleas for developing "Playgrounds for the Soul," "Art Sanctuaries," and "Youth Temples," that have been made by Samuel S. Fleisher, one of its most distinguished philanthropists, and by several ventures in that direction by individuals and societies with most of which he has been associated.

Mr. Fleisher, whose private benefactions have been numerous, and largely along the line of developing and satisfying the esthetic longings of youth, has persisted as a one-man crusade to the point at which public needs and public interest have overtaken him. Before his sixty-fifth birthday, which is two years away, he is certain now to see youth and adults of his native city competing as ardently for preeminence in music, arts and crafts, literature, drama and the dance, as they have competed heretofore in boxing, basketball, football, baseball, on the track and in business.

Proposal Has Virtue Of Concreteness.

AS STATED by Dr. Thomas S. Gates, who resigned from Drexel & Co. to assume his present position as president of the University of Pennsylvania, the project lacks something of the poetic atmosphere that Mr. Fleisher has given it in his numerous talks and interviews since 1929, but it has the greater merit of having been made concrete and actual.

"The primary purpose of the cultural Olympics will be first, to discover, and secondly, to encourage, both children and adults who have latent talents in cultural pursuits," Dr. Gates announced. "In accordance with the first objective mentioned, an effort will be made to bring the cultural Olympics to the attention of as many potential competitors as possible by establishing contacts with churches, schools, museums, institutes, settlement houses, clubs and other institutions and organizations which might serve as helpful clearing houses for information concerning the project. . . ."

Cultural Contests Not New In Schools.

AMONG some of the schools and colleges of the region, cultural contests are, besides, in the nature of standard practice. Recently a New Jersey high school announced the results of an intra-mural competition in short story, verse, and article writing. The Browning Society of Philadelphia has conducted verse writing competitions among students of the University of Pennsylvania, Bryn Mawr, Haverford and Swarthmore, that have discovered clever poets, who later have made their mark—in prose. Scholarships in art have led to competition, as have school orchestras. In other ways there is an actual basis of development of the proposed contests.

Among adults who are out of school there are contestants to be found, probably, among those who write furiously on the merits of household heaters and other commodities as entrants in the advertising, radio, puzzle and other contests that lately have been characteristic of the national culture. Hobby leagues have encouraged art studies among business men. Instruction in piccolo playing for brokers, tap dancing for matrons, theatricals for everybody, shop work for clergymen and research for mechanics, has become a commonplace of local WPA projects and adult education programs.

Most or all of these activities will contribute in some degree to the development of the artistic side of life that has been dominant in the public and private activities of the Philadelphian whose brain evolved the idea of the cultural Olympics. There are few organized agencies in the city for encouraging esthetically cultural pursuits with which Mr. Fleisher has not become identified, at the request of those who were interested in making them successful and in virtually every case students from the Graphic Sketch Club have participated. This has been because, for the most part, the inner spark that has kept the interest in such things alive in Philadelphia has been this philanthropist's. He has had the vision, and the gift of phrase making.

In October, 1929, upon leaving the city to attend the sixteenth annual National Recreation Congress in Louisville, Ky., he expressed his intention to propose a Temple of Youth, in which competitive esthetice would find the same kind of place that competitive athletics find in the stadium. Music, the dance, arts, poetry, oratory and debating were the departments he suggested at the time.

"I would not have less athletics," he said. "I would just add more art. I think young people should have recreation for their souls as well as their bodies. And I think they should feel as free to exclaim over a sunset as a baseball game."

IN FOLLOWING YEARS Mr. Fleisher hit upon another phrase for the stadia, school teachers, and settlement house studios which he thought of as training fields for cultural competition. At a meeting of Philadelphians in 1934 at which use of leisure time was discussed by various leaders, some of them from the point of view of crime prevention, some from that of building up the morale of unemployed youth, some even from that of letting children guide themselves among publicly supported playgrounds, museums and libraries, Mr. Fleisher pointed out, "We have plenty of facilities for those who desire to play baseball, basketball, tennis, or football, but what we really need is playgrounds for the soul."

Dr. F. B. Harris Opens Church Mission Series

Foundry Services to Last Most of Week; Hamline to Burn Mortgage.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, minister, will open Foundry Church's preaching mission tomorrow with sermons at morning and evening services. He will preach at 11 a. m. on "Do We Need a Preaching, or a Practicing, Mission?" and at 8 p. m. on "Take Care What Ye Hear."

Services will be held each of the first four nights of the week at 8 p. m. Dr. Harris will have charge.

Waugh M. E. Church. A preaching mission will begin with 11 a. m. services tomorrow. The Rev. Allan F. Poore, pastor, will preach then on "Something Personal." At 8 p. m. his subject will be "Not Too Late." Services are planned for each night next week except on Saturday night.

Wesley M. E. Church. The Rev. J. Luther Neff, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Finding God." The sermon will conclude a series on "God."

Ryland M. E. Church. "The Sufficient Cure" is the theme, upon which the Rev. Karl G. Newell, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m.

The church will unite with the Southwest preaching mission for the evening service at 8 p. m. in Kendall Baptist Church. Other union services are planned for each night next week with the exception of Monday and Saturday.

Hamline M. E. Church. The congregation will hold a mortgage-burning service at 11 a. m. tomorrow. The church has just closed a 12-month debt campaign, during which $33,500 was obtained. This amount completed the payment in full of the $50,000 mortgage against the church.

Dr. H. W. Burgan, pastor, will preach and conduct the special service. The mortgage will be burned by E. D. Godfrey, only living charter member of the old Hamline Church, organized in 1865.

Lincoln Road M. E. Church. The Rev. Reginald Heber Stone, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Your Place in the Church of God." Officers of the Baraca-Philathea Class will be installed at 8 p. m., after which the pastor will speak on "The Riddle of Life."

Eldbrooke M. E. Church. The Rev. Walter M. Michael, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Who Can Be Saved?" At 8 p. m. worship he will preach on "Unbalanced Lives."

Calvary M. E. Church South. The Rev. W. D. Keene, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. service on "Our Perverse Generation and the Helpless Church." There will be no evening service in the church because of union services in Dumbarton M. E. Church at 7 p. m.

McKendree M. E. Church. "Marks on Their Foreheads" is the subject on which the Rev. Samuel E. Rose, pastor, will preach at 8 p. m. His morning sermon will be on "The Temple Vision."

Francis Asbury M. E. Church South. The Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, pastor, will preach on "Man Seeking God" at 11 a. m. and on "God Seeking Man" at night. These services will mark the beginning of the eight-day preaching mission to be held in the church each evening next week.

Trinity M. E. Church. Joash Day will be observed tomorrow morning and the Pageant of the Chest will be presented. At 8 p. m. a sacred song service entitled "The Shadow of the Cross" will be given, with the vocal quartet, the choir and the congregation participating. The church will continue the preaching mission with services each night next week, with the exception of Monday and Saturday.

Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South. The Rev. John W. Rustin, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m., on "What Does the Church Say?" "Another Chance" is the evening subject.

Dumbarton Avenue M. E. Church. Dr. G. Ellis Williams, superintendent of the Washington District, will speak at 11 a. m. services tomorrow. At 7 p. m. there will be a rally of young people of Georgetown churches in the church auditorium, and the Rev. William Andrew Keese, pastor of National Memorial M. E. Church, will give the address.

Chevy Chase M. E. Church. The Rev. Edward G. Latch, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. services on "Peter the Rock."

Petworth M. E. Church. A symposium on "The Kind of Preaching That Helps Me" will be presented by five laymen of the congregation at 8 p. m. services tomorrow. The Rev. R. L. Wood, pastor, will speak on "The Glory of Preaching."

He will conduct the morning services also, and preach on "What God Hates Most."

Calvary M. E. Church. "Our Patron Saint" will be the subject of the sermon to be given by the minister, the Rev. Frank Steelman, D. D., tomorrow morning. The Woman's Home Missionary Society will be in charge of the evening service and Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan will speak on "The Working of the W. H. M. S."

Bishop Will Speak Tomorrow At Choral Litany in Cathedral

Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman Will Deliver Sermon in Observance of First Sunday in Advent; Epiphany Announces Special Communion.

In observance of the first Sunday in Advent the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., bishop of Washington, will deliver the sermon at the service of choral litany in the great choir of Washington Cathedral at 4 p. m. tomorrow.

The preacher at the celebration of the Holy Communion at 11 a. m. will be Canon Anson Phelps Stokes. Music for both services will be furnished by the cathedral choir of men and boys, directed by Robert G. Barrow.

Services for the Day will begin with celebration of the Holy Communion in St. Mary's Chapel at 7:30 a. m.

Bishop Freeman will address a large mass meeting in Philadelphia next Wednesday night under the auspices of the National Preaching Mission, and will arrive in Boston Friday for similar appointments.

Church of the Epiphany. Members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and all men and boys of the parish, are invited to a special celebration of Holy Communion at 8 a. m. tomorrow in the church. This is part of an annual nation-wide corporate communion sponsored by the brotherhood.

This service will be followed at 11 a. m. by morning prayer, during which the Rev. Z. B. Phillips, rector, will deliver the sermon.

The Rev. Richard A. Cartmell, assistant to the rector, will preach at the 8 o'clock evensong service.

St. John's Episcopal Church. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., rector, will preach at 9:30 a. m. and 11 a. m. services on "The Coming of Christ." Holy Communion will be celebrated at 8 a. m. Evening prayer and sermon is at 8 p. m.

Music at both the morning services will be under the direction of Arthur Howes, organist and choirmaster.

St. Mark's Episcopal Church. A new organ will be dedicated at special services at 11 a. m. tomorrow.

Installation of the organ, built from parts of two historic instruments, was made possible through the legacy in the will of Mrs. Helen R. Stetson, wife of the Rev. Caleb R. Stetson, former rector of the parish. Builders of the instruments used parts of the old St. Mark's organ and the instrument in historic old Trinity Church.

Many former members of old Trinity Church now living in Washington are expected at this service, as are members of the present congregation. The organ will be dedicated by the Rev. William Moody, rector. At the console of the new organ will be Samuel Wood, organist and choirmaster. St. Mark's choir of men and boys will sing special numbers.

St. Paul's Parish, Rock Creek Parish. The Rev. Arthur Ribble, rector of St. Paul's Church in Hamilton, Va., and also of churches in Purcellville, Round Hill and Lucketts, Va., will be guest preacher at 11 a. m. service tomorrow.

Men and boys of the parish will attend the special corporate communion service at 8:30 a. m. Rock Creek Players will present the farce "The Whole Town's Talking" Thursday night.

Christ Church. The Rev. R. B. Campbell, B. D., of the Virginia Theological Seminary, will open a series of Advent sermons at 8 p. m. tomorrow. The general theme will be "The Golden Thread of Prophecy."

Theme Announced For Lesson-Sermon

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Matthew 4:10: "It is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and, having done all, to stand." (Ephesians 6:13).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Clad in the panoply of Love, human hatred cannot reach you. The cement of a higher humanity will unite all interests in the one divinity."

Dr. Ness to Preach For United Brethren

Dr. John H. Ness, conference superintendent, will preach at 8 p. m. service tomorrow in Memorial United Brethren Church, North Capitol and R streets. The congregation's first quarterly conference will follow this service.

Clubwomen Sponsoring World Archives Center

News of New York Meeting to Spur Movement Received With Interest Here; Mrs. Roosevelt Heads Distinguished Group Supporting Plan.

Washington women have learned with great interest of the meeting held in New York on Tuesday in behalf of the movement to establish a world center for women's archives. When Mrs. Mary Beard, author and historian and instigator of the movement, was in Washington last spring she was the guest of honor and speaker at a number of luncheons and meetings of the women's organizations of Washington and many of our leading women became active supporters of the movement.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, has allowed her name to be used on the list of sponsors and so has the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins. Other women sponsoring the movement include Dr. Florence Sabin, Judge Florence Allen, Miss Ida Tarbell, Miss Fannie Hurst, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Mary Van Kleech and Mrs. Harriot Dyanton Blatch.

The meeting in New York was held in the home of Mrs. Edward Norman, who is well known among the women engaged in progressive women's movements in Washington.

Dean to Be Honored.

Washington university and college women are preparing a special welcome to Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, of Barnard College, when she comes to Washington next month. Dean Gildersleeve has just been named as the recipient of this year's achievement award. Dean Gildersleeve is president of the International Federation of University Women, but is best known in Washington as the leader in the campaign for a million dollar fellowship fund of the American Association of University Women. The distinguished educator has spent much of her time in Washington and is very popular among all groups of women active in educational affairs here.

The million dollar fund for educational work of the American Association of University Women was approved a short time before the financial crash of 1929 and has been rather slow of growth since that time. But the women of the American Association of University Women express satisfaction that interest has not abated. Through the hard work of Dean Gildersleeve and others the fund has grown and with the return of prosperity it is sure to reach the goal.

Mount Vernon Pilgrimage.

A pretty ceremony took place at Mount Vernon yesterday when members of the Junior American Citizens Clubs of the D. A. R., led by Miss Lilian Chenoweth, State vice regent of the D. A. R., placed a wreath on the tomb of George Washington, who issued the first Presidential Thanksgiving proclamation. The Nathan Hale, Mount Vernon, Betsy Ross and Georgetown Junior Citizen Clubs were represented.

The smallest boy in the group, Pat Hardesty, placed the wreath on the tomb of Washington while the smallest girl, Mary Poole, placed the wreath on the tomb of Martha Washington. Mrs. Joseph W. Saunders, State chairman of the Junior American Citizens, was in charge of the pilgrimage.

The Writers League met last night at the Thomson School. Short stories were read by Miss Elizabeth Laymon and Mr. Mayne R. Coe. Miss Ivy Lindsley read selections from her book of verse, "What Matter Time or Tide," just published.

Miss Katherine M. Hopson, secretary, is chairman of the feature article contest sponsored by the league.

War Mothers Party.

The American War Mothers held a post-Thanksgiving party at their headquarters at 1527 New Hampshire avenue northwest last night. One of the features of the entertainment was the "country store" where as many articles as are to be found in a country store could be purchased. A card party also took place. Mrs. Elizabeth Roddy, president, received the guests. Mrs. John Eckert was in charge of the card party.

Mrs. Roddy has announced the following chairmen of committees for 1936-1937: Mrs. Gary Walters, ways and means; Mrs. John Eckert, welfare; Mrs. Emma K. Pairo, Americanization; Mrs. Julia Bromley, hospitalization; Mrs. D. J. Carroll, membership; Mrs. Walter Criswell, sunshine; Mrs. Laura Behrens, legislation, and Mrs. Lucy Campbell, prisons.

P. E. O. Luncheon.

The monthly luncheon of the P. E. O. will be held in the tea rooms of Woodward & Lothrop Wednesday, December 2, at 12:30 p. m. Members of Chapter L, of which Mrs. Celene W. Frizzell is president, will be hostesses.

Mrs. Governor Daws will be hostess at the luncheon following the meeting of the Women's Alliance of All Souls' Unitarian Church today at 11 o'clock. Dr. Wesley Gewehr, professor of history of American University, will be the guest speaker. He will speak on "Cross Currents in Europe." Assisting the hostess will be Mrs. R. H. Higgons, Mrs. J. G. Hefty, Mrs. Mary Tighe, Mrs. F. G. Harden, Miss Carrie B. Lincoln, Mrs. Morton G. Lloyd, Miss Helen G. Nichols, Mrs. G. W. Berge and Mrs. W. R. Johnson.

Willetts Play Hosts For Pre-Game Party

The Army and Navy game today was the inspiration for a number of dinner parties given last evening by groups who will attend the event in Philadelphia this afternoon.

One such group which formed a dinner party at the Shoreham Hotel last evening included Mr. and Mrs. W. Edward Willett, who were hosts to the party at cocktails before the dinner; Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. John B. Griggs, jr., Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Ralph E. McShane, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Clayton S. Isgrig, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Merrill Comstock, and their house guests, Lieut. and Mrs. C. Carter Anderson, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Trainer, all of Akron, Ohio; also Mr. Joseph Bent.

Boy, Girl Scouts Aid Christmas Seal Drive

Troops of Boy and Girl Scouts yesterday volunteered to distribute the new window cards and posters for the Christmas seals campaign of the Tuberculosis Association, starting this morning.

"Protect your home from tuberculosis" is the slogan on each poster and card under a picture of Santa Claus and the red double-barred cross, world-wide symbol of the tuberculosis fight. Each Scout was decorated with a Santa Claus button and red barred cross pin after listening to an address from the scout master explaining the Christmas seal campaign.

Long French windows, with drapes to match the walls, conceal the portholes. The floor is dropped to provide a 15-foot ceiling. A few vases of yellow chrysanthemums were the only decoration.

The Alva was moored at Terminal Island 9-acre estate of William K. Vanderbilt, the bride's father. The Vanderbilts are living abroad until their $150,000 villa is completed. Meanwhile, Vanderbilt remarked, "We're practically camping out."

County Judge W. F. Blanton performed the ring ceremony in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Armstead Davis, of Washington, mother of the bridegroom, and Col. and Mrs. Jacques Balsan, of Paris. Mrs. Balsan, the bride's aunt, was another Consuelo Vanderbilt.

After the ceremony a luncheon was served in the dining salon, where the bride cut a big wedding cake. Then the couple left in a speedboat to start on their honeymoon. They declined to disclose their destination.

The bride's first husband was Earl E. T. Smith, son of Mrs. Tailer Carpenter. They were married at the Vanderbilt home in New York in 1926 and divorced in Reno last June.

Davis was divorced in Wyoming last August from his present wife's cousin, the former Grace Vanderbilt. He is a grandson of the late Henry Gassaway Davis, Senator from West Virginia and Democratic Vice Presidential nominee in 1904.

Red Cross Sending $10,000 to Juneau

A total of $10,000 has been made available by the American Red Cross for emergency care and rehabilitation of the families affected by the landslide at Juneau, Alaska, it was announced yesterday by James L. Fieser, acting chairman.

Of this sum, $5,000 was donated by the national organization and a like amount by the Juneau chapter. According to information received from A. L. Schafer, Pacific Coast manager for the Red Cross, 15 families will require assistance in rebuilding or repairing their homes.

Woman, 65, Declines Dakota Pension Check

Pierre, S. Dak., Nov. 27 (AP).—The State welfare commission today told of a 65-year-old woman who would not accept her old-age pension, although she had qualified for assistance.

Explaining she had received money she did not expect, the woman returned her October and November checks.

"I return my old-age assistance money back to you," her letter said. "I got some money I never expect, so I don't nead pension for while. Please sent me recete."

George Scott Findlays Back From Europe Spa

Mr. and Mrs. George Scott Findlay have arrived from New York, where they landed from the Empress of Britain after an extended stay in Badgastein, Austria.

Mr. and Mrs. Findlay divide their time between Washington—they have a home at 2232 Massachusetts avenue—and Charleston, S. C., and California, and also spend considerable time traveling abroad each year. On the present trip they are accompanied by their nephew, Mr. William J. McClure, of the Seven-C Ranch, in Oklahoma. They are staying for the present at the Shoreham.

Fete Texas Guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Wilber entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening for their guests, Mrs. T. L. Bradford, of Dallas, Tex., and her daughter, Miss Tommy Bradford, who is a student at Holton Arms.

War Debt Duns Again Are Sent To 13 Nations

The semiannual routine of dispatching duns to the country's war debtors has been observed again, the State Department announced yesterday.

Of $155,093,973.74 due on December 15, and of a previously due and unpaid balance of $1,159,958,451.15 the United States will probably receive a small payment from Finland, as usual.

The 13 nations who owe the United States money are notified semiannually of the latest extent of their past due debt, the interest due, the moratorium annuities due and of the size of the latest installment due. The routine then includes the receipt of 12 messages from 12 governments, inclosing regrets, but no checks.

The other message is from Finland, who owes us $231,315.50 this time, and $23,308,312 altogether.

None of the other debtor nations has paid a dime since shortly after the Hoover moratorium, with the exception of Finland and a small amount from Greece.

European debt discussions, recently reported in foreign dispatches, suggesting ways and means to cancel the remainders, or at least to work out new settlements involving great reductions, have not yet officially reached our diplomats' ears, according to State Department officials.

Even if new propositions were made to this coutnry, their consideration would devolve on a recreated Congressional debt refunding commission, it was indicated.

Sea Bunk (on Land) Cures His Insomnia

Seattle, Nov. 27 (AP).—Capt. Thomas Patrick Quinn, a sea-farming man, has found a treatment for the "shoreside insomnia" that has dogged him since the maritime strike tied up his craft.

Spurning doctors and pills, Quinn built himself a bunk of Philippine mahogany, "with lockers and everything." It produced some results, he said.

Mexican Oil Workers Cancel Strike Plans

Mexico City, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—The union of Mexican petroleum workers and representatives of oil companies operating in Mexico reached an agreement tonight whereby Sunday's threatened strike will be called off.

A meeting of workers and operators will be convoked under auspices of the Labor Department to draft a new "contract law" for the entire industry.

The agreement provides the contract must be drawn up within four months. It further provides that all future strikes may be called only after a referendum in which the workers approve a walkout by a two-thirds majority.

Gay Black and White Ball Attended by Younger Set

By Marylyn Reave.

The wind whipping around corners and down Connecticut avenue grabbed greedily at silk toppers and long trailing wraps and trains last evening as the members of the younger set alighted from their cars and hustled into the Mayflower, where the Black and White Ball was given by Mrs. William Laird Dunlop. The large moon, an unsympathetic, chilly one, looked down on the busy scene. Within, the lobby was filled with gay, animated groups, their faces seeming even brighter and pinker in contrast with the somber dignity of their black and white attire.

At the door of the grand ballroom two Pierrots in loose white and black satin costumes impatiently fidgeted with their long trumpets, anxiously awaiting 10 o'clock, when the tall mirrored doors swung open. After the battery of photographers had flashed their lights and clicked their lenses from every possible angle, the scene was restored to order and the long procession of guests commenced going down the line. Mrs. Dunlop, who headed the reception group, wore a gown of heavy white faille silk designed with bands of black around the full skirt and at the neck.

Miss Howes in Line.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of the Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, who is the "ranking" debutante of the season, was the next in line. She was wearing a frock of white net fashioned with a fitted bodice trimmed with bands of shirred white velvet. In her hair she wore a spray of gardenias. One of the first to arrive was last year's ranking debutante, the former Senorita Amelita Alfaro, who was with her husband, Mr. Frank H. Weller.

About the ballroom were tall black lacquered vases and baskets of white fluffy chrysanthemums. The lights were low and a silvery spotlight, like a stray moonbeam, stole over the dancing figures; pausing here to light the silvered head of one of the debutantes, crowned with a wreath of velvety gardenias and black leaves, then on to rest on one of the post-debutantes in a black gown, then again stopping for a moment on the trim black and white formally attired gentlemen present. Many of the debutantes wore gardenias which had been brought by plane from Hollywood for the occasion.

Midnight Supper.

During the first part of the evening the debutantes' escorts and the stag line were massed in one huge group not far from the line, impatiently awaiting the signal that would release their partners for dancing. At midnight supper was served in the main dining room. There was one large table for the white-wigged and gowned girls and coutless smaller ones were provided for their elder sisters and friends. After the repast the throng in black and white returned to the ballroom and the merriment continued until well past 3 o'clock.

There were many from out of town at the party, among them Miss Delphine du Pont, who, with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis I. du Pont, is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Robert E. Lee. She wore a demure gown of misty white tulle and several gardenias tucked in her powdered curls. Mrs. Lee, artistically combined the color scheme in her gown of white satin, which had a long draped scarf faced with black, and a full skirt bound with black. She was with Count de Blackmere, who is here for a short time.

Baron and Baroness von Pagenhardt had with them their guests from Philadelphia, Mr. Maxim Karolik, Miss Ordway Whitford, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, of New York, the latter formerly Miss Ruth Bryant, of Alexandria, Va.; Col. and Mrs. Carl Ristine.

The younger diplomatic set was represented by Senor Manuel Trucco, son of the Chilean Ambassador; Mr. Paulo Hasslocker, Commercial Attache of the Brazilian Embassy; Senor Andres Pastoriza, son of the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza; Senor Sebastion Valverdi, the First Secretary of the Ecuadorian Embassy, and Senora de Mantilla-Ortega and Senor Adolfo Paez.

Miss Marjorie Walsh arrived in town yesterday morning, coming from her home in Cincinnati especially for the ball at which she was presented to Capital society several seasons ago.

Among those seen during the evening were Miss Marjorie Jane Dampman, Miss Barbara Bonnycastle, Mr. A. K. Tigrett, Mr. and Mrs. Howes, the latter wearing black velvet made on long flowing lines with a soft Grecian scarf falling across one shoulder and to the floor; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Semmes, Miss Esther Wallace, Mr. Gilbert Mellon, Miss Leonie McCoy, Miss Margaret Cotter, Dr. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Miss Margo Chase, Miss Elizabeth Ryder, Lieut. Beverly Carter, Lieut. Aubrey Strode, Mr. and Mrs. George Smith, of New York and Alexandria; Miss Kearsley Caldwell, Miss Genevieve Marsh, Mr. Robert Kelley, Miss Louise Alexander, Mr. Milton Patterson Thompson, Mr. James Wimsatt, Miss Kate Johnson, of Princeton; Mr. Lindsay Moss, Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Gertrude Pearson, Mr. Richard Dear, Mr. Bradford Ross, Miss Margaret McMullen.

Potockas Entertain Mr. Wiktor Podoski As Embassy Guest

The Polish Ambassador and Countess Potocka have as their guest at the embassy a former member of the embassy staff, Mr. Wiktor Podoski, who is spending a short time in Washington.

The financial counselor of embassy, Mr. Janusz Zoltowski, left last night for his New York office after spending a few days in the Capital. He recently returned to this country from a vacation in Poland.

Mme. Kulikowska-Higersberger, who spent last season here, has arrived in Washington again and has joined her brother, Mr. Edward Kulikowska, second secretary of the Polish embassy, in their apartment at the Wardman Park.

The attache, Mr. Michael Pudny, expects to leave early next month for a motor trip through the South.

Society Notes

The Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close entertained at dinner last evening at the Legation in honor of the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler.

Their other guests included Admiral and Mrs. Joseph Strauss, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Chalkley; the Assistant Naval Attache of the Embassy, Commander A. L. P. Mark-Wardlaw; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mr. Robert Webster, secretary of the South African Legation, and Miss Willa Magee, who is spending the winter with Minister and Lady Marler.

Miss Mary Senate Howes, daughter of Acting Postmaster General and Mrs. W. W. Howes, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Carlton Hotel by Miss Katherine Friant, one of last year's debutantes. There were about 40 of this season's debutantes present.

The Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable have as their guests for the week-end Capt. Rufus Zogbaum, U. S. N., and Mrs. Zogbaum.

Mrs. Margaret Casey will return to her home in Sparta, Wis., today. She has been visiting her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Brennan, who gave a dinner in her honor during her stay.

Noones of New Haven Visiting Mrs. Landsdale.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward G. Noone, of New Haven, Conn., are the house guests of Mrs. Francis B. Landsdale for ten days.

Mrs. Stuart Dean, of Indianapolis, is visiting her cousin, Miss Nancy Getty, at the Calverton. She came to attend the wedding yesterday of her niece, Miss Margaret Mactee Clark, to Lieut. Robert Henry Kessler, U. S. A.

Miss Jean Ross Howard is spending the Thanksgiving holiday with her mother, Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, having come down from New London, Conn., where she is a student in Connecticut College for Women. Mr. William Tappan, of Arkansas, Mrs. Howard's house guest, will accompany Miss Howard to the Army-Navy game at Philadelphia today.

Betty T. South Engaged to Wed

Mrs. Hamilton Disston South has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Betty Turnbull South, to Ensign Girard Lindsley McEntee 3d, U. S. N., son of Col. G. L. McEntee (retired) and Mrs. McEntee. No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss South attended Miss Wheeler's School in Providence, R. I., and Gunston Hall in Washington. She is the daughter of the late Col. Hamilton D. South, U. S. M. C., and granddaughter of the late Dr. Charles S. Turnbull, of Philadelphia.

Ensign McEntee attended New York Military Academy and was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in the class of 1935. He has recently been assigned to the U. S. S. Vincennes.

Representative Here.

Representative and Mrs. James A. Meeks, of Danville, Ill., returned to Washington last week for the opening of the Congressional season, and they are now in residence in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Mr. Ralph F. Henn and his children, Margaret, Katherine and Earle Wilfley Henn, have come from their home in Geneva, Ohio, for the Thanksgiving holidays to join Mrs. Henn, who has been spending some time with her mother, Mrs. Earle Wilfley.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

And now little Hebe Reynolds, daughter of the Surgeon General and Mrs. Charles Reynolds, is a full-fledged debutante. Her party yesterday afternoon in their apartment in Connecticut avenue was very nice indeed. Flowers, flowers everywhere—you wouldn't think that it could possibly be winter and a shortage of petal pulchritude as threatened by the florists.

Hebe wore a quaint little frock of bright electric blue taffeta with saucy puffed sleeves and a full flaring skirt. Quite in keeping with this was her bouquet, a dear little lace frilled nosegay of pink rose buds.

• • • •

Her house guests, Jean Nichols and Madeline Agnew, of New York, received with her—Jean in dark blue crepe and Madeline's black velvet frock complete with a demure lace collar. The Jack Kerkins were there. She was in black with touches of green.

Mme. Espaillet was there for just about long enough to say how-do-you-do, have a sandwich and a cup of tea before dashing off to the Dominican Legation, where her brother and sister-in-law, the Pedro Espaillets, are—having arrived just yesterday for a day's visit with their other sister, Mme. Pastoriza.

The tea table was laden with fragrant posies, tempting cakes and what not. While we were having our tiffin Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of the chief of staff, and Mrs. Merritte W. Ireland, wife of Maj. Gen. Ireland, were pouring.

Gen. von Boetticher of the German Embassy hurried in from the cold—his cheeks pink from the late afternoon chill. Some one talking about the falling temperature, said that it was fine for the debs as they had to hop around anyway. Whereupon the diplomat added that it was a good thing for all ages and speeded up the day's activities.

Saw Villette Sullivan—she gets the medal this year for wearing the first white hat. Hers is an odd little number—round—the merest hint of a brim, and an intriguing black veil.

Alice Tuckerman, in a becoming shade of blue, left early following the wise suggestion of her mother that she catch up with the sleep this past week had banished and be all ready for today's game in Philadelphia.

Mrs. Eldridge Jordan was attired in chic black and white. Mrs. John A. Crane was a symphony in dark brown. Her frock of velvet had a very high neck over which she wore a handsome antique gold chain. Her hat was very wide brimmed and was graced by two crossed feathers. Mary Crane and Henrietta Talbot wore frocks that went beautifully together. Mary's was of a deep rose coral and her companion's was of a deep twilight blue.

Caught a cheery "hullo" from Gertie Pearson and Ann Shelley just as they were leaving, all of which reminds us of Gertrude's debut the day before, and again we chuckled over the memory of the expression on young Master Bill Pearson's face when he took one sip of the punch—he still likes sodas best.

• • • •

Miss Virginia Randolph, daughter of Mrs. George Randolph, was also presented to Capital society yesterday at a luncheon held at the Mayflower Hotel. Among the guests were many of the season's debutantes, and the table was charmngly decorated with vases of talisman roses.

Miss Randolph wore a black satin cloth made with a silver lame top, a black hat to match, and a corsage of gardenas. Mrs. Randolph's velvet frock was of a soft Dubonnet shade, and she wore a hat of the same color.

Violet Wilson Wed To Frederick Arnold

Yesterday afternoon in Grace Lutheran Church, Miss Violet N. Wilson, daughter of Mrs. Mabel L. Wilson, and Mr. Frederick H. Arnold, of Richmond, son of Mrs. Clara Arnold, of Rochester, N. Y., were married by the Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski.

The bride wore a satin back crepe gown trimmed with cascading tulle ruffles, a velvet turban and shoulder length veil. Mrs. Dorothy N. Luce, of Arlington, sister of the bride, was matron of honor; Mr. Lester Reineke, of New Haven, Conn., was best man, and Messrs. J. LeRoy Duford, of Roanoke, and Ivan H. Smalley, of Richmond, were ushers.

Entertain for Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall R. Diggs entertained at dinner at the Shoreham last evening for Miss Jean Younglove, of Glencoe, Ill., who is visiting their daughter, Miss Helen Diggs. Miss Younglove has come from Connecticut College to spend the Thangsgiving holiday in Washington. Miss Diggs is a student at Holton Arms. Mr. Robert S. Kelly and Mr. Ed O'Connor were in the company.

Blankenhorns Have Cocktail Party at Home

German Embassy's Third Secretary and Wife Entertain.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The Third Secretary of the German Embassy and Frau Blankenhorn yesterday afternoon entertained at an informal cocktail party at their home on Thirty-third place. One found the house on the crest of a hill overlooking the city, and lights in the windows suggested the warmth of hospitality within.

Frau Blankenhorn, who recently returned from Germany with her infant daughter, Renate, wore a tunic frock, a white crepe blouse over a black satin skirt.

The center of attention on their arrival were Miss Justine Corby and Dr. Ivan Franges, Secretary of the Yugoslav Legation, to whom her engagement was announced a few days ago. Miss Eleanor Corby, who came with them, declared she was planning to wear a sign, explaining she was herself and not her sister, because so many persons had mistaken her for the bride-to-be.

Miss Corby's marriage to Dr. Franges is taking place December 7, and on December 9 they are sailing for Europe, where Dr. Franges will assume his post in the foreign office in Belgrade Yesterday she wore a small black hat of distinctly modern design and a black dress with soft yoke and sleeves of green and gold lame, and a corsage of mauve orchids.

Her sister was in a costume of black velvet—dress, coat and hat, the hat a beret trimmed with two green love birds. These, she told Frau Blankenhorn, she bought in Bavaria last summer.

The Misses Anne and Aletha Harcourt, of London, were there also and were both delighted at the news they had just received that the British Royal Society of Portrait Painters had accepted two pictures by each of them for its coming exhibition. They have the rare faculty of being able to work on a picture together and are now engaged in painting a portrait of Miss Rebecca Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile. She, with her sister, Miss Graciela Trucco, was also among the guests, as were the Second Secretary of the Turkish Embassy, Mr. Ibrahim Seyfullah, and the Secretary of The Netherlands Legation, Jonkheer H. M. Van der Wyck. Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop, the Counselor of the German Embassy, Herr Hans Thomsen; the Naval Attache of the German Embassy, Rear Admiral Robert Wittoeft-Emden, and the First Secretary, Herr Ernst Wilhelm Meyer.

Miss Clark, Officer Wed At St. Thomas

Becomes Bride of Lieut. R. H. Kessler in Ceremony Here.

Couple to Live at Fort Monroe After Trip to Canada.

One of the interesting weddings of the Thanksgiving season was that at 4:30 yesterday afternoon of Miss Margaret Macatee Clark, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hazard Perry Clark, of Washington, to Lieut. Robert Henry Kessler, U. S. A., son of Mrs. P. M. Kessler and the late Col. Kessler. The ceremony took place at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church here, the Rev. H. C. Goodman officiating.

White chrysanthemums, palms, and tall white candles decorated the church for the occasion. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of cream satin, made on princess lines with a veil of old family lace and tulle. She also wore a brooch of hyacinth garnets and seed pearls which was worn by her great-grandmother on her wedding day exactly 69 years ago, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Hughes Kistler, of Denver, Colo., and Williamsburg, Va. Her frock of Nile green velvet was made on princess lines with a Mary Queen of Scots collar, and with it she wore an off-the-face hat of the same color and material. She carried talisman roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Mershon Kessler, the bridegroom's sister, in royal blue, and Mrs. Hirst Milhollen in rust velvet. Both frocks were made like that of the matron of honor, and the two bridesmaids carried bouquets of roses.

Lieut. Glenn A. Sikes was best man, and the ushers were Mr. R. A. Dunnigan, Mr. E. G. Davis, Mr. Ralph D. King, Mr. Newell A. Smith, Mr. T. Aloysius Smith and Mr. Langdon Jackson.

Following the ceremony there was a reception for the immediate families and a few close friends in the Chinese room of the Mayflower. At its conclusion the young couple left for a wedding trip to Canada, the bride wearing a gray wool suit with a blue fox collar and black accessories. On their return, Lieut. and Mrs. Kessler will reside at Fort Monroe, Va.

Among the out-of-town guests were Maj. A. Moultrie Brailsford, Camden, S. C.; Col. Willis C. Bickford, Seattle, Wash.; Miss Belle Boykin, Perry Point, Md.; Mr. Basil Paxton Boykin, Milwaukee, Wis.; Mr. H. Courtenay Jenifer, jr., Mr. Richard C. Jenifer, Mrs. R. C. Mastenburg and Miss Marjorie Kane, all of Green Spring Valley, Md.; Mrs. Helen Dean, Indianapolis; Mrs. Philip A. Brennon, New York; Miss Irene Condit and Mrs. Louise Morton, Champaign, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. William T. Christian, Mrs. Harry T. Moore, Richmond; Miss Polly Lee, Williamsburg Va.; Miss Ann Spratley, Hampton, Va.; Miss Ruth Wills, Newport News, Va.; Miss Virginia Clopton, West Point, Va.; Mr. Jack Bowie, Lutherville, Md., and Miss Helma Mallory, Lawrenceville, Va.

British Naval Chief Of Singapore Base Coming to Capital

Commander A. Mark-Wardlaw, assistant naval attache of the British Embassy, will have as his guest his bachelor brother, Capt. W. P. Mark-Wardlaw, R. N., who has just returned from command of the British naval base at Singapore. Capt. Mark-Wardlaw will arrive on the Queen Mary November 30 and, after spending a few days in New York, will come to Washington.

Mrs. Mark-Wardlaw, wife of the assistant naval attache, who has recently accompanied her daughter, Eve, to Geneva, Switzerland, to stay for some months to study French, has returned to England to visit her son Mark, who is at school in England.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Small-Town High School Girl Asks How to Save Boy Friend From Wiles of Bold Coquette.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I live in a small town. I am still in high school and wish your advice on a problem which is bothering me. One of my girl acquaintances likes to "play up" to boys in order to attract their attention from other girls. She has started on one of my friends. I don't quite know whether she will succed or not, but it makes me feel terribly queer.

• • • •

What would you advise me to do in this case? I simply will not "play up" to any boy in the fashion she does, because it is no way for a decent girl to act. Please answer through The Post as soon as possible. Sincerely, DISGUSTED.

• • • •

DEAR DISGUSTED: I regret to say there is nothing at all which you can do to defend your heart interest against the other girl's predatory onslaught, since she uses a technique which you rightly despise. The only advice I can give you is to save your pride by pretending complete indifference to her game, and to save your self-respect by adopting the attitude that the boy is fully entitled to pay attention to any other girl he happens to be attracted to.

• • • •

Whether the girl wins or loses in her efforts to take your beau away depends entirely upon the boy himself. There are some boys—and men—who can never resist the wiles of a bold coquette. As a rule, these boys and men are individuals who are none too sure of their personal attractiveness, and they are always agreeably flattered to be made the object of candid pursuit. But there are others who feel entirely capable of compelling the interest of girls they admire, who definitely prefer to do their own pursuing, and these are apt to retreat in disdain and distaste before the advances of a frankly flirtatious female.

• • • •

If your boy friend has been girl shy up to now, it is just possible the other girl will take him away from you—for a time, at least, until she tires of him and goes after someone else. But if he has been accustomed since childhood to pleasant friendships with girls, he may not be impressed in the slightest by the girl's attentions. Her advances may make him appreciate your reserve the more. M. H.

Pokes Fun at Bachelor.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Being one of those persons who never thought of airing their problems in public print, and being likewise firm in the belief that problems must be personally settled to be settled right, I never read advice columns in newspapers. That is, I never did until recently. I must confess I did not know what I was missing. It surely is part of a liberal education.

• • • •

At first I was amazed that persons could so easily parade their private affairs so publicly. Then I became interested in them and in your always helpful advice. I think you really understand life. I was highly amused by the recent letters of self-righteous Oscar and his even-more-so wife (in your column of November 17). Ever since reading them I have been wondering how such fine people can know so little about life.

• • • •

To illustrate: I personally know two lovely, fine girls. One will always be safe with men. She will probably marry some nice man like Oscar and make him a good wife. But she will never know life, for she will never have had a temptation in her life. The other girl, equally good, would scarcely be safe with St. Gabriel after the first ten minutes. That's life, Miss Haworth, and you know it.

But I really began this letter after reading the one today (November 20) from "Stumped," the defensive bachelor who can't pay girls any civil attentions without their expecting him to propose. Being in my late 30s, single (and glad of it) and not entirely unattractive, I thought I had met all kinds of men. But I was mistaken.

• • • •

"Stumped" is a revelation to me. I need him to complete the collection. For if there is one man unattached at his age, it seems to me the imprint of chronic bachelorhood must be obvious, and that those who behold him will not labor under false illusions. And I am equally of the opinion that no average woman of today could be so easily misled by a few dance invitations, flowers and candy as to suppose they spelt matrimony in the offing.

• • • •

Someone should tell that dear fellow that all desirable men of his age were snapped up by some smart woman ten years ago at least. Of course, it's just possible I may be mistaken. He may really be as attractive and alluring as he believes himself to be. Life is constantly handing one surprises if one keeps an open mind. But candidly, I doubt that he is in any real danger.

Trusting to you judgment, if you can locate him and he is worth it, can't you have him caged and let me know where the exhibit can be seen? I wouldn't miss seeing him for the world.

CURIOUS SKEPTIC.

The Crying Need.

DEAR CURIOUS SKEPTIC: I seldom print letters in this column for their amusement value, but I am making an exception in your case. Even "Stumped" should be able to appreciate your little joke at his expense, and I incline to share your estimate of Oscar and his good wife.

• • • •

On only one point do I take issue with you. You assume to know life, yet confess yourself "firm in the belief that problems must be personally settled to be settled rightly." I would say rather that few persons who have lived widely, or deeply, or courageously, or well have gone through life without having known the need, from time to time, of seeking counsel and guidance from others. Fortunate indeed is the individual who has not had to go outside his little circle of family or friends to seek that help. But he is in the minority. The crying need of the majority is for someone to listen to their troubles. M. H.

Hollywood Raincoat Styles Are Attractive

Hollywood girls have sense enough not to come in out of the rain when they can look as fascinating as they do in rainy day apparel. Ruby Keeler prefers cellophane, stepping out in a long cape, transparent and colorless, which has a big hood, so ample it fits over any hat she may choose to wear on a cloudy day. All her gay street clothes show through, so that the spritely Ruby is as well dressed in a sudden shower as when the sun beams down.

A songbird like Marion Talley doesn't dare catch cold and dim the beauty of that voice for even a minute. As a consequence she shuts out the menacing raindrops very effectively with hat, coat and nifty galoshes of moisture-proof tweed. Nubs of blue and yellow perk up in the tweed to brighten a dull day. The hat is a fairly wide-brimmed slouch trimmed with a twisted leather band of yellow and blue.

Evening Shoes Created to Match Mode in Gowns

Approaching Coronation of King Edward Brings Luxurious Trend Seldom Equalled in Fashionable Wardrobe.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

EVENING shoes echo all the trends of the formal mode. Glamorous silhouettes, clever manipulation of materials, rich fabrics, exotic accents—all are found in this winter's gowns and shoes alike. Gold or silver with regal colors and jet black with gold or silver are important headlines in fashion's footnotes.

The oncoming coronation of King Edward has inspired a luxurious trend in clothes for all occasions—a trend seldom equalled. The formal mode has taken the cue and sponsored elegance and luxury to the nth degree. Shoes, like gowns, may feature a single touch of the most vivid primary color for dramatic effect.

Regal Note in Sandals.

"Back to nature" silhouettes in clothes have been repeated in evening shoes. Sandals are toeless, backless and flaunt numerous cut-out patterns. Princess lines strike the regal note in shoes. Empire, Directoire and Victorian influences are everywhere present in the realm of chic footwear to accent formality in the evening. "Bar shoes" to accompany cocktail frocks are appearing in clever new versions; all-black or gold kid trimming on black silk crepe.

The new ankle interest is gaining popularity as the season advances. This is interpreted in bracelet straps, which fasten high around the ankle, and "bandaged" effects, in which the straps are wound 'round and 'round the ankle. Echoing dressmaker touches on frocks and shoes take on the same methods of detailing. Paris reports a new silhouette that is setting the fashion world agog—a long-sleeved dinner gown, banded with chiffon insets and a wrap-around girdle which swathes the bodice tightly. Immediately, shoes to blend with the new styling go neo-classic and a novel bandaged sandal is created.

Stockings in Skin Tones.

Stockings should be chosen with discrimination to complement these new evening styles, stylists and designers declaring that only ultra-beautiful feet should peep through open sandals sans stockings. Gossamer sheer evenings stockings with special heels have been designed to wear with open-back sandals. The same idea has been perfected for the omnipresent toeless types of evening shoes. Skin tones in hosiery are advocated to accompany all types and colors of formal gowns. Many fastidious women are applying make-up to the legs to harmonize with complexions. Very sheer stockings in American copper tints are considered smart to wear with all-black ensembles, especially the dinner type of costume.

The new ankle interest is featured in the black bracelet-strap sandal, above, to accompany formal evening gowns. May also be tinted to match costume.

Bandaged sandals, the last word in American-designed shoes, inspired by Paris, show the "dressmaker" influence, created to complement the swathed and tightly fitted bodices of the formal evening mode. Those above are of velvet ribbon with rhinestone buckles.

Women Prefer Their Escorts Tall and Blond

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 27.—Women—the ones who come to New York alone and employ young men to escort them to night clubs and theaters—prefer blonds.

Tall blonds. If they have a bit of a Harvard accent, so much the better. That is the report of the Peckham Agency, an organization that is in the business of supplying young men escorts for women visiting New York.

It has turned out to be quite a business, so good that Ted Peckham, of Cleveland, who started it, now is on his way to England to start a branch in the fashionable West End of London.

Last week the Peckham Agency had 97 applications for escorts. It filed them easily, for it has on file the names of about 20 Yale, Harvard and Princeton graduates who earn their living by attending shows and night clubs and taking ladies out to the dances.

Each employe in the agency is carefully investigated, and the women who use the service must promise, on their part, not to be alone in a hotel room with the escorts. The price scale runs like this: For services up to 10 p. m., $5; up to midnight, $10; to 6 a. m., $25.

The financial arrangements are handled through the agency, in an attempt to save both the woman and the escort embarrassment.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY HAVE an old house and a little boy and that makes life very right side up for them.

Shes' puzzled now about her son's room. The lower half is wainscoted and the top is papered in blue-green with a design of sailboats in white with a touch of red. The furniture is painted in royal blue with a mirror bordered in lines of Chinese red. One chair pad is of red glazed chintz and the bedspread is an old hand-woven checked design in blues with a little red.

What Dorcas would like to know is how to handle the windows. She likes the idea of red, white and blue, but the white curtains she has now look too insipid.

Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Pattern for a Child's Room." This bulletin is five pages long and contains color samples for rug, walls and curtains, along with patterns for patchwork quilt bedspreads, one for a boy and one for a girl.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

About this time of the year we feel it our "bounden duty" to sound a note of warning relative to the prevalence and frequently fatal character of pneumonia. It is a curious disease—inflamation of the lungs—and too little progress has been made in its conquest. We know that a neglected cold, particularly if attended with an acute bronchitis, may become a pneumonia overnight or even within a few hours. It is not necessary that much of the lung be involved in order to produce serious symptoms. A diseased area as large as a silver dollar may give rise to fever, chills, and positive signs of illness.

The cause, as a rule, is some variety of the organism known as the pneumococcus. One reason why we have made so little advance against the infection—at least in the preparation of an antitoxin—is that there are so many strains of this particular bug. Of course, it is true that disease of the lungs may be brought on by other bacteria, but by and large the majority of cases may be blamed upon a special type of the pneumonic germ.

Germ Usually Present.

Most of us harbor pneumococci in our throats a good deal of the time. They will not cause difficulty just so long as we maintain body resistance at a reasonable level. But should we become chilled, overtired—with possibly a digestive upset—or allow an acute cold to drain our reserves, these designing microbes, which exhibit such a fondness for the delicate tissue of the lungs, may begin to grow. From the throat they wander to the bronchi and then to the air sacs.

The type of irritation which they set up brings about a great outpouring of cells from the blood vessels, with the result that the air spaces and the finer bronchi are plugged and, as long as the disease lasts, that portion of the lung which has been attacked is out of business.

Once pneumonia has developed there is no means of checking the disease. It will run its course despite anything and everything that is done. True enough, we may have a slight congestion without a pneumonia, and patients so afflicted may recover within 24 to 48 hours. But with unmistakable signs of what the physician calls "consolidation" the battle is on and the outcome depends on good nursing, commonsense medical management and the maintenance of the patient's strength.

Prevention Best Cause.

The heart may need help, because the right side supplies blood to the lungs. This is a much thinner and less powerful chamber than the left, which pumps blood to the entire body except the lungs. If the muscle of the right side of the organ can sustain added pressure, all is well. If it begins to fail because the circulation is obstructed, exhaustion may come on rapidly. Fortunately, the physician has at hand many drugs that will increase the heart output and tide over a few hours of danger.

It is so much cheaper to avoid pneumonia than to fight it, even though the battle is won with ease. The disease rarely assaults those who are accustomed to exposure but picks out for its victims stalwart men and women who have neglected physical exercise, who work and live in overheated rooms, and who stay up too late at night—in other words, those who travel on too narrow a reserve margin.

Two Eyebrow Pencils Are Deemed Essential

Hollywood — Perc Westmore, makeup expert, has a bit of news about wielding the eyebrow pencil. Everyone should have two, according to Perc—a black one and a brown one and instead of having points they should have narrow, blunt ends. The brown one should outline the brow first and then the black one. Which one should predominate depends upon the coloring of the person. Blondes should emphasize the brown tone a trifle more than the black and brunettes should pursue the opposite course.

Built-Up Heels Popular For Cruise Footwear

In many of the smartest daytime costumes now being assembled by fashion-wise women for cruise and Southern wear, built-up heels on white shoes furnish a chic color complement to hats, gloves and belts of the same warm brown tones. The individual lifts which are a characteristic feature of this type of heel provide a trim tailored accent as well as substantial service and a springy walking surface.

Stunning Evening Coat.

An evening coat that tingles with drama belongs to Glenda Farrell, movie actress. It is floor length and so enveloping! The material is very stiff and is black and silver striped. The military collar closes on the side with a miniature silver frog and a larger silver frog clasps the waistline together. Worn over a simple black evening gown this is very stunning.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

THERE isn't a weirder sight in the life of our town than the arrival of the Twentieth Century Limited in the early morning bringing a movie star of the brightest luster from Hollywood. The train shed is ablaze with flashlight bulbs; reporters and press agents rush frantically in all directions, and the Dream Girl is almost bowled over by the headlong plunge of a couple of hundred of these little autograph-vermin who manage to meet all trains and boats.

ALICE HUGHES.

But for sheer bedlam you can't tie the morning the Century brings in two of these golden doll-babies in one load! I happened to be at Grand Central the other day to greet a friend from Chicago, when Sylvia Sidney and Eleanor Powell, dramatic star and tap-dance queen, turned up on the Century, and it was more fun than a half dozen zoos. The rival press agents, fangs bared, practically tore cameramen to pieces getting them to their stars, and the poor reporters didn't know which way to turn, if any. The autograph pests, driven mad, simply spun round and round in a frenzy. It was, cinematically speaking, super-colossal.

In this case publicity honors rested easily on La Belle Eleanor. While the dramatic Sylvia, hoity-toity did a Hepburn sneak out of the deppo, an inspired press agent had a small night club piano wheeled right into the station, and pretty Eleanor went into her dance for the photographers. This gave the hoofer the honors for the morning.

My Chicago friend was popeyed at all these didoes. "Does this go on every day?" she quavered. "This is nothing," I assured her. "I'll take you down to meet the Normandie tomorrow and you will see so-called human beings go stark loopy!" And darned if she didn't as promised!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—If you see me wearing a big yellow mum and a silly girlish grin today, it's because I'm off to our last big football game, the epic struggle between Columbia and Stanford at the Polo Grounds. Columbia whopped the California boys in the Rose Bowl two years ago, and the visitors have come to town thirsting for Gotham gore. I'm that excited that I'll probably even wave a Columbia pennant. Second childhood arrives.

The French perfume-namers have knocked out a couple of homers lately, as you know, with "Aphrodisia" and "La Vertige," but I'm worried about the British group. I fear they're not fast enough on the uptake. The best they could do, this week, was to launch a scent called "Bond Street." Now that's a very fine London street, but as a perfume title it makes me think merely of taxi-exhausts. Nope—the British will have to pull up their socks and do better! . . .

Guard Your Chin Line

GUARD your chin and throat line—for at these two points appear the first sign of age, such as crepy throat—sagging chin—rows of lines around the neck—or a throat like an old turkey gobbler's.

Beauty authorities and medical specialists now recommend simple exercises to combat signs of age at chin and throat line.

Many necks grow old-looking because complexion care is ended at the chin line. If the skin of your throat and neck is dingy, yellow, stringy or flabby, try deep, thorough cleansing with cream, stroking with long, caressing movements from chest to jaw line—and washing with bland soap and warm water.

Varied Rug and Afghan Designs Made From Crocheted Square

By Alice Brooks.

HERE'S a grand way to inexpensively brighten up your room—crochet this beautiful rug and then make an afghan to match! Either is made of a simple square—repeated and joined in varied arrangements, a different design results. Two ways are shown—more are given in the pattern. These arrangements are equally good for rug or afghan. Use rags, rug yarn or candlewick for the rug, Germantown for the afghan. It's fine pick-up work. In pattern 5736 you will find complete instructions and charts for making the square shown; an illustration of it and of the stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Home-Made Cookies Attractive and Delicious Gift Item for Friends During the Holiday Season

Assortment of Tempting New Recipes May Be Added to Old Ones; Jar Should Be Kept Well Stocked for Busy Days.

By Rebekah Blake.

WITH Christmas approaching, our first thoughts turn to gifts and food. A beribboned box of delicious cookies is a gift that is sure to be appreciated at holiday time by the persons who "have everything," and by men who prefer to select their own ties.

No doubt you already have several old stand-by recipes which you will use, as you have for many years past, but why not add an assortment of new tempters to the old ones. Your family will be glad to find these in the cookie jar, too, and they are indispensable at the social activities that pile up on each other at this time of the year.

No Christmas preparations can be complete that do not include a day or two devoted to cookie baking. The holiday season without an assortment of well-spiced cookies is just about no holiday season at all, and with a good supply of cookies in the house it won't matter if you don't find time to bake a fancy cake for the afternoon bridge or cook a dessert for a midweek meal.

Should Make Plenty.

When making your cookies, be sure to make plenty to last throughout the holiday season, for you won't have time in the midst of the festivities to take a day off for baking. Also be sure to select the recipes for dainties that will keep fresh for several weeks for you will be preparing them ahead of time.

There are dozens of ways of packing cookies to make them impressive gifts. Presented in square, covered crystal boxes or jars, useful afterwards for serving nuts and candies, they are doubly welcomed by women. An oblong box of hammered metal is a good container for the cookies and will delight the men as it may be used later as a cigarette or cigar box. A set of glass or enamel containers for the refrigerator, filled with an assortment of cookies, and other goodies, elevates even this practical offering into the gift class.

Cookies may be made in many ways. Some are made by forcing the cookie dough through a press before baking; others are cut in squares, and some are drop cookies, frosted with a bit of icing.

Holiday Nuggets.

2½ cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon cinnamon
2 eggs, well beaten
¾ cup sugar
1½ cups currants (½ pound)
⅛ teaspoon salt
¾ cup lard
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1½ cups walnut meats, coarsely cut

Sift flour once, add baking powder, salt and cinnamon, and sift together three times. Cut the lard into flour; add eggs and sugar and lemon rind. Combine thoroughly. Add currants and nuts, mixing well. Drop from teaspoon on greased baking sheet and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Brazil Nut Scones.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup butter or other shortening
¾ cup sliced Brazil nuts
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 egg yolk
¾ cup sliced Brazil nuts

Mix and sift flour with dry ingredients. Cut in shortening with two knives until it is the consistency of coarse corn meal. Stir in nuts. Add slightly beaten egg mixed with milk and stir just enough to mix thoroughly. Roll on floured board to thickness of ¼ inch, cut into diamond-shaped pieces and fold into triangles. Brush with egg yolk, sprinkle with ¼ cup of chopped nuts and bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, for 12 to 15 minutes.

Moravian Christmas Cookies.

3¾ cups sifted cake flour
½ cup melted butter
1 cup molasses, heated
1-3 cup brown sugar
¾ teaspoon each of ginger, cloves and cinnamon
¼ teaspoon each nutmeg and allspice
¾ teaspoon soda
Dash of salt

Sift the flour once, then measure. Combine the butter and molasses; then add sugar, spices, salt and soda. Now add the flour gradually, mixing well after each addition. Let the dough stand in a cold place for at least a week. When ready to bake, place small amounts of the dough on a slightly floured board and roll paper thin. Cut into fancy shapes, decorate in any way desired or leave plain, and bake on greased baking sheet in moderate oven for about 6 minutes. These cookies will keep indefinitely in covered tins.

German Christmas Cookies.

1 cup corn syrup
1 cup dark molasses
½ cup shortening
Juice and rind of ½ lemon
2-3 cup brown sugar
5 cups sifted flour
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon black pepper
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves
½ cup ground almonds
Pinch of salt

Heat the syrup and molasses, then add the butter and sugar. Stir in the lemon juice and rind, and then add gradually the remaining dry ingredients which have been sifted together. When thoroughly blended chill the dough. Drop by teaspoonfuls on a buttered cookie sheet and bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven.

A large and interesting assortment of cookies, made several weeks in advance of the Christmas season will come in handy innumerable times. These cookies may be wrapped attractively as gifts for the person who "has everything," or may be stored away in the home cookie jar for party snacks or to help the holiday spirits of the children.

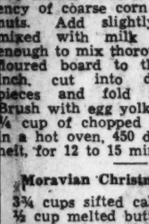
FAVORITE FOODS of famous folk

By Pattie Ellicott.

A POPULAR HOSTESS, whether in Washington or in some foreign land where her husband has been stationed in the diplomatic serivce of his country, Mrs. Walter E. Edge, wife of the former Senator from New Jersey, has acquired an interesting collection of recipes from all around the world.



MRS. EDGE.

Her family may be counted on for applause when the menu of a particular meal includes one of Mrs. Edge's favorite recipes—that for Danish cabbage—which makes a fascinating addition to the meal in the form of a vegetable, too often served in a prosaic manner.

Danish Cabbage.

Pass through a chopper twice one pound of any kind of cold meat, a small onion, and a green pepper, without the seed; season highly with salt, paprika, nutmeg and all spice; mix with a beaten egg; add 1 spoonful of catsup and enough water to moisten slightly, boil a small firm cabbage for 20 minutes, cut out the stalk and fill the cavity with the meat; close it with a small piece of stalk tied on; steam for one hour; serve with melted butter.

Riced Chestnuts

Cut a half-inch gash on flat side of chestnuts. Put in heavy pan with a half teaspoon oil or butter for each cup of nuts. Shake over the heat for 5 minutes, then put in a hot oven for 5 minutes. Remove shells and inner skin, using a sharp-pointed knife. Cover nuts with boiling salted water, bring to boiling point and cook gently 15 or 20 minutes or until tender, or steam 45 minutes if preferred. Force through potato ricer into serving dish and serve hot.

Singing to Child Important Part Of His Training

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

THERE IS nothing more characteristic of life than the sense of rhythm which prevades and seems to actuate it. The seasons, the tides, the movements of the stars and planets, the circulation of the blood, the breath, are all in rhythmic succession, and the pulsation probably reaches farther and is more all-inclusive than man has yet dreamed of.

Physicians and psychologists have begun to suspect that there is actually a healing property in rhythm, and here and there are trying the effect of music on nervous patients. The discovery is not, after all, so very new. Three thousand years ago David played before Saul when the king was in one of his black moods, and somewhat later Augustus, when worn out by affairs of state, would retire to Tivoli, where the rhythmic sound of falling water made him rest and sleep.

It is this innate feeling for rhythm that has made folk poetry last so long and appeal so strongly to children. They love the monotonous throb of a nursery rhyme, even if they are too small to understand what little meaning there is in the words. A fretful, sick child will generally be soothed by a low tuneless song of regular beat.

The child who has never had these things, whose mother is too modern to sing to it or repeat jingles, has lost an essential part of babyhood—the part which tunes this new world of his to the universe.

It would be a mistake to sing a child to sleep for he would grow dependent upon it.

But an occasional chance to sit in his mother's lap and be rocked to the tune of music or the lilt of Mother Goose rhymes, is the child's inalienable right.

Modern Lunch Quickly Made From Leftovers

Supplies in Pantry and Refrigerator Solve Problem.

THESE DAYS it's fun to have a few friends in to eat lunch with you when you haven't gone to a lot of bother planning an elaborate menu. Your guests will like it, too, for they know that you haven't gone to any trouble, but have attractively prepared what you happened to have in your refrigerator and on your supply shelf.

A complete course luncheon is not necessary, but you must have something healthful as well as appetizing in appearance.

You will be sure to have several cans of soup on your pantry shelf. You can easily open one of these, or, with a little more trouble, you can combine the leftover meats and vegetables in your refrigerator and evolve your own original soup.

Perhaps men do not enthuse over salads, but your girl friends would not consider lunch complete without one. A light salad easily made of bananas and maraschino cherries on fresh leaves of escarole, with plenty of creamy mayonnaise, would be heartily welcomed. A more substantial salad could be composed of vegetables that you have on hand, as kidney beans, celery, pickles and an added touch of onion. This is served with crisp lettuce as a background and toped with mayonnaise.

Cheese and Crackers.

To go with the salad serve various cheeses and assorted crackers. These will be newer than the usual bread and not half the trouble that hot rolls or biscuits would be. The cheeses add a delicious tang to the meal, too.

Cake is the ever-faithful dessert for luncheon, dinner, or supper, so why shouldn't we use it for this meal. We all know that a cake is a handy delicacy and most everyone likes it. You probably have some left from dinner last night and this would be an excellent time to use it. But if you haven't, some cakes really aren't difficult to make and may be whipped up in a jiffy. If you don't care to make your own cake your corner grocer sells delicious ones made by expert bakers.

Let's be British and sip tea with our lunch. It does the trick of a beverage and has a penetrating warmth on these chilly days. If you have boiling water and tea bags, the drink may be made at the table and there you save time again.

Kidney Bean Salad.

Take 1 can of kidney beans or home cooked beans. Drain all juice. Add 1 cup chopped celery, 1 cup chopped pickles, 1 small onion and a little chopped mango or pimiento. Season with salt, pepper and a little sugar. Top with a good mayonnaise.

Chocolate Fudge Cake.

Melt 1 square chocolate. Work 1-4 cup shortening until creamy and add ½-cup brown sugar. Beat 1 egg until light, adding ½-cup brown sugar gradually. Add to first mixture with the melted chocolate and mix thoroughly. Sift 1¼ cups flour with ½ teaspoon soda and a few grains salt and add alternately with ½ cup sour milk mixed with ¼ cup cold water. Add ½ teaspoon vanilla. Turn into cake pan lined with paper and greased. Bake 35 to 40 minutes in a 350 F. oven. Remove from pan and cover with peppermint frosting.

Fluffy Peppermint Frosting.

Put 1-3 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons water and a few grains cream of tartar in saucepan, stir until sugar is dissolved and boil until syrup is a long thread when dropped from tip of spoon. Beat 2 egg whites in quart bowl until stiff, add syrup slowly while beating constantly and beat until it will stand in peaks. Add 2 or 3 drops oil of peppermint or ½ teaspoon peppermint extract.

Christmas Candy Chosen Subject Of Recipe Contest

Christmas is only a few weeks away, and when we think of Christmas we think of candy.

No doubt you have old standby recipes for Christmas candy that you will use this year as usual, but wouldn't you like to have some new recipes to liven up the holiday dishes and boxes that you will prepare? And perhaps you would like to pass your favorites on to others.

If you have a good candy recipe that might win a prize, enter it in this week's recipe contest. Copy it neatly and send it not later than Saturday morning.

The cash prizes this week are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the additional three prizes.

Rooms Combined.

Many small houses are combining the dining and living rooms with success. A room with a bay window alcove lends itself particularly well to this arrangement. If such a spot is not available, the dining furniture may be placed in a corner of the room.

WHY PUT UP WITH PIMPLES, WRINKLES AND A SALLOW SKIN?

So many women throw their charm and beauty away—look years older than they are—because they neglect common constipation. They forget that badly balanced meals, over a period of years, can change how they look and feel.

Often their menus lack the "bulk" needed for regular habits. Then constipation, the beauty-killer, sets in. Other effects may be headaches, listlessness, sleeplessness.

Get "bulk" back into your meals with a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. It absorbs moisture within the body, forms a soft mass, gently cleanses the system.

Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily, either as a cereal or in cooked dishes. ALL-BRAN is guaranteed. Try it a week. If not satisfactory, your money will be refunded by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. Advt.

Cheese on Roast Adds New Flavor

If you want a real treat for your Thanksgiving dinner, sprinkle your roast duck, or venison, or whatever game you are preparing, with a little crumbled Roquefort cheese just a few minutes before removing it from the heat. It adds a delicious zip to the game.

Chicken Savory.

Simmer chicken livers until cooked. Split them and spread with a smooth mixture of Roquefort cheese. A few drops of cream added to cheese will make a smooth mixture. Press two pieces of liver together and dip in an egg wash, then in bread crumbs. Allow to fry in butter quickly to a golden brown. Serve immediately.

Roquefort Cheese Surprise.

Roquefort cheese
Canned crab apples
Currant jelly

Remove core and seeds from apple. Fill cavity with creamed Roquefort cheese and glaze with softened currant jelly. Set in colored paper bon bon cup and serve with steak, roast or fowl.

Mother Bowed By Grief Finds Writing a Task

Expressions of sympathy in times of bereavement and their acknowledgement often constitute a problem in considerate and proper behavior. The following letter on this subject is typical of many received:

"Dear Miss Wallace—My sister's son, 25 years old, died suddenly last week. She is still bowed with grief, but is endeavoring to answer all the expressions of sympathy. I feel that she is not able to do this, but her husband insists that these messages from friends and acquaintances should be answered personally and at once. He also insists that she write notes of thanks for all the flowers. I suggested engraved cards with black borders. I have received such cards from well-bred persons myself under similar circumstances. My sister's husband will only allow these cards to be sent to a limited number of business acquaintances and insists on personal answers to the rest. Do you think people expect prompt answers to such messages of sympathy? Do you think they would be offended if I wrote the notes for my sister?"

No one expects a grief-stricken family to adhere to any hard-and-fast rule in sending expressions of appreciation for their messages of sympathy. The engraved cards with black borders are used by well-bred people and are considered good form.

Sometimes the person who has lost a relative by death takes comfort in writing notes and even in receiving visitors. The tactful friends will understand if they are not so included and will wait patiently until the first grief is over.

Roosevelt's Speech Before Brazil Congress

Nearly half a century ago a little boy was walking with his father and mother in a park of a city in southern France. Toward them came a distinguished-looking elderly couple—Dom Pedro II, and his Empress. That occasion was my first introduction to Brazil. In the years that have passed since that day—years measured by the splendid history of the Republic of Brazil—I have had the pleasure of meeting many of your statesmen, and of becoming increasingly familiar with the problems which mutually affect our two nations. My visit to Rio de Janeiro today is therefore the realization of a growing desire to see Brazil with my own eyes. Every student has been told of the majestic beauty in which your great city is cradled. But Rio is unique in that the reality far exceeds our expectations.

Pacific Record Cited.

A visit—even of a single day—is one of the outstanding experiences of my life. The loveliness of nature would have been enough to bring me here—but my visit has another purpose. I was unwilling to come so far abroad without rendering my respects to the government of Brazil—that sister nation with which for more than a century we have maintained a tradition of good understanding, mutual regard and co-operation which is rare in history.

I have had the honor of greeting your great President, and this personal friendship between the Chief Executives of our two nations seems to me not only of practical benefit, but also of profound significance. You, gentlemen of the congress now afford me the courtesy of this agreeable opportunity of meeting in person the legislative branch of your government and of exchanging thoughts directly with its members. I could not be but deeply sensible of the unique honor offered by the presence in this chamber of your supreme court, a tribunal whose high traditions are known throughout the juridical world. Thus, the executive, legislative and judicial powers of the government of Brazil have united in this demonstration of friendship toward the nation which I have the honor to represent.

Let me now return thanks for this renewed proof of that brotherhood which has ever united Brazil and the United States, a fraternity not limited to the relations between our governments, but a fraternity in which I have reason to know is made evident in every group in both countries, whenever and wherever they meet. The fine record of our relations is the best answer to those pessimists who scoff at the idea of true friendship between nations. In the present state of the world it is heartening that the two largest countries in this hemisphere have been able, by the exercise of good will, good temper and good sense to conduct the whole course of their relations without clash or comflict of ill-feeling.

The Motto of Peace.

Not only that. The confidence in each other's aims and motives enables us to work together for the common good. We have a record of which we can be proud—a record of joint endeavor in the cause of peace in this new world. My country has derived strength and confidence from the far-sighted, irreproachable attitude of Brazil in its devolution, arbitration, conciliation and other methods for the peaceful settlement of international disputes. Your first concern, like ours, is peace—for we know that war destroys, not only human lives and happiness, but destroys as well the ideals of individual liberty and of the democratic form of representative government which is the goal of all the American republics. I think I can say that if in the generation to come we can live without war, democratic government throughout the Americas will prove its complete ability to raise the standards of life for those millions who cry for opportunity today. The motto of war is, "Let the strong survive; let the weak die." The motto of peace is, "Let the strong help the weak to survive."

There is room for all of us, without treading on one another's toes. There are resources of nature adequate for our present and our future. We are happily free from ancient antagonisms which have brought so much misery to other parts of the world. There are, it is true, conflicts of interest between the American states—but they cannot be called serious or difficult of solution, when compared with the deeply rooted hates of other continents. There is no American conflict—and I weigh my words when I say this—there is no American conflict that cannot be settled by orderly and peaceful means. And, it is in our common interest imperative that they be settled always by agreement and not by bloodshed. We serve not ourselves alone. The friendly nations of the Americas can render no greater service to civilization itself than by maintaining both domestic and international peace and by freeing themselves forever from conflict.

We are about to gather in a great American conference, called by President Justo in furtherance of the good neighbor policy in which we all share.

Bound By Common Needs.

In this conference we have the opportunity to banish war from the New World and dedicate it to peace. It is inthinkable to me that in this time of world-wide apprehension we should fail to seize the opportunity to meet what is a heavy responsibility, this is no time to hesitate. We must be guided by a serene and generous view of our common needs. World horizons may be dark, but the time is auspicious for our task in America. The rest of the world presents a grim picture of armed camps and threats of conflict. But in our own continent armed clashes which in recent years have divided American countries have been happily brought to an end.

It is gratifying to be able to pay well-deserved tribute to the very outstanding part played by your able and distinguished foreign minister, Macedo Soares, in the mediatory efforts of the representatives of six American republics. And the Leticia question was settled here in Rio through the patient assistance and masterly diplomacy of Dr. Afranio Mello Franco. The progress we have made must not be allowed to serve as pretext for resting on our laurels; it should, on the contrary, stimulate us to new and increased effort. It is not enough that peace prevails from the Arctic to the Antarctic, from the Atlantic to the Pacific; it is essential that this condition be made permanent, that we provide effectively against the recurrence of the horrors of war and assure peace to ourselves and our posterity. All instrumentalities for the maintenance of peace must be consolidated and reinforced. We cannot countenance aggression—from wheresoever it may come.

The people of each and every one of the American republics—and, I am confident, the people of the Dominion of Canada as well—wish to lead their own lives free from desire for conquest and free from fear of conquest—free at the same time to expand their cultural and intellectual relationships and to take council together to encourage the peaceful progress of modern civilization. Our aims will best be served by agreements which bring peace, security and friendship among us and all our neighbors.

Benefits of Interdependence.

Solidarity among the American states in the cause of peace constitutes no threats to other regions or races. The honorable adherence to solemn agreements among us will harm no other continent. On the contrary—the more firmly peace is established in this hemisphere, the more closely we will live up to the spirit as well as the letter of our agreements, the better it will be for all the rest of the world. Let us present a record which our hemisphere may give to the world as convincing proof that peace lies always at hand when nations, serene in their sovereign security, meet their current problems with understanding good will. All of us have learned that no real, no lasting prosperity can exist where it is secured at the expense of our neighbors—that among nations, as in our domestic relations, the principle of interdependence is paramount.

No nation can live entirely to itself. Each one of us has learned the glories of independence. Let each one of us learn the glories of interdependence. Economically, we supply each other's needs; intellectually we maintain a constant, a growing exchange of culture, of science and of thought; spiritually, the life of each can well enrich the life of all. We are showing in international relations what we have long known in private relations—that good neighbors make a good community.

In that knowledge we meet today as neighbors. We can discard the dangerous language of rivalry; we can put aside the empty phrases of "diplomatic triumphs" or "shrewd bargains." We can forget all thought of domination, or selfish coalitions or of balances of power. Those false gods have no place among American neighbors.

Happily, the relations between Brazil and the United States have transcended those lesser conceptions. Secure in unbroken respect and friendship we meet with full respect, each of the other, with every hope that our mutual regard may prove useful to others as well. There has never been a time when this confidence between Brazil and the United States was more precious or more needed. I know from my enlightening conversation with President Vargas that we are entering the coming conference deeply mindful of our responsibilities and the need to work in fullest understanding with all of the republics of this hemisphere. If we are guided by wisdom, such comprehension will banish conflict from this part of the world. We are entitled to hope that we may thus contribute to the universal ideal that nations throughout the entire world, laying weapons aside, may at last fulfill the greatest ambition which any nation, large or small, can have—that of contributing steadily and, above all, generously to the advance of well-being, culture and civilization throughout the changing years.

Shots Fired at Legation.

Mexico City, Nov. 27 (AP).—Police revealed today several shots were fired last night at the Japanese legation from an automobile without license plates or lights. No damage resulted and the legation refused comment.

Oregon Forests Swept by Fires

Portland, Oreg., Nov. 27 (AP).—An "unprecedented" fire threat tonight confronted the rich forests of western Oregon, reduced to tinderbox dryness of one of the worst fall droughts in the State's history.

Two thousand tired fighters were on the lines and flames were advancing on several fronts. No rain was in sight for a country normally dripping wet at this time of year. Officials indicated that unless rains set in, the State might expect a major conflagration.

A survey indicated 5,000 acres of brush and timber land were ablaze in Oregon and 3,500 in southwestern Washington.

Several ranches and logging camps have been destroyed.

Old-Age Tax Set-up

A little more than a month ago we explained what the Bureau of Internal Revenue would do to collect taxes under the social security act. Plans for the creation of the old-age tax division weren't completed, but are now.

The division, headed by Newton Montgomery, has been set up in the miscellaneous tax unit under Capt. D. S. Bliss. At present, all the division is doing is handling correspondence from people wanting information on exemptions—about 100 letters are processed daily.

Tax provisions for the 26,000,000 employes and 2,000,000 employers become effective in January, with the first of the monthly returns due by the end of February. Bliss expects that from 300 to 400 persons will be taken on by March, or so, when returns will be at a peak. All these employes must have civil service status.

An added problem is the question of space—not only for the staff, but for the vast amount of records that have to be filed. However, the space "nut" is expected to be cracked before the first of the year.

Flash! from our Lauderdale, Fla., correspondent, a 3:15 p. m. bulletin on the great fish battle of the century, between Assistant FHA Administrator Arthur Walsh and a giant sailfish:

"Battle Still Rages stop Walsh now weighs only 60 pounds and is being fed artificially and wants you to come down for lunch stop another bulletin tomorrow."

Dean of Men

It probably will be news to most of his students that Dr. James G. Patrick, who is in charge of the new tri-weekly after-hours training class for Social Security Board employes, was once dean of men at Spokane University for five years.

Deans usually fall into one of two classes—stern, gimlet-eyed disciplinarians or good-humored "regular fellows." Patrick—or Pat as he is known everywhere—evidently came in under the second wire. One of his tricks for maintaining discipline was to keep a "gang" of older undergraduates on hand—when a student seemed on the verge of getting out of hand, Pat would pass the word to the "gang" who usually settled things for the dean in their own way.

A former tackle at Spokane University—in his prime Pat weighed about 170 pounds (now he tips the beam at 200)—Patrick would also get in a little disciplining by playing with the scrubs against the varsity. But this didn't always work out to the dean's favor—more than once a mysterious elbow blackened his eye.

Still, perhaps because most of his troubles came from athletes, Patrick had considerable success in applying the things he learned on the football field to his duties as a dean. Here is one instance he tells of. The college's best athlete (let's call him Bill Smith), whose red hair was matched by a fiery temper, got into a jam one night when he "assed" the dean of women. The matter was naturally called to Patrick's attention and Smith soon found himself in the dean's office, with the football coach and Pat working on him to apologize. Drawing upon memories of the between-the-halves "pep" talks in the locker rooms, Pat truly went to town with tales of the men who had died for dear old Spokane. After two hours, replete with glorious "deaths," Smith suddenly burst into tears, leaped to his feet and exclaimed:

Postals

There are two training courses for Social Security Board employes earning under $3,200. Patrick's class meets Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays and is run like a regular school with homework, examinations and an occasional red apple for the prof. The other is a weekly Wednesday lecture in the Interior Building auditorium.

If you think you know something about music, you "ain't heard nothin'" until you listen in on tomorrow morning's Office of Education-Smithsonian Institution broadcast on musical instruments. Dozens of instruments you never knew existed will be tooted, rattled, beaten, twanged, and any other synonym in the dictionary.

Professional congratulations to the editors of the Farm Credit Club's new monthly on a really swell job—even though we think it a crime for them to encourage "knock-knocks" by calling it "art" . . . The Farm Credit chorus, incidentally, meets Tuesdays . . . It will be Journey's End Monday for these three Commerce employes, Carl C. King, with the Patent Office for 40 years; James W. McGuire, with Coast and Geodetic Survey for 37 years, and Lilly Scott, of Marine Inspection and Navigation, 18 years.

Thursday will find a fair number of Uncle Sam's scientists attending out-of-town meetings. Dr. A. C. Fieldner, chief of the Bureau of Mines Technological branch, will take part in the Carnegie Institute of Technology's celebration of the sixth anniversary of the founding of the Coal Research Laboratory at Pittsburgh . . .

Attending the meeting of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers at Chicago will be George R. Boyd, R. B. Gray, Wallace Ashby, S. P. Lyle, F. E. Staebner, Lewis Jones, S. H. McCrory, and William V. Hukill, all of the Bureau of Agricultural Engineers . . . Ned J. Burns, acting chief of the National Park Service's Museum Division is back in town after fixing up the museum display at Vicksburg . . .

Here are a few informative "postals" for those interested in the civil service system . . . Commissioner Leonard D. White has estimated that if the emergency agencies were to be placed under civil service through competitive examinations the commission would have to examine from 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 persons . . . Of the 717,000 appointments to the Federal service made from 1919 to 1933 about one-fourth were veterans' preference appointments, according to William E. Mosher's new book on "Public Personnel Administration" . . . The civil service assembly is planning an encyclopedia of existing personnel policies, practices, and procedures.

Santa Claus Arrives in Columbia Heights as Thousands Cheer

D. C. Budget Hearing Ends After 16 Days

Bureau Devotes Several Sessions to School Estimates.

After 16 days of executive sessions, the Bureau of the Budget yesterday concluded hearings on next year's District government estimates. All departmental requests were closely examined, with the aim of curtailing expenditures wherever possible.

The bureau spent five days in checking school estimates and in hearing school officials.

Despite the close scrutiny exercised by the Federal agency, District officials did not encounter a demand for a flat percentage reduction in the estimates, as had been feared because of the Presidential move toward balancing the Federal budget.

The District subsistence budget of $42,944,948 and its supplemental estimates of $5,145,527 were considered concurrently by the Budget Bureau, thereby indicating that some of them would be included in the amounts recommended to Congress.

District officials do not know what form their budget will take when submitted to Congress, because of uncertainty concerning the report to be made by the President's fiscal relations committee.

The budget must be sent to the Government Printing Office before Christmas, while the fiscal relations committee may not file its report until later in the month.

Should the committee's recommendations be not available when the budget is drafted, it is expected that the Budget Bureau will use only the $5,000,000 lump sum payment voted by Congress last year.

Since the subsistence budget is more than $3,000,000 in excess of anticipated revenue, the Budget Bureau will be faced with the alternative of submitting an unbalanced budget or of slashing the District estimates if the committee's report is not made before the final draft of the municipal budget.

Langston Project Finally Under Way

Orders for the Chicago firm of Coath & Goss to proceed at once with construction of 274 living units at Langston, PWA's low-rent housing development on Benning road and Twenty-fourth street, were issued yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

Completion of the development, which it has taken nearly three years to start, was practically assured by November 27, 1937.

Communists to Mark Soviet's 19th Birthday

The nineteenth anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet Union will be celebrated by the Communist Party of Washington tomorrow at 3 o'clock in the Murray Casino, 920 U street northwest.

"Mother" Ella Reeve Bloor, veteran labor leader, will deliver the principal address. She visited the Soviet Union soon after it was established and returned to this country to campaign for funds for its starving citizens.

Young D.C. Artist's Work Called Best Of Child Painters

Fourteen-year-old Alphonson Basile, of 745 Sixth street southeast, learned yesterday that his painting, "Robinson Crusoe as a Young Man," which last year was made a part of the permanent collection of the New York Museum of Modern Art, has been published as an example of the best in child art in the current issue of an American picture magazine.

Basile, a student in the WPA children's art classes at Friendship House, is a pupil of Nelson Rosenberg. He is now at work on a picture both he and his teacher believe will be his best, entitled "The Organ Grinder."

Santa Claus Lane Opened With Parade as 50,000 Watch

Commissioner Hazen Presses Button Lighting 15-Block Stretch in Fourteenth Street; Kris Kringle Rides Atop Float.

In the glow of 7,000 vari-colored electric lights, strung in necklaces 15 blocks long, 50,000 cheering spectators last night welcomed Santa Claus to Columbia Heights.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen pressed the button which illuminated the lights stretching from Fairmont to Newton street along both sides and transformed upper Fourteenth street in "Santa Claus" lane.

As the lights flashed on, bands began to play "Jingle Bells" and the seventh Santa Claus Lane parade, sponsored by the Columbia Heights Business Men's Association got under way.

Fifteen electricians worked at top speed behind the scenes until five minutes before Commissioner Hazen pressed the button to bring the lighting system within qualifications of the District electrical regulations.

Professional jealousy between two municipal Santa Clauses threatened to delay illumination of the Columbia Heights Santa Claus Lane after the Northeast Business Men's Association complained against the Fourteenth street wiring.

Electricians Kept Busy.

The Northeast Santa Clauses pointed out they had been put to extra expense because of the insistence of inspectors that their wiring comply with the regulations. Apparently no effort had been made to force the Columbia Heights Santa Clauses to conform with the regulations, the Northeast Business Men informed Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection.

Dire consequences were threatened against the District if the Columbia Heights celebration opened without compliance with the regulations.

Capt. Oram laid down the ultimatum that nine technical changes would have to be made in the wiring or the lights in the Columbia Heights Santa Claus lane would have to be turned off. Extra crews of electricians were summoned and put to work.

Surrounded by nine lovely princesses on a brightly illuminated float, Miss Betty Jane Hahn led the parade and at its conclusion was crowned "Miss Columbia Heights" at a ball in the Arcade ballroom, Fourteenth street and Park road northwest.

Eight Bands in Parade.

An ironic sidelight came during the parade when Capt. Ira Sheetz forbade Santa Claus from distributing Christmas presents. Seated on a high float, Santa Claus was merrily tossing packages of candy into the crowds. Some of the packages fell in the street. Fearing for the safety of youngsters who darted under guard ropes after the gifts, Capt. Sheetz ran to the float shouting:

B. A. Levitan, who conceived the idea of transforming upper Fourteenth street into a Santa Claus lane in 1929, was general chairman of the parade committee. George A. Ford, president of the association, crowned "Miss Columbia Heights."

Yule Shopping Season Opened By Stores Here

Prepared for the greatest wave of holiday buying in the history of the city, Washington merchants yesterday formally inaugurated the 1936 Christmas shopping season.

The event was signalized by the unveiling of especially trimmed Christmas store windows and the display of vast stores of holiday merchandise.

"Before inviting the public to do their shopping early we have made certain that our stores in the District are prepared to accommodate them," Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, declared.

Washington merchants this year have made the greatest advance preparations in their history, Shaw said. He urged shoppers to do their buying early and gave assurance that the best values will be found in the stores before the last minute rush begins.

"Instead of making our opening of Christmas displays in December this year," Shaw said, "the complete holiday merchandising stocks now are being offered."

As a result of the "Shop Early" campaigns conducted in past years, Shaw said, the Christmas shopping period is now spread over a five-week period, instead of the six or eight-day rush of former years.

Woolsey Hall Is Named Head Of Civic Clubs

Howard Woodson Elected First Vice President of Federation.

In a spirited election, Woolsey W. Hall, former corresponding secretary, was named president of the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting held in the District Building. A resident of the Nation's Capital for the past half century, Hall is a Government worker, well known as a member of the Central Northwest Civic Association, and as a former secretarial worker for William Gibbs McAdoo, when Secretary of the Treasury.

He succeeded George W. Beasley, who declined to run for a fifth term. Howard D. Woodson was elected first vice president, and J. C. Payne second vice president; John E. Hall, recording secretary; Ruby Moyse Kendrick, assistant recording secretary; Kenneth Carter, corresponding secretary; H. D. Queen, treasurer, and the Rev. C. B. Ashton, chaplain.

The office of honorary vice president was created for the retiring president. Officers were installed by the president emeritus of the association, Dr. George H. Richardson. Nineteen associations were represented in the election.

The federation appointed a committee of three to investigate denial of the use of the board room by officials at the District Building for purposes of the election, consisting of J. A. G. LuValle, H. D. Queen and W. A. Clarke. The meeting was held in the A. B. C. hearing room.

Favorable action of the park and planning commission with reference to a proposed $900,000 Northeast sewer development involving Watts Run was reported by H. D. Woodson, and favorable consideration of the project was recommended to the Board of Commissioners. Proposal for a guard rail at the safety zone on Pennsylvania avenue near Twenty-eighth street was favorably considered and referred to the executive committee.

The Juvenile Court bill was recommitted for further study and report. Bernard Chapman's explanation of failure of the federation to be represented in the Halloween parade, because of late assignment, was accepted. The question of permission for existence of a slaughter house in the Northeast section was referred to a committee which was directed to formulate reasons for opposition.

Maxwell Defense Fund Reaches $514

While Charles Henry Smith, attorney for Edith Maxwell, accused of slaying her father, Trigg Maxwell, in their home at Pound, Va., worked on defense plans for her new trial, readers of The Washington Post yesterday increased her defense fund to $514.78.

The young mountain school teacher will go on trial for her life in Wise on December 9. Efforts to obtain a new trial for her away from the prejudiced atmosphere of Wise, where she was convicted, failed.

The Washington Post has volunteered to accept contributions to a fund to defray legal expenses of the girl's defense. The following contributions were received yesterday: Anonymous, $1; Mrs. J. H. Dorst, $3; the Whoopee Club, $3.

Tibet Land of Color, Health, Geographic Lecturer Asserts

A land in which the inhabitants are utterly careless of cleanliness and sanitation, but where there are no flies and insects, no unpleasant odors, and where the air is always fresh, the water always pure and there is surprisingly little illness—such is Tibet, C. Suydam Cutting told members of the National Geographic Society last evening in an address in Constitution Hall.

The explanation for all this lies in the rare, dry air of this plateau and mountain country, one of the highest of the inhabited regions of the globe. Nothing ever rots; it merely dries up; and from the surrounding mountains flows an inexhaustible supply of melted snow.

Cutting showed the first standard-size motion pictures ever taken of Lhasa, capital of Tibet and seat of the powerful Dalai Lama, spiritual ruler of the land. Although much of Tibet is bleak, the pictures showed the entrance to the capital city to be a rather charming roadway bordered by willow trees. Substantial flat-roofed, stone and mud-brick houses, several stories high, line the streets of this Tibetan metropolis which, built in a valley 12,000 feet above sea level, has a population of 40,000 people.

Sixteen thousand of the inhabitants are lamas or Buddhist monks who live in monasteries—an index to the huge lama population of the country which is supported by the ordinary citizens. Although there are civilian governments of the cities and of the country, the lamas really wield the power, Cutting declared.

The films showed by Cutting included views of the Potala, vast winter palace and lamasery of the Dalai Lama, which, built on a craggy hill, towers above Lhasa. It is probably one of the largest masonry buildings in the world and contains thousands of rooms.

The present Dalai Lama, supposedly a reincarnation of one of the several Buddhas postulated by the Tibetan religion, is now only 3 years old, Cutting said. During his infancy the country is ruled by a council of five elders.

Everywhere in Lhasa and throughout Tibet, prayer flags are constantly flying, and many of the people carry prayer wheels, like huge babies' rattles, which they constantly whirl. It is believed that the fluttering of the flags and the whirling of the wheels send a constant stream of prayers to the gods.

The nobles of Lhasa and their ladies have delightful picnics in groves of planted willows, and to some of these social affairs Cutting was invited. The only drawback, he said, was the inevitable butter tea which is the staple food article of Tibetans. It is made by churning yak or sheep butter into a concoction made from a low grade of tea imported from China. Since the butter is usually rancid, the thick, soup-like fluid is anything but pleasing to Western palates.

Cutting, who was a member of the Asiatic party of Theodore Roosevelt, jr., in 1930, tried for more than five years to obtain permission to enter Tibet. He finally made the journey from India in the autumn of 1935, crossing Himalayan passes 18,000 feet and more high.

Girl Ends Life After Beating; Salesman Held

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., Nov. 27.—Sheriff John N. Bennett today arrested a 50-year-old punchboard salesman in connection with the beating of a tea-room owner who later killed herself.

Bennett said he had locked up John Satterfield, of Dover, Del., on a warrant issued by Magistrate George Hicks, of Galena. The warrant charges him with assaulting Miss Edna Ruth Moffett, 21, and "stealing and taking away."

The girl, daughter of John Moffett, Cecil County farmer, shot herself in her sister's home at Massay, Md., yesterday. She had been found beaten on Tuesday.

Bennett said Satterfield denied he had assaulted the girl or had taken any money from her tea room.

Young Conductor Stirs West Coast In Operatic Debut

Los Angeles, Nov. 27 (AP).—The praise of est Coast music circles centered today on red-haired, 22-year-old James Kelly Guthrie, who last night made his debut as a grand opera conductor.

"I thought his part was remarkable," said Dr. Alfred Hertz, famed symphony conductor, of San Francisco, and close friend of young Guthrie. The latter, a graduate of Redlands University, came here from his San Bernardino home to direct an 82-piece orchestra in Verdi's "Aida."

Dr. Hertz revealed he had watched closely the career of Guthrie for almost ten years.

Guthrie was but 13 and an ardent flute player, when he first heard Dr. Hertz conducting. He lost interest in his father's plan to make a newspaper editor of him. He left San Bernardino every time he could to hear Hertz conduct at San Francisco, or at the Hollywood Bowl's symphonies here. After each concert Guthrie attended he talked with the older musicians.

W. Garrett Conant, president of the Hollywood Grand Opera Association, invited Guthrie to conduct "Aida" here.

Lieut. Little Is Promoted To Captaincy

Lieut. George M. Little, chief of the police vice squad, yesterday was promoted to the rank of acting captain by the District Commissioners upon recommendation of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. At the same time the Commissioners appointed 21 men and 1 woman to fill vacancies in the Metropolitan Police Department.

Little's promotion, which carries no salary increase, was made in recognition of his long and exceptionally efficient" service in enforcing the gambling and vice statutes, according to Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

The Commissioner said United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett had written to him several times in praise of Little's work and recommended the promotion.

Little could not be given a full captaincy, it was said, because there are no vacancies at present and several other lieutenants are ahead of him on the promotion list.

The 21 new privates are Harold W. Collier, George W. Tenley, Charles N. Cooke, Harrell Reagan, Albert B. Farrell, Leonard Millman, Thomas Colby, Hite Knotts, William A. Elliott, George E. Clarke, jr., Howard B. Quantrille, Edward B. Crandall, Osmond B. Williamson, William J. McCarthy, Edmond J. Fitzgerald, Weston W. Knox, R. A. Nielson, Randolph L. Dunn, Elmer E. Skinner, Arnold F. Jackson and Henry N. Johnson.

The Commissioners approved the promotion of Private Roy E. Blick to the rank of precinct detective to fill a vacancy caused by the demotion of Robert J. Magan after he was convicted by the Police Trial Board of conduct prejudicial to the department.

Little joined the Police Department on August 10, 1907, was made head of the vice squad and liquor squad in 1926, and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant in 1932. He is 57 years old.

Maj. Brown, in explaining that he had been commended 20 times, said that the post of chief of the vice squad is important enough to entitle the holder to the rank of captain.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

HOLLYWOOD, NOV. 27.

Personal observations: From where I sit, looks as if the gals with the pretty legs (Ruby Keeler, Jean Harlow, and others) are striving to rejuvenate short skirts; stars with clumsy shafts are fighting. Has Frederick March over-acted himself out of last year's popularity? Joan Crawford reminds me of an Olympic Games athlete. Frances Langford sings so easily, while Grace Moore gulps air and bellows it out.

JEAN HARLOW.

No doubt of it, Madeleine Carroll has supplanted Marlene Dietrich as the colony's most "buful" woman—but she does lack Marlene's oh-boy legs.

Strange that Herbert Marshall, who lost a leg in the cause of humanity (World War) should hide that fact, while Lawrence Stallings, similarly fated, is apparently proud. Who else has noticed that Janet Gaynor (perennially relegated to goody-good roles) is one of the screen's most sex-appealish women? I often go far out of my way to bask momentarily in the light of Maureen O'Sullivan's boyish grin. After the build-up gigantic in "Girl's Dormitory," what a letdown for Simone Simon in "Ladies in Love"—or was competition keener? Loretta Young, despite her too-thin torso, has gaw-jus legs.

Gadding about M.-G.-M. studio I came upon Al Boasberg, author of the new Marx Brothers script. I asked him how work was progressing. "Great!" he enthused. "I've finished, except for the story!"

Later, at luncheon with Robert Taylor in the studio commissary, we were given the new names on which is printed the number of calories in each item. I noticed Bob smouldering silently, and at last his rage came to a head. "This," he cried to a waitress, "is entirely too much money for a chicken sandwich." "That," returned the girl, "is not the price, but the calories."

A story typical of Hollywood is this one about Frank Shields, tennis star turned actor. As the tale goes, Shields was under contract to MGM and was "roosting high" because he permitted certain executives to play him close matches. But as time marched on and Frank was given no screen parts, he became sullen. One day he let loose on the tennis courts, and not one official was lucky enough to score a game against him. His next contract option was not exercised!

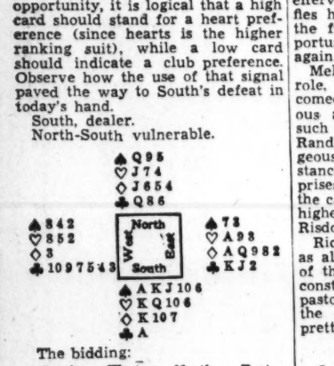
MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Suit Preference Signal.

One of the great developments in the play of the cards in recent years is the "suit preference signal." By means of this convention, a defender is able to signal to his partner by a play in one suit that he welcomes a lead in another suit.

That sounds more involved than it really is. When both defenders are sure that, for example, a heart or a club must be led at the next opportunity, it is logical that a high card should stand for a heart preference (since hearts is the higher ranking suit), while a low card should indicate a club preference. Observe how the use of that signal paved the way to South's defeat in today's hand.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 N T (1)	2 ◇
3 ♡ (2)	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Shaded, but sound.

(2) Since South had very close to a two-bid, he had every right to make a forcing bid as long as his partner could respond to the opening bid.

West obediently opened his singleton diamond in response to his partner's bid. East won with the Ace and recognized his partner's lead as a singleton the moment South followed suit with a diamond. The three had to be West's top diamond or his fourth best. It could not be fourth-best once South followed suit; and if it were the top diamond, it had to be a singleton.

It was not enough merely to lead back a diamond in order that West might ruff. It was important also to inform West that a heart return after the diamond ruff would permit another diamond ruff. Since the desired return lead was in the higher of the two side suits (hearts and clubs) East chose to lead a high diamond for West to ruff.

Accordingly, East's lead to the second trick was the Queen of diamonds! South covered with the King, and West ruffed. Having interpreted the message correctly, West returned a heart. East won with the Ace and returned another diamond, the ruff of which defeated the contract.

In view of the fact that South had bid hearts, it is extremely doubtful that West would have led back a heart had the signal not been used. A club return would have enabled South to draw trumps and thus stop the second ruff.

Irene Dunne, Comedienne, Real Star In Lively Screen Comedy at the Earle

Melvyn Douglas Scores in Light Comedy Part Opposite Star.

"THEODORA GOES WILD." Columbia Pictures filmization of a story by Mary McCarthy, adapted to the screen by Sidney Buchman, starring Irene Dunne, with Melvyn Douglas, Thomas Mitchell, Thurston Hall, Elizabeth Risdon, Margaret McWade, Spring Byington, Nana Bryant, Henry Kolker, Leona Maricle, Robert Greig and Frederick Burton. Directed by Richard Boleslawski. Previewed Monday afternoon, November 23.

The whole convulsing business started with the publication of a racy "best-seller" in Lynnfield's home town paper, edited by the village publisher, who had a keen sort of nose for sensationalism, much to the club women's chagrin. It seems that Theodora Lynn authored the sexy yarn under the title of "Sinned Against," and thereafter never could lift her head again in the community where she had been reared.

BELL.

But worms sometimes turn. Not that Theodora was a worm, but in course of time it crept into her mind that perhaps what she needed was complete emancipation from the inhibitions that had hedged her about for so long.

This emancipation idea finally becomes a sort of reciprocal agreement between her and Michael Grant, a handsome young blackmailer—in a gentlemanly sort of way, of course—who discovers the secret of her guilt and holds it over her head as a constant threat against her standing in the simple, pastoral community. Master Grant does fairly well for himself until "sold down the river" into slavery on the Lynn estate in the little town where he is completely out of his element. For it should be guessed by now that Mr. Grant is a gold-plated young man, married, with vast wealth at his disposal and, altogether, not at all entitled to "horn into" Theodora's life the way he did.

Romance Finds a Way.

However, that all came out all right. The wife decided that she had had enough of friend husband. Theodora goes on a rampage for freedom that captivates everybody from the Governor of the State down to lowliest citizen of the home town and at last view was well on the way to marital bliss, eternal happiness and all that gay "they lived-happily-ever-after" stuff.

Although it possesses only a scant measure of the earlier picture's deep-seated human nature, "Theodora Goes Wild," somehow drops into the same category with "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" as a lively comedy of rustic and urban life in combination, contrasting characterizations and an all-around comic sanity that sets it down safely among the more rational, even if one of the funniest, of the year's farcical creations.

Leads Splendidly Played.

While Irene Dunne, from time to time has been called upon by the vagaries of musical comedy—in "Show Boat," both on the stage and upon the screen, for example—to exert flashes of the frivolous foibles of the comedienne, never before, I think, has she been called upon to offer so sustained a comedy performance as in the role of Theodora Lynn. She discharges her task with a surety, a gayety and an effervescent spontaneity that identifies her among the most gifted of the funmakers. She also has opportunity to sing briefly now and again.

Melvyn Douglas, in the opposite role, is no less capable as a light comedian than as an actor of serious and heavily dramatic roles—such as he played in the part of Randolph of Roanoke in "The Gorgeous Hussy," to cite only one instance of his more sedate enterprises. There are many more in the cast who acquit themselves with highest credit—notably Elisabeth Risdo and Spring Byington.

Richard Boleslawski's direction is, as always, able, and the movement of the story such as to throw into constant contrast the simplicity of pastoral life and the hurly-burly of the city, where Theodora does pretty well for herself, thank you.

Excellent Vaudeville Bill.

On the stage at the Earle this week is a vaudeville bill of four acts that partakes largely of the quality of sustained artistry. The Seven Danwills, who open the living program, are probably the foremost gymnasts and tumblers now before the public. They achieve unbelievable feats of athleticism. They are followed by Roy Smeck, "wizard of the strings," who always contributes musicianship and novelty to any program upon which he appears. His banjo twanging is perhaps a degree beyond that even of Eddie Peabody, and on this visit he discloses an electric Hawaiian steel guitar upon which he performs miracles of melody.

The headliner for the week is that amiable buffoon, Eddie Garr, monologist par excellence and impersonator without a peer—well, at least without a superior. His badinage is engaging and his imitations of Joe Penner, Harry Richman, Ed Wynn, Ned Sparks, Maurice Chevalier and all the rest are about the best you will come across in a lifetime of theatergoing. The bill is closed by Virginia Bacon and her gifted associates in a dance revue of the first grade. Miss Bacon is an accomplished artiste in any form of terpsichorean effort, and she has surrounded herself with an able ensemble.

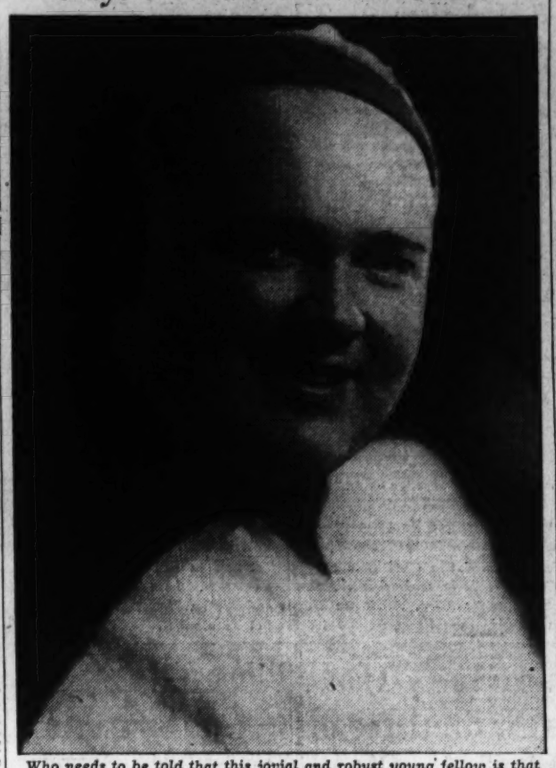
The Paramount News and Freddie Clark's orchestra, with Audrey Sieber presiding over the stage show, augment a feature that is wholly in the spirit of the holiday week.

Church of Two Worlds Selects Sermon Topic

"Spiritualism's Unanswered Challenge to the World" will be the subject of the address by the Rev. H. Gordon Burroughs, minister of the Church of the Two Worlds at 8 o'clock tomorrow night in the Hotel Continental. Miss Edith Martin, soprano, will be soloist.

At the midweek meeting Wednesday night there will be a message and healing service. The minister will give a short talk.

Stays Second Week on F Street



Who needs to be told that this jovial and robust young fellow is that eminent clown, Johnny Perkins, one of the mainstays of what remains of the once proud two-a-day? Johnny has played two engagements within the past few weeks on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater and has scored so decisively that his present stint is being prolonged through a second week in response to popular demand on the part of those who like to laugh.

The Stage Bill Tops Week's Program at Loew's Capitol

"THE WHITE HUNTER." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Gene Markey, starring Warner Baxter, with June Lang, Gail Patrick, Wilfred Lawson, Alison Skipworth, George Hassell, Forrester Harvey, Willie Fong, Ernest Whitman, Olaf Hytten, Ralph Cooper and Will Stanton. Directed by Irving Cummings. Reviewed at Loew's Capitol Theater Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

Just about the biggest cast of entertainers, meaning two or three thousand, enlivens the stage show at the Capitol this week. It's all the doing of this rotund Johnny Perkins, who enlists most of the audience as a singing chorus.

And doesn't Johnny swing his volunteer chorus artistically. He has the folks upstairs sing by themselves, and the downstairs seatholders put on a number of their own. The men and boys sang a rousing "Dinah" and the gals put on "My Blue Heaven." And if there are any off notes, Art Brown and his organ smooth 'em all out.

Johnny Perkins reminds this critic of one of those rotund and beaming old-time traveling salesmen who used to hit a town, distribute cigars and hot stories, and leave with a suitcase full of orders. And you can't deny that Johnny has sold himself and his act to this town in a wholesale way.

Miss Froos Also Clicks.

Sylvia Froos, singing star of radio, was received enthusiastically by yesterday's audience. Her really lovely voice and delivery are supplemented by a smart stage presence, something which unfortunately cannot be said of many radio stars. Also, all of her numbers were a bit special-special and well worked up.

Don Cummings, a cowboy dressed amazingly in tails, rated next to Miss Froos, both because of his rope tricks and because he has one brand new story. (Just one really new story in a vaudeville act rates a big star.)

Dick, Don and Dinah, tricky troupers, wind up with a slow motion, three-story stunt that is one of the best. Jack Gilford, imitates some of the better-known movie folk, with especially good results in the case of Stan Laurel. Gloria Gilbert, toe dancer, spins around in semi-acrobatic fashion.

The Elida Dancers, always good, not only do their ensembles, but step out in specialties, a few girls appearing in each show. We missed the one where the cute redhead in the middle steps out.

Jerry O'Moore, Irish tenor from Norfolk, sings like an Irish mocking bird and an unnamed colored boy also proved an absolutely tops singer.

There Is a Film, Too.

Warner Baxter and a bunch of wild animals are the stars of "White Hunter" about which it is not well to say too much.

But "White Hunter" does have the benefit of an unique quadrangle situation instead of the usual draggled triangle. A father, his daughter, her stepmother and Mr. Baxter make up the quadruplets, with the daughter and her stepmother both in love with Baxter. This is about the hardest situation a father ever had to face, even in the movies.

The animal shots are mostly fine, especially that of a lioness and her cubs and a group of elephants including a couple of giant tuskers.

Miss Lang Falters.

June Lang, so excellent in "Road to Glory," suffers from misdirection, or something, in her portrayal of a sweet young thing, whose supernal innocence practically trespasses upon the borders of idiocy. Anyway, the audience laughed heartlessly at her more touching love scenes. Alison Skipworth, one of Hollywood's best comediennes, suffers from lack of opportunity. Gail Patrick, as the conscienceless stepmother, looks like a fashion model and is naturally painfully glamorous.

The newsreel presents an All-American football team, very interesting and applauded heartily by football fans, also the Maharajah of Indore, dressed up like six firehorses on parade.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Dorothy Radde Emery, pianist; Alden Hayes Emery, junior, flautist; Margery Temple League, soprano; Willa Semple, accompanist; in Barker Hall. Program: Sonatine (Ravel), "Paysage Maritime" (Cras), Impromptu No. 2 in F Minor (Faure), "Pan" (Donjon), "Andalouse" (Pessard), Melody from "Orfeo ed Euridice" (Gluck), "Connais-tu le pays" from "Mignon" (Thomas), "Elegie" (Massenet), "Pleurez, mes yeux" from "Le Cid" (Massenet).

Confining her selections to French piano literature, Mrs. Emery contrived diversity of style by readings of intellectualized, impressionistic and romantic compositions. Ravel's sonatine, ever delightful with its harmonic piquancy, is one of the purest examples of cerebral music; a Voltairean wit sparkles in its biting phrases. The "Seascape" of Jean Cras, a naval officer by profession and a composer by avocation, shimmers in the manner of Debussy.

Although eclectic and experimental, Gabriel Faure was really a belated romanticist who absorbed modern harmony without subscribing to modernism. It was pleasant to hear his F minor impromptu, because his excellent piano pieces are unjustly overlooked and so few American pianists seem to know anything about them. Mrs. Emery presented the three composers with a sympathetic appreciation of their individualities. When asked for an extra number, she responded with Debussy's "Minstrels."

Master Alden Emery is a commendable apprentice to the most delicate of the wind instruments, and shows an aptitude that should develop him into a sure-toned flautist. His breath control is already so good that his tone is never overblown, and his playing is musicianly in instinct.

In the two arias by Thomas and Massenet, Margarey League was not so effective as in the plaintive "Elegie." Her voice has neither the firmness nor the volume for dramatic urgency; its timbre is light and its fresh color best adapted to lyrical uses.

Bride-to-Be By Vida Hurst

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern, 22, has become engaged to Philip Rhodes, 30, nephew of her employer, Francis Rhodes, rich paper manufacturer. Her engagement had come during the absence of her employer on a cruise for his health, when she had stayed on in his home as secretary for Philip, an architect recently returned from Mexico City to San Francisco, who had agreed to live there and keep an eye on Francis Junior. The latter had made numerous efforts to make love to Becky, but she had repulsed him. However, he had succeeded in nearly alienating Philip's affections by establishing the assumption that Becky had been his girl. Finally, when it is clear that Becky will have nothing to do with him, he goes on a spree and, while drunk, marries Stubby Vinson, a hoyden of his own set, who is in love with him.

Philip and Becky make no announcement of their plans, but decide to be married after the elder Rhodes return. Becky tells only her parents, who argue that neither they nor Becky know anything of Philip's past. But Becky has refused to listen when Philip wanted to tell her what lengths bitterness had driven him to, eight years before when he had been jilted by Lelia Meade. Late one afternoon, as they are having tea together in the Rhodes library, a woman is announced.

The shadow in the hall advanced into the library, saying, "Good evening, Phil!"

He stared at her as if unable to speak. Becky, following his gaze, saw a middle-aged woman with bleary, bitter eyes and a sodden, dissolute mouth. A flashy green dress partially concealed beneath a ratty-looking fur coat. A shoddy hat. Gloves which were soiled and shiny and a battered pocketbook. What could such a creature want with Philip? Why was he looking at her like that?

"I am," Philip said, shortly. "What do you want?"

"Is this the lady you intend to marry? Why don't you introduce us?"

Philip looked sick.

Becky said quietly, "I'll leave, Philip!" But before she could reach the door the other woman cried, "Oh, no, you won't. I've something to tell you. You see, the manager of that apartment you've leased happens to be a friend of mine."

Philip said unhappily, "Nelcine, please!"

"So you haven't told her about me? It's just as I thought."

"Shall I go?" Becky repeated, loyally.

Great Shock.

"No! It's too late now. I should have told you myself."

"I'll say you should," the interloper agreed. "What's more, you should be grateful to me, young lady. He has no right to take a wife. He's married to me."

She was lying, of course! She must be lying. "Oh, Philip, darling, tell me it isn't true." Becky thought, but before she had a chance to say it, Philip cried: "You wrote me seven years ago that we had been divorced."

"You were younger in those days, Phil, and very gullible."

"Do you mean it was a lie?"

The woman smiled and extended her thin hand, on which she wore a wedding ring.

"But I sent you the money for it," Philip thundered.

"I did file the suit and win a decree, but my lawyer refused to file the decree until I paid him and I had already spent the money for things I wanted more. You can't eat a divorce," she sneered.

Becky waited to hear no more. With the sharp cry of one mortally wounded she ran from the room. Her first instinct was flight. Her hat and coat were lying on a chair. Seizing them as she went past, she ran out of the front door, down the steps into the street.

She would never enter that house again. Never see Philip Rhodes again. In spite of what she had said when he mentioned his past, he should have insisted upon telling her. He had no right to ask her to marry him until he had made very sure that he was free.

Too weak to board a street car, she hailed a passing taxi and sank inside. Her knees had turned to water beneath her. During the long ride home she had only one thought. Escape. She would write Mr. Rhodes a letter telling him that she was ill. She would go to Los Angeles or Portland or Seattle. She had a small saving account on which she could live until she found another position.

Breaks News.

But those plans conceived in an anguish of despair so intense that never afterward could she think about it without shuddering were not to be. When she reached the house and went inside her mother said: "Be very quiet, dear! Your father's asleep. He came home terribly upset today," she confided, so intent on her own news that she did not observe her daughter's expression. "It seems that this place he had been waiting for has been filled. It was a dreadful blow. He had been so confident of it. I've never seen him so discouraged before."

"Never mind, mother! I'm still working."

"But you're going to be married," Mrs. Stern reminded her.

"No, I'm not," Becky said stonily. "Philip already has a wife."

Even then, when she was saying it, she couldn't really believe it. How could Philip, with his sensitive, discriminating taste, ever have been married to a person like that? She looked 20 years older than he. Her face was riddled with dissipation. The very thought of her as a rival sent a chill like death to Becky's heart. To know that he had loved the lovely Lelia was bad enough, but that awful wreck of a woman . . .

She became conscious that her mother was speaking to her, but she could not hear what she said. Better sit down before the room splintered into pieces around her.

"She came to the house," Becky continued in a voice devoid of expression. "The manager of the apartment we rented is a friend of hers."

"I can't believe it," the older woman gasped. "We didn't approve of your marrying him, but we never dreamed of anything like that."

Telephone Call.

"Philip thought they were divorced," Becky explained. She applied for one seven years ago, but the decree was never filed."

"Well, didn't he know that?" demanded her mother.

"She wrote him that she had gotten it. He was in Mexico and she was in this country."

"That's no excuse," Mrs. Stern said. "Oh, Becky, if you had only listened to us in the first place."

The telephone rang.

"If that's Philip, I can't talk to him," the girl cried.

"I'm coming right over," Philip said to Mrs. Stern.

Mr. Stern, roused by their voices, appeared at the living room door, looking wearier than Becky had ever seen him.

"What's all the excitement?" he asked, but when he saw their faces he stopped.

There were no tears in the eyes of his daughter lifted to his but an expression of despair which struck fear to her father's heart.

"You were right, father! I should never have promised to marry him."

"What's he done? What's happenend?"

"He's married," explained Mrs. Stern. "He claims he thought he was divorced but he isn't. He's coming over here right away, he said, to talk to you about it."

"He'd better," David Stern said grimly. "Because if he doesn't I'll be on my way to him."

Never Knew.

"I don't want to see him," Becky insisted.

"You don't need to," her father answered. "Go into your bedroom with your mother. I'll talk to the gentleman alone."

What was said in that interview Becky never knew. Too crushed to be curious, she remained in her room, staring out at the neat, fence-enclosed yards, with their nasturtiums and geraniums blowing in the wind . . . just as they had on the roof of the Telegraph Hill apartment. But they would not live there. They would never live anywhere together now.

Hadn't there always been a feeling of unreality about their plans? As if they might dissolve before her eyes like Cinderella's magic coach? Nothing so wonderful as her love for Philip could last. But she didn't love him any more. Didn't want him now under any circumstances. He had warned her that he had done things which might turn her against him if she knew, but she hadn't dreamed it would be anything so serious as marriage. Particularly to a woman like that. . . .

When Philip had gone her father came into the bedroom looking almost as white as she did.

"It's all over, Becky. You need never see him again."

"But my job? Mr. Rhodes will be home tomorrow."

"Give it up," he urged, but she shook her head.

"Not until you find something. After all," she said, bitterly, "we have to live."

14 Men Injured In Strike Clash At Cumberland

Settlement of Walkout May Be Reached at Conference Monday.

By the Associated Press.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 27.—Sharp fighting between pickets and guards broke the 10-day truce at the strike-closed Celanese plant today and sent 14 men to the hospital, one of them seriously injured.

After the quick melee of fighting, the plant remained in a state of siege, surrounded by pickets. Most of those injured were pickets, but the seriously wounded man was an artificial-silk worker who had been going to the plant for maintenance work.

Plant and union officials will meet Monday night for what Federal labor conciliators hope will be settlement of the strike. John L. Conner and A. R. Hagner, the conciliator, announced the meeting. They said it had been arranged by Col. Frank P. Douglas, special conciliator of the textile division of the conciliation service.

Gov. Harry W. Nice warned both sides in the industrial controversy that violence would not be permitted. He also offered to appoint a mediation committee.

Two Guards Injured.

Col. Frank P. Douglas, Federal labor conciliator, wired the Governor that the strike would soon be settled. However, Charles D. Walton, the manager of the huge plant, said he doubted this and that the strike was far from being adjusted.

The seriously wounded man was Charles F. Thuss, a foreman. He suffered a gashed abdomen when he attempted to leave a train at the plant. Two guards at the plant also were injured but were treated at the factory infirmary.

When the strike started, over a union demand for a 15 per cent wage increase, strike leaders agreed to allow office workers and maintenance men to enter the plant to keep machinery in repair. These workers have been brought to the plant daily by a Baltimore & Ohio train from Cumberland, 4 miles from the factory. Plant officials had agreed not to use strike-breakers.

Today when the special train pulled into the yard, a group of pickets were waiting for it on the platform. James Dundon, a union official, said the strikers had reason to believe that production workers were also being taken into the plant on the train.

George Baldanzi, another union official, said the trouble started as one of the workers getting off the train swung his fist at a picket. However, a technical employe of the plant said the pickets urged their fellows to "stop those men."

Guards Charge Crowd.

Guards, swinging clubs, rushed into the crowd around the train. Dundon said that two shots were fired by the guards, but that apparently they shot into the air, as no one was hurt by them. Dundon added that the fighting began when company police and four State policemen at the plant attempted to push the pickets away from the train.

Among the injured were Edward Witt, 38, Ridgely, W. Va.; Ray Weaver, 27, Valley Road; A. F. Burnell, 23, Chesaptown; Arthur Athey, 29, Cumberland; Robert Clemm, 22, Cresaptown; Dill Starkey, 25, Eckhart; J. C. Suckey, 29, Cresaptown, and Ray Bowman, Cresaptown.

The plant which employs 9,000 persons, is the largest industry in this city of 40,000.

Navy Rules Slight Favorite Over Army for Annual Battle Today

Picard Tops Open Golf at Augusta

Walper With 38-35–73, Four Strokes Behind in $5,000 Tourney.

Houghton Cards a 78; as Six Players Are Tied With 71s.

By the United Press.

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 27.—Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., nearest thing to a mechanical man golf has seen since Robert Tyre Jones quit glory for gold, moved flawlessly around the country club course today in 69—two under par—to lead the field after 18 holes in the $5,000 Augusta open championship.

Unbothered by the near-freezing temperature and blustery wind which swept the course, Picard was out in 36, matching par figures exactly, and home in 33. He was never over par coming home and bagged birdies at the 400-yard tenth and the 347-yard dog-leg fourteenth.

Manero and Smith Tied.

His nearest rivals after the first day of firing in this 72-hole chase were Tony Manero, of Greensboro, N. C., National open champion, and Horton Smith, the consistent shotmaker from Chicago, with 70s. Manero and Smith did their firing on the Forest Hills course, this being a double-barreled tournament because of the tremendous field. Tomorrow the players reverse links. Par on the Forest Hills course is 71, and it is not considered quite as difficult as the club layout.

One stroke behind in the 71 brackets were Al Watrous, Detroit; Craig Wood, Deal, N. J.; Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J.; Jimmy Hines, Garden City, N. Y.; Les Madison, Seattle; John Bulla, Chicago, and Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va. Wood and Watrous had brilliant 33s on the back nine.

Leon Walper, Bethesda, Md., driving-range instructor, finished with a 73, five strokes behind the front runner. Walper carded a 38 out and came in with 35. Al Houghton, of the Bannockburn Club, Washington, D. C., shot a 40, 38 for an 18-hole score of 78.

Runyan Shoots 73.

Between 69 and 75 were 39 players, some famed, some comparatively unknown. Heading the 72 shooters was Denny Shute, of Boston, winner of the national P. G. A. title at Pinehurst last week. Shute was out in 36 and home in 36 as his putting blade continued its beautiful work. His partners in this division were Cliff Spencer, Baltimore; Johnny Revolta, Chicago, former P. G. A. king; Clarence Doser, Rochester, N. Y., and Ed Burke, Cleveland, brother of Billy, the former Open and P. G. A. titlist.

Paul Runyan, 1934 P. G. A. winner; Willie McFarlane, the Tuckahoe, N. Y., school teacher; Mortie Dutra, and Abe Espnosa were among the 11 who scored 73's, as was George Picard, Henry's kid brother.

The only famed golfers who will have to improve their scores tomorrow or face the danger of failing to qualify for the 36-hole run down the stretch on Sunday are Ray Mangrum, who had a 77; Walter Hagen and Leo Diesel, who shot 78's and Billy Burke, who had a 79.

The low amateur for the day was Charlie Whaley, of Augusta, who had a neat 75.

At the end of tomorrow's 18 holes

Harvard's Grid Team Puts Ledger in Black

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—From a standpoint of games won and lost, Harvard football experienced one of its leanest years in 1935. Financially, however, it not only was the one sport to show a profit, but accounted for a $4,747 athletic surplus for the year ended last June 30, a Harvard Aathletic Association financial report showed tonight.

Total net receipts of the athletic association for the 1935-36 academic years were $520,174, nearly half of which—$260.003—accrued from varsity football.

Barry, Former Nat, Dies.

Los Angeles, Nov. 27 (AP).—John C. Barry, one-time major league baseball player, died today in a sanitarium after a three months' illness.

A native of Newberg, N. Y., Barry, 58, was graduated from Holy Cross and played with the Washington Senators, New York Giants and Philadelphia Nationals.

Charles Town Guards Against Horse Sponge

Charles Town is prepared to protect horses against sponging at the meeting which opens on Monday, President Al Boyle, of the nearby West Virginia track, told The Post over the telephone last night. Every horse that races at Charles Town will be thoroughly examined by the track veterinarian in the paddock before being allowed to run. Equipment, which includes a small electric light, to be inserted in the nostrils of horses, has been installed for the examinations. In addition, Boyle said, the stables will be amply guarded.

The saliva test will be made in every race, he said. The horses to be examined, being left to the discretion of the stewards.

One Man on 3 Horses, Is Title of This Story

New Orleans, Nov. 27 (AP).—William McG. Keefe, sports editor of the Times-Picayune, the only writer to pick the 1936 Kentucky Derby finishers one, two, three, started predicting with a bang at the opening of the Fair Grounds season here yesterday.

He selected Zevson, Biography and Boldlover to finish in that order in the feature race and that's how they ran. Zevson paid $17.20 for each $2 mutuel ticket.

Ross Is Booed As He Beats Jannazzo

By the United Press.

New York, N. Y., Nov. 27.—Barney Ross tonight retained his world welterweight title by winning an unanimous 15-round decision over Izzy Jannazzo, of Alabama, at Madison Square Garden, but he was a sorry-looking champion in doing it.

Defending his crown for the first time since he won it from Jimmy McLarnin 17 months ago, Barney made the poorest fight of his seven-year career. He was booed loudly by the 8,500 fans as he left the ring.

In this, Barney's first appearance in the Garden, he appeared somewhat flabby at 143½ pounds. He was unable to halt the unorthodox flickings and clubbings of his younger opponent and was slowed to a walk at times. He appeared old, tired and pathetic.

Sporadic Flurries Win.

But the snap-in punches he launched in sporadic flurries enabled him to retain the crown. It was a poor fight, judged by any standard, and the customers who paid $22,840 to see the brawl were justly disappointed.

Although Barney had engaged in nine over-the-weight matches since winning the title from McLarnin on May 28, 1935, he did not appear to be in his usual championship condition. And as the 27-year-old Chicago scrapper matched stamina with his 21-year-old challenger, he was plainly the more fatigued. But his punch, and Jannazzo's lack of a punch, was responsible for Barney's victory.

Although Barney won nine rounds, several by paper-thin margins, his condition forced him to coast through early portions of most of the rounds and then try to beat out victory in the closing minute. The trick worked fairly well, as far as Ross was concerned, but it did not please the customers, who clamored for action.

Jannazzo, with six years of youth

Richmond Coach Will Ask Ruling On Tying Safety

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 27.—Homer Baker, Thomas Jefferson High football coach, planned today to write Walter Okeson, chairman of the national rules committee for an interpretation of the rule governing the play on which Maury High was given a safety to tie the Jeffs, 2-2, at Norfolk yesterday.

The officials ruled a safety against the Richmond team when Billy Walker, a back, was charged with holding while Alex Moore was trying to punt from behind his own goal line.

Umpire "Beef" Hoffman called the penalty. Coach Baker protested but the officials stuck by their guns on the decision.

L. S. U.-Tulane Battle Shares Spotlight

New York, Nov. 27.—Its major objectives mainly realized, the college football season steps a bit closer to the final fadeout tomorrow with a slender series of games topped by the thirty-seventh clash between Army and Navy.

With Washington's huskies definitely selected to carry the Far Western banner in the Rose Bowl, interest will center tomorrow on Louisiana State's tussle with Tulane at Baton Rouge, Tex., Christians fray with Southern Methodist and such other major engagements as those involving Stanford and Columbia, Nebraska and Oregon State, Boston College and Holy Cross, and Georgia and Georgia Tech.

Louisiana State, still hoping for an invitation to oppose Washington's Pacific Coast champions in the Rose Bowl classic at Pasadena New Year's Day, will try to clinch the Southeastern Conference crown in its traditional meeting with Tulane. Held to an early season draw by Texas, Louisiana State is undefeated and untied within the conference and holds a slight bulge over Alabama, undefeated, but tied by Tennessee within the league.

Alabama Favored.

Whatever the outcome of L. S. U.'s final test, however, the impression still is rather generally held that Alabama will get the Rose Bowl bid.

Texas Christian, now tied with Arkansas for the Southwest Conference lead, can assure itself of no worse than a tie by beating Southern Methodist at Dallas.

The two big intersectional contests of the day find Nebraska and Stanford slight favorites. Nebraska, the Big Six champion, will need to watch its step, however, for Oregon State musters real scoring power. Stanford, too, will have no walkover for Columbia's tricky attack conceivably might overbalance the invaders big advantage in weight and power.

Otherwise Holy Cross is favored over Boston College in the other Eastern feature tomorrow and Georgia Tech probably is entitled to a slight edge over Georgia.

Cards Asking Pirates $175,000 And Seven Players for Dean

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 27.—The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette said tonight it learned the St. Louis Cardinals are demanding $175,000 in cash and seven players from the Pittsburgh Pirates for Dizzy Dean, baseball's celebrated pitcher.

And, the newspaper asserted Pie Traynor, Pirate manager, said:

"The door is still open. I consider the deal still on the fire."

"Sam Breadon (owner of the Cards) told me when I first approached him in quest of Dean that he could get in cash between $400,000 and $500,000 for Dizzy. But he prefers playing material with which to replenish the Cards and his minor league farms. That is why his demands for so much playing material, major and minor, are so heavy."

The seven players listed in the deal were:

Also, these Pirate minor leaguers: Bernie Cobb, outfielder and first baseman at Tulsa (Texas League) last season; Kenneth Heintzelman, southpaw pitcher with Jeannette (Pennsylvania Association) last season, and Proctor Richmond, Hutchinson, Kans. (Western Association), shortstop.

The newspaper said Traynor asserted he and Pirate officials would discuss the deal further Monday in Pittsburgh, and that Traynor added:

"If we could talk the Cardinals out of the Vaughan angle we could swing the deal. The cash consideration is not the drawback."

Stanford Seeks To Even Score With Lions

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 27.—Seeking consolation for the 7-0 beating in the 1934 Rose Bowl game, Stanford meets Columbia tomorrow in the Polo Grounds before 40,000 in one of the outstanding intersectional games of the day.

Beaten four times, but boasting a 14-14 tie with Washington, coast conference champions, Stanford was given an even chance to win. The Lions, defeated this year by Army, Michigan and Dartmouth, have rested two weeks in preparation for the game, and Sid Luckman, their passing ace, is recovered from injuries and ready to go.

Tiny Thornhill brings an inexperienced team East. The Indians have relied mainly on an offense in which every man in the backfield throws the ball, and tomorrow's battle is expected to develop into a wide open, fly-ball contest.

Forced to practice in snow and freezing weather since arriving East, the Stanford players are equipped with hand warmers which they will use as an expedient against fumbling.

Thornhill said he figured the game was "about even," and added:

"Though primarily we arranged this game as a reward for our squad after a hard season, we're not taking it lightly. You know we never have quite got over that beating we took from Columbia in the Rose Bowl."

Three players in each starting lineup will be playing their last intercollegiate football game, George Furey, Johnny Hudasky, and Joe Coviello of Columbia, and Quarterback Hoos, Halfback Fred Williams, and Tackle "Cab" Callaway of Stanford.

Huskies Picked West's Bowl Selection

U. of Washington Will Pick Alabama or L. S. U. as Foe, Is Belief.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 27.—Prof. Hugh C. Willett, President of the Pacific Coast Conference, announced today that members had unanimously named University of Washington to represent the West in the annual Rose Bowl football game at Pasadena New Year's Day.

The Huskies' overwhelming 40-to-0 rout of Washington State yesterday insured their presence in the historic bowl, but a secret poll of conference members was necessary to make it formal.

General opinion is that the team will be either Alabama or Louisiana State. Alabama finished its season yesterday with a victory over Vanderbilt, and wound up the schedule undefeated, but tied once—by Tennessee. L. S. U., similarly undefeated but tied by Texas, rounds out its season tomorrow with its annual clash with Tulane.

Washington made its last appearance in the Rose Bowl in 1926, playing Alabama and Losing, 20 to 19.

L. S. U., Alabama, Pitt Favored in Bowl Poll

Los Angeles—Louisiana State, Alabama and Pittsburgh topped an unofficial 'postcard poll" conducted by Bill Henry, sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, to sound out sentiment for an Eastern and Southern football team for the Rose Bowl game.

Of 3,420 votes from 86 towns, mostly in Southern California, L. S. U. led with 894; Alabama second, 818; Pittsburgh third, 531, and Fordham fourth, 507.

Rickey to Sell Two Cardinals

St. Louis, Nov. 27 (AP).—Branch Rickey said tonight two Cardinal players would be sold to major league clubs during the baseball convention at Montreal next week. He did not name the two.

The Cardinal vice president, who starts East tomorrow, disclosed the nature of his proposition to Manager Pie Traynor of the Pittsburgh Pirates at their conference here this week—Dizzy Dean for seven players (unnamed by Rickey).

Rickey also said he was ready to talk trade about any other member of the "gas house gang."

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 27.—Hotels bulged with noisy and jostling merrymakers today as the first of the Nation's biggest football crowd poured in for the annual tussle between Uncle Sam's service teams while the Army and Navy coaches, their squads fit, cocked apprehensive eyes at gray skies that dropped occasional light flurries of snow.

Freezing temperatures, borne on frigid winds, held Philadelphia in its grip and the weatherman looked for another cold afternoon tomorrow as nearly 102,000 spectators, the largest football attendance in the country this year and the biggest in the East's grid history, pack into the big Municipal Stadium, where Jack Dempsey lost his heavyweight boxing championship to Gene Tunney 10 years ago.

Navy Slight Favorite.

Navy rules a slight favorite with odds of 6 to 5 and 7 to 5 most commonly quoted. The Tars, paced by Bill Ingram and Sneed Schmidt, earned a 3-0 decision over Notre Dame a week before the Irish trounced Army, 20-6. Army, however, had not then fully recovered from the mid-season influenza "epidemic" that struck the Plains. With their spark plug, Monk Meyer, and his teammates again in top physical condition, the Cadets expect to hang up their twenty-first victory in the series. Navy has won 13 games. Three others were tied.

Every train brought its quota of enthusiasts today, while 50 special football trains will come in before noon Saturday with thousands of fans, four of the trains bringing the Midshipmen from Annapolis, and three others with the Cadets from West Point.

Hotel rooms were not obtainable. S. R. O. sign was hung out a month ago. Jamming smoke-filled hotel lobbies were the Navy adherents, admirals down to ensigns, and the Army contingent, from gold-braided generals to bright-eyed lieutenants, and pretty girls with miniature pigskins and chrysanthemums pinned to their fur coats.

The rival gridiron warriors, who arrived last night, were quartered in quiet suburban camps, the Army at Green Hills Farm and the Navy at Valley Forge Military Academy. Preparatory work was finished for the Cadets and they tapered off with a long walk, but Lieut. Tom Hamilton, the Navy mentor, sent the Tars through a light drill this afternoon on the stadium turf.

Both squads were fit and determined to win. The Cadets, laid low a short while ago by influenza, have recovered and while Army's coach, Lieut. Gar Davidson, said his squad was tired, he felt that his regulars would be ready.

Meyer Not to Start.

Monk Meyer, the Army's trump card, will not start, but likely will get in late in the opening quarter. Jack Ryan, the quarterback hurt in last week's Hobart game, likewise was not scheduled to start. Davidson said he might be used, however. Bob Kasper, Jim Craig, H. R. Sullivan and Jim Schwenck were listed as Army's opening backfield.

Hamilton has not decided on his line-up, but gave out a tentative starting eleven which included Bill Ingram, Sneed Schmidt, Frank Case and Bob Antrim as the ball-carrying quartet. Some thought Hamilton might follow his strategy used against Notre Dame and start Charles Riemann and Ned Thomas.

Grass Is Dyed Green For Army-Navy Social

Philadelphia, Nov. 27 (AP).—The frost has been on the pumpkin a long time hereabout, but the grass'll be a mid-summer green for the Army-Navy game tomorrow.

Men from the Department of Public Works sprayed every inch of the withered grass in Municipal Stadium today with a special chemical dye, a harmless coloring which will not cause infection in any players who may be cut and bruised.

Service Heads To See Army Play Navy

Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, and Maj. Gen. Stanley D. Embrigk, deputy chief of staff of the Army, arranged today to see the colorful gridiron combat along with thousands of others going from the Capital by trains, buses and automobile.

Secretary of the Navy Swanson, who is recuperating from a lengthy illness, does not plan to attend the game, acecording to the Associated Press, but Mrs. Swanson and several guests will occupy the Secretary's box.

Secretary of War Woodring and Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, will be kept away by official business.

Among high officers of the Army command who expect to be in the stands are Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, chief of the Air Corps; Maj. Gen. William H. Tschappat, chief of ordnance; Maj. Gen. James B. Allison, chief signal officer; Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Boschen, chief of finance, and Maj. Gen. John H. Hughes, assistant chief of staff.

Naval officers present will include Admiral Adolphus Andrews, chief of the Bureau of Navigation; Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair; Rear Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, chairman of the general board, and Capt. William D. Puleston, chief of Intelligence.

Rooting for Army will be Maj. General Leon Kromer who was captain and a 130-pound quarterback of the eleven years ago.

Time Out! By Chet Smith

Peppery Pays $40 in Sixth Event

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 27.—Rouge Et Noir, a daughter of St. Germains which has been knocking around this State trying to get out of the maiden ranks, hopped, skipped and jumped to victory today in the John Seymour Purse, feature of the program at this course. In the colors of Walter M. Jeffords which have supplied many beaten favorites this fall and saddled with the magic of Preston M. Burch, Washington trainer, Roue Et Noir came from last place to trounce Siam, heavily-played favorite from the Bomar Stable, by three parts of a length. The Shandon Farm's Prince Arthur was third in the field of six juveniles competing over the mile and seventy yards course.

The winning filly was given plenty of help in the race. Just where Jockey R. Watson was riding Siam perhaps will never be known. He had the colt on the inside, the outside, the inside and the outside. Finally he came around horses to take the lead only to have Rouge Et Noir, one that trailed to the half mile pole, put on a stretch rush, under the whipping of Jockey Lindberg that Siam could not match.

Rouge Et Noir apparently was given the cold shoulder by most of the 8,000 shivering fans, with the result that the right parties collected a $9.70 mutuel.

Flying Falcon Disqualified.

A disqualification marked the running of the sixth race. Flying Falcon was the winner, but in taking the decision via the camera the Flying Ebony colt did all but pile up the field. The officials called Jockey M. Peters, Flying Falcon's rider into the stand before P. McDermott and C. Kurtsinger, who had the mounts on Peppery and Live One could protest.

The numbers were shifted to give Peppery, the property of Mrs. John Bosley, jr., the victory at a $40.30 mutuel. Live One, which suffered most from the interference, was placed second with Anne G. moved into third money.

Peppery was away poorly and came with a belated rush on the outside. Stavka, which finished fifth, was bumped by Live One after the latter had been hit by Flying Falcon.

Shanteb, one of the few in the field of eight not hampered by the bad start, won the first race by two and a half lengths and paid a $5.80 mutuel while in the role of a favorite. The Flying Ebony gelding had some competition from Happy Hostess, but drew out when the real test came. Happy Hostess lasted to be second while Mahogany squeezed the disappointing Happy and Gay out of the money.

B. F. Christmas' Aroused brought the favorite players their second winning in the second race. Capably handled by Jockey Freddy Faust, the Stimulus colt came out of the pack to take the purse in good fashion. Fair Deal and Berceuse were the others in the money circle. Aroused paid a $5.40 mutuel.

The day's third straight favorite won the fourth race. Howard Bruce's Mattapony, with Jockey Peters in the saddle, drew far out in the stretch to down Ebony Parasol and Swift Flash, a couple of long shots. Mattapony paid a $5.80 mutuel.

Rollick broke the spell of the choices in the fourth race by leading Post Brigade to the wire after a trip over the mile and three sixteenths course. Third money went to Hail. The winner, coupled with Dunair in the betting, paid a $13.60 mutuel, and was nicely handled by Apprentice Jockey R. Morris.

Siam, an odds-on favorite in the betting, finishing second to Rouge et Noir, which paid a $9.60 mutuel in the John Seymour Purse, the day's feature race. Siam took the lead entering the stretch but was overhauled by the winner, which had trailed the field for 6 furlongs.

WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start poor from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 1:36. Off at 1:40. Winner, J. B. J. Townsend's b. g. (3), by Flying Ebony—Shanty. Trained by T. Lee Evans. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:15 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHANTEB, $5.80, $3.70, $3.00; HAPPY HOSTESS, $7.00, $4.10; MAHOGANY, $3.60.

SHANTEB, eased along with HAPPY HOSTESS and HAPPY AND GAY to the far turn, was sent to the outside of leaders to dispose of HAPPY HOSTESS and drew out nicely in the final sixteenth. HAPPY HOSTESS, hard ridden throughout and favored by the start, shook off HAPPY AND GAY and continued willingly, but unable to resist the winner. HAPPY AND GAY was off alertly, but was kept in on the rail in the heavier going throughout and tired. MAHOGANY was off poorly and gained steadily during the running. MISS MILLICENT went evenly, but could not threaten. LAST HARVEST swerved at the break and had no chance. FLYING ZELMA was not a factor.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 2:06½. Off at 2:11½. Winner, B. F. Christmas' ch. c. (3), by Stimulus—Emma Helen. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46 3-5, 1:14 3-5.

*Field.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—AROUSED, $5.40, $3.30, $2.90; FAIR DEAL, $4.40, $3.40; BERCEUSE, $6.80.

AROUSED, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, gained sharply on the swing to the stretch and under good handling, was opening a gap on FAIR DEAL at the finish. FAIR DEAL disposed of GLYNNA and BERCEUSE to take command and tired slightly in the final sixteenth. BERCEUSE, forced to race wide most of the way, continued gamely when displaced. GLYNNA dropped back gradually after being a keen early factor. GOLDEN KEY was shuffled back at the far turn and went evenly after recovering. SIR ROSE failed to get to the front and could not threaten. ARGOAN was held safe throughout.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:38½. Off at 2:44½. Winner, Bruce's b. f. (2), by Trojan—The Show. Trained by F. Garrett. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:47 1-5, 1:14 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MATTAPONY, $5.80, $3.70 $3.00; EBONY PARASOL, $6.70, $4.30; SWIFT FLASH (field), $5.20.

MATTAPONY, much the best, was steadied along just off the leaders, drew out when called upon and was being taken in hand at the end. EBONY PARASOL, kept on the outside throughout, closed gamely, but was no match for the winner. SWIFT FLASH, last away, gained steadily during the running and showed an excellent effort. VIVOLA was used up pressing the pace of TRUE TUNE. SALAVINA closed willingly from a slow beginning. TRUE TUNE, stopped from hustling tactics while setting the pace. DEEPWICK dropped back early. The others were outrun.

FOURTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:09. Off at 3:10. Winner, E. Carver's b. g. (6), by Canter—Rose Cloud. Trained by L. M. Carver. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:51, 1:17, 1:44 2-5, 1:58 4-5, 2:06 3-5.

†G. C. Berger-E. Carver entry.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROLLICK (entry), $13.60, $6.20, $4.50; POST BRIGADE, $20.40, $10.50; HAIL, $4.00.

ROLLICK, a forward factor from the beginning, came around leaders to take command and lasted ahead of POST BRIGADE. The latter came from far back to close with a belated rush. HAIL closed gamely on the outside. CHATTERDOO dropped back after pressing the pace of ROCKRIM and then came again at the end. SECRET VOTE raced wide throughout. DUNAIR closed full of run on the inside. ROCKRIM stopped after six furlongs. APATHY went forwardly to the stretch and stopped.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:41½. Off at 3:45. Winner, W. M. Jeffords' ch. c. (2), by Sir Germans—Baton Rouge. Trained by P. M. Burch. Value to winner, $850; second $200; third, $100; fourth $50. Time, 0:24 4-5, 0:49 1-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:42 4-5, 1:47 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGE ET NOIR, $9.70, $3.40, $2.60; SIAM, $2.70, $2.10; PRINCE ARTHUR, $2.70.

ROUGE ET NOIR, not hurried during the early running, was steered to the outside of leaders at the back stretch, worked to the leaders with a bold move under pressure, was drawn clear of SIAM at the end. The latter, miserably ridden, was all over the track before gaining sharply on the outside to take command entering the stretch and could not resist the winner when put to punishment. PRINCE ARTHUR reached the top end of the far turn, but tired gradually after being displaced. MORE POISE had early speed. MR. WHITEHALL had speed in spots. TELLWICK tired from chasing the early pace of MORE POISE.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming for 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:09. Off at 4:10½. Winner, Mrs. J. Bosley's b. f. (4), by Claptrap—Nettle. Trained by E. Young. Value to winner, $700; second $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25 2-5, 0:50 2-5, 1:15 4-5, 1:43 2-5 1:51 1-5.

†Won, but was disqualified.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEPPERY, $40.30, $17.40, $8.40; LIVE ONE, $7.70, $5.30; ANNE G, $17.40.

FLYING FALCON, steadied along closest to the pace of ANNE G, took a slight lead entering the stretch, swerved on LIVE ONE repeatedly, for which he was disqualified. PEPPERY, unprepared for the break, was allowed to settle into stride while trailing, moved up sharply entering the stretch and closed with a belated rush on the outside. LIVE ONE, not hurried during the early running, moved into contention leaving the back stretch and fought it out gamely despite interference. ANNE G, tired from setting the pace. STAVKA raced on the inside throughout and had a rough trip, figuring in the stretch interference. APPRENTICE could not threaten at any stage. KIEVSON moved up menacingly and then tired. UNENCUMBERED stopped. MINTON showed a dull effort. RUNNING WATER had early speed.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:41. Off at 4:44½. Winner, Mrs. P. Da Lee Watts' red ro. h. (5), by Golden Spire—Daisy Vein. Trained by P. Da Lee Watts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:50 3-5, 1:17 2-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:50 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN VEIN, $11.20, $6.80, $4.70; ICY WIND, $27.10, $12.40; SEA GULL, $3.80.

GOLDEN VEIN, rated to the stretch, came with good speed when called upon and was under a mild drive at the end. SEA GULL, ran PARALDA into defeat, opened a good lead, but could not resist the winner. ICY WIND, far back for a half, closed with a belated rush and was going fastest at the end. PARALDA stopped after setting and pressing the pace. QUIET PLEASE stopped. BABY SWEEP went forwardly for six furlongs. PARITY failed to rally when placed to drive.

Hanken, Prather, Turner, G. W. Stars, Join Oriole Grid Pros

Trio Will Play In Tilt Here Tomorrow

Doffing their Simon-pure gridiron regalia for the more lucrative robes of professionalism, Ray Hanken, Dale Prather and Jay Turner, all members of the George Washington eleven which concluded its most successful season since 1908 Thanksgiving Day, last night cast their lot with the Baltimore Orioles of the Dixie League. They will make their first appearance in Oriole livery tomorrow at Griffith Stadium, where Baltimore tangles with the Washington Pros.

Hanken, the 180-pound end who was drafted for backfield duty and scored the winning touchdown against West Virginia last Thursday, is one of the best wingmen—if not the peer of them all—developed at the downtown school in the last decade. Stocky and tough as the corner cop, Hanken was one of the most important factors in George Washington's success this year.

Prather, a young giant of 210 pounds, closed his college career with a brilliant performance at tackle against the Mountaineers, smashing through to smear innumerable plays before they were fairly under way. Although thought to be moody and temperamental, Prather surprised even his most ardent supporters with his hard and consistent play.

Turner Welcome Addition.

Turner will be a welcome addition to an overworked and understaffed Oriole backfield with his bruising brand of line plunging. He was reckoned one of the Colonials' most consistent ground-gainers and a bear on the defense.

By signing with Baltimore the three may have automatically closed to themselves all other avenues to a pro grid career, inasmuch as the Dixie circuit has a working agreement with the American Association, and is negotiating with the National and American Leagues for similar agreements.

Is a "Rematch."

Sunday's game will be the second between Washington and Baltimore, their first—played last week in the Monumental City, ended in a 7-7 stalemate and almost a riot. About 3,000 rabid Oriole supporters hurled pop bottles and other articles on the field in protest when Washington, stalling for time, attempted to draw penalties by playing off-side with Baltimore near the goal-line. The strategy, however, failed.

Ted Wright (nee Bankhead) also is with Baltimore, and did Washington's cause untold damage last Sunday by his prodigious punting. It was the best brand of kicking, collegiate, professional or otherwise, committed in Baltimore this season. Wright also made a couple of sizable gains against the Pros but, fortunately, was brought down by an alert secondary before getting away.

The Pros will practice this afternoon at 3 o'clock at Seat Pleasant in preparation for the game.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 27.—The best Washington amateurs fell by the wayside as the all-American boxing tournament came to a close at the Hippodrome here tonight before a crowd of 6,000.

Six of the seven mitten manipulators from the Capital who got by the first night's milling were defeated in the semifinal round.

Henry Peterson, of the Terminal Y. M. C. A., advanced to the finals when the luck of the draw put him in action against William McBride, the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A.'s representative in the 126-pound division.

Peterson lost his chance of becoming the only Washington fighter to make the trip to Cuba which has been promised the winners next month, when he was defeated by Abe Denner, of the Irish-American A. C., of Boston, in the finals.

Eddie Saugstad, 118 pounds; Steve Thompson, 160 pounds, and Steve Mamakos, 147 pounds—all from the District National Guard team—were eliminated by the decision route. Maynard Daniels, representing the Fifth Marine Reserves in the heavyweight division, who advanced to the semifinals on a bye, was knocked out of the tournament.

Bill Banks, 112-pounder, the only representative besides McBride from the Twelfth Street Y to reach the semifinals, also was knocked out.

McBride spent the better part of the first round stalking Peterson with his right hand poised to shoot across a knockout blow. Peterson, however, carried the fight to the colored lad in the next two rounds, rushing in and repeatedly beating him to the punch to win the decision which carried him to the finals.

Denner, a Boston newsboy, was awarded the judges' decision over Peterson after having the Capitolian on the floor twice in the three rounds the final bouts were scheduled.

In the first two rounds Peterson found Denner's superior height and reach a grave handicap. Denner clipped him with a left on the nose that sent him down for a count of 7 in the first round.

In the second round Denner caught Peterson with a right to the jaw, flooring him for an eight count. The slender Washington fighter was all courage and arose once more to carry the battle to Denner.

In the third round Peterson got in his best blows—a number of rights that landed flush on Denner's face. But, Denner's point margin, built up in the first two rounds, provided entirely too great an obstacle to surmount.

Saugstad was eliminated by Salvatore Bartello, of Boston, the New England champion. Saugstad gave a good account of himself, but the Boston boy carried too many guns in the form of superior ring guile and a wicked right hand.

Daniels was knocked out in the first round by Yancey Henry, of the Irish American A. C., of Boston. Henry caught the Washington heavyweight with a paralyzing left to the jaw exactly two minutes after the starting bell.

Steve Mamakos dropped his semi-final decision to George Martin, another Boston battler. Mamakos had his nose bloodied midway of the second round, and while it did not bother him in any way, this slight injury may have swayed the judges to some extent in their rendering of a verdict.

Dominic Siano, of Portchester, N. Y., scored an unpopular verdict over Steve Thompson. Thompson peppered Siano throughout with lefts and rights to the head. The verdict which eliminated Steve from the finals was roundly booed by the capacity crowd.

118-pound class—Salvatore Bartello, Irish-American A. C., Boston, defeated Eddie Saugstad, National Guard, Washington.

George Martin, Irish-American A. C., Boston, defeated Steve Mamakos, National Guard, Washington, D. C.

Grid Rules Official Doubtful Of Changes, Despite Hullabaloo

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 27.—Despite the annual hullabaloo to change the intercollegiate football rules, W. S. Langford, secretary of the rules committee, said today he "doubts if any major changes will be made."

Suggestions and recommendations for changes received by him this season indicate some dissatisfaction, he said with:

(1) The rule of interference with a forward pass receiver in the end zone.

(2) The custom of allowing the officials to judge whether a free ball is accidentally or intentionally kicked, and

(3) The importance played by the point after touchdown.

In his personal opinion, Langford said he felt that only the interference rule, giving the interfered with team the ball on the 1-yard line presents a real problem.

"I think we have some justification in thinking some teams have been willing to take the chance of being called for interference rather than let the receiver catch the ball for a touchdown," he said.

"If you cut the penalty down, as some have suggested, I think you will have a real problem on your hands. I don't know any fairer solution than the present rule."

Langford sees no reason why the rule on kicking a free ball should not be let alone. The point came up in the Yale-Navy game this season, when Larry Kelley, Yale captain, kicked a fumbled ball in play that set up the winning touchdown.

Langford doesn't agree with some who believe that kicking a free ball, intentionally or accidentally, should be ruled a foul and the ball given to the kicker's opponents at the spot of foul.

"If we did that," he said, "the men going after a bounding ball would have to be careful the ball did not hit them in the legs and I would think they would slow up. The way the rule is now, I don't think a man has one chance in 50 of kicking intentionally and getting away with it."

Langford said he expected the annual cry to abolish the kick for point after touchdown or to minimize its importance in some way would be raised. He foresees no possibility of change in the present system, however.

Other suggestions almost sure to come up at the meeting of the rules committee, he said, are:

1. Revision of the rule which states that a player carrying the ball is "down" when any part of his body except his hands and feet touch the ground to read "when in the grasp of an opponent."

The object of this suggestion is to allow a ball-carrier running well in the open to slip and fall without having the ball declared "dead" when his knee touches the ground.

2. Start the second half exactly where the first ended instead of kicking off.

3. Giving the passer as much protection as the punter.

St. John's Coach 'Scared Stiff' Of Hopkins

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 27.—Members of the St. John's College football squad returned from their Thanksgiving holiday at noon today and had their final workout before the 54th game with Johns Hopkins.

Coach Valentine (Dutch) Lentz, who says he is 'scared to death" of the Hopkins team, had the players out in sweatclothes and jackets. They did not wear their football gear.

After a short exercise period the coach worked the team against Hopkins plays in dummy scrimmage, followed by a signal drill on their own formations.

Lentz bases his "fear" of Hopkins on the law of averages. He contends that the Blue Jays are potentially stronger than they have shown in competition this season, and are due for a break.

"They will be all steamed up tomorrow," he said. "They are due to click and get the breaks at least once this season and I'm afraid its going to occur against us."

Pollard's Eleven Victor Here, 41-0

The Brown Bombers, gridiron proteges of Fritz Pollard, former colored all-American end at Brown University, administered a 41-0 defeat to a picked team representing the Washington colored sandlot conference last night at Griffith Stadium, before a slim crowd of 300 persons.

Lilliard made the first touchdown on a 15-yard off tackle play and added the extra point by placekick. Troupe scored the second from the 3-yard line, and Lilliard booted for the conversion. In the second quarter Troupe again scored on a 5-yard run around the All-Stars' right end, and Lilliard placekicked the extra point.

Simms, a substitute back, picked up a fumble in the third and ran 18 yards for a touchdown, Hansberry placekicking for an additional count. Hansberry scored the next, and the final touchdown was negotiated by Austin on a 15-yard pass from Summers.

Police Boys' Teams To Meet for Crown

The Metropolitan Police Boys Club football league for 135-pound teams faces a crucial day tomorrow with the league-leading Precinct No. 5 Club meeting the strong Boys Club of Washington, on the Monument Lot, and the Northeast Boys Club facing St. Martin's in Griffith Stadium, both games at 11 a. m.

The police team has won two games and lost none, while the Boys Club of Washington has won one and dropped one, as has the Northeast Boys Club. The teams are playing for a trophy and gold footballs, the latter to be awarded each member of the championship team. All teams must appear at the fields on time.

Gevinson's Debut As Pro Is Awaited

Lou Gevinson will be converted from a big fish in a little pool to a minnow in a very large pool next Monday night when he makes his professional boxing debut in a six-round bout against Al Shaeffer, Baltimore featherweight.

Long established as one of the best amateurs in this vicinity, Lou has been champion in his class for a number of years. Monday night He will automatically become just another preliminary pug, who must fight his way up from the ranks.

Stanford Nation's 'Gooffiness' Football Team, Says Grayson

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 27.—Bobby Grayson, who used to do some foxy things when he directed Stanford's football team, shook his head and laughed out loud.

"I've read about Fordham's 'seven blocks of granite,' about Alabama's passing wonders and all about the Irish of Notre Dame, but we top 'em all. They call us the goofiness boys of college football, and, by gosh, they're right."

"Why," said Bobby, who preceded the team to New York to drum up publicity—and the gate receipts—for the Stanford-Columbia game, "everybody connected with our team is a screwball. Even the old man—Coach Tiny Thornill—is catching it. He does some screwy things just to keep up with the team.

Grayson let out a roar and told one on Tiny:

"You know our backs are small as football players come these days—short and squatty of about a 5.8 average. So one game, Tiny starts Freddy Williams, a 6-footer, in the backfield. We asked him how come. Tiny explains it by saying he's getting a little tired of straining his back watching his little guys in the tall grass."

Bobby says the Stanfords play goofy football, too, and it must be so. Look at their record. They started out by losing 1-3to 0 to Santa Clara and 14 to 13 to Washington State, then tied Oregon 7-all and lost to Southern California, 14 to 7. They turned right around to wallop U. C. L. A., 10 to 6, and tie Washington (the team that beat Washington State 40 to 0 yesterday) at 14 points each. Looking good, they beat Oregon State, 20 to 14, and then hit the skids again by losing, 20 to 0, to California.

"Bob Matthews and Leo Ferko, our guards, are plain loco," explained Grayson. "They're like this Larry Kelley, of Yale, I guess, only sometimes they make mistakes. They play a lot of good football, but have a swell time for themselves wise-cracking with the opposing line.

"We average 20 passes a game, excluding laterals, so one can tell when we're going to get hot. Against Washington, our boys probably hit a new daffiness high. Instead of being satisfied with a tie against the Rose Bowl team and conference champion, what did our boys do late in the game but throw passes all over the horizon from our own 27-yard line. They were sore as the devil, too, because we didn't score another touchdown.

Grayson also says the Stanfords are "goofy" to get even with the Columbias tomorrow for the 7-0 upset victory scored by the New Yorkers in the 1934 Rose Bowl game.

Navy Is Favorite Over Army Today

The student bodies will arrive around noon tomorrow with the Cadets parading on the field at 12:15 and the Midshipmen following. The West Point and Annapolis bands will lead the march. The game is set for 1:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

This will be the thirty-seventh game in the series that began back in 1890, with the count standing 20 victories for Army, 13 for Navy and 3 ties.

Navy was the sentimental favorite. Playing a more strenuous schedule, the Sailors have won five and lost three games, while Army has six victories and two defeats.

on his side and weighing 145½—2 pounds more than the champion—took everything Barney could throw at him and came back for more. None of the blows that had knocked out other opponents bothered the rugged lad from Birmingham.

Dizzy Izzy hit the floor twice, but you could hardly call either trip a knockdown. In the second round he half slipped away from one of Barney's left hooks and fell backwards to the deck. He was up immediately. And in the fifth he collided with Barney's body as he stepped in and the body shock bounced him backward to the canvas. Again he was up immediately and belting away.

Simpson Scored for W.-L.

Young Tommy Simpson scored the first touchdown in Washington and Lee's 12-to-0 victory over George Washington High on a 45-yard run, and not Jim Fixx, as reported in The Post. A misunderstanding of numbers of the players caused the error.

D. C. Bowlers Vie In Stakes Today

Many of the Capital's leading duckpinists will be enrolled among the Nation's feminine bowlers today at Norfolk, Va., to take part in the first annual rolling of the Ida Simmons Sweepstakes in honor of the country's No. 1 ranking feminine star.

The local group, made up mainly of bowlers from the Ladies District League, will be headed by Lorraine Gulli, former national champion, rated No. 2 among the Nation's best.

The contest will consist of 10 games. Five will be rolled at 3 p. m. and five at 8 p. m. at Norfolk Health Center.

Kenwood No. 1 team broke its deadlock with Manor No. 1 to take the lead in the Country Club League at Lucky Strike, whitewashing Congress No. 2. Manor No. 1 was dropped to second place when Indian Spring came through with a 605 game for its only win.

N. Y. Demands Title Fight Showdown

Order Date for Braddock-Schmeling Fight Be Set in Two Weeks.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 27.—The New York State Athletic Commission took steps today to bring about a showdown on a James J. Braddock-Max Schmeling heavyweight title fight.

The commission ordered Madison Square Garden and the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, joint promoters, to file contracts, naming a date for the show, within two weeks.

At the same time, a cable was sent Schmeling in Germany asking him to be present in person, or be represented by somebody armed with power of attorney, to approve the proposed plans.

Both Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, Garden president, and Sol Strauss, representing the Twentieth Century, said they had contracts signed by Schmeling agreeing to fight Braddock either June 3 or June 10, but they were told the papers would have to be filed with the commission before they would be recognized.

Schmeling's Sanction Sought.

Schmeling had been asked to be represented today by someone with power of attorney, but he cabled there was no one in this country in whom he would invest such authority. Joe Jacobs represents Schmeling over here, but the shrewd Teuton does his own signing.

Perturbed because of plans to match Braddock in a no-decision bout with Joe Louis at Atlantic City before Schmeling gets his promised shot at the title, the German's cable said he is relying on the commission's promise that he is the only legitimate challenger for Braddock's crown and that the champion's first championship defense must be made against him.

Prior to this Braddock was examined by three commission physicians and pronounced completely cured of the arthritis that caused postponement of his September date with Schmeling.

Dr. William H. Walker, Dr. George Howley, and Maj. Charles Bles found Braddock in tip-top condition and ready to begin hard training at once.

Garibaldi Seen Winner Over O'Mahoney

That Washingtonians may be treated to the rare spectacle of seeing a top-heavy favorite toppled in a wrestling match next Thursday night seems to be the prevailing opinion along Cauliflower Row regarding the forthcoming Danno O'Mahoney-Gino Garibaldi bout at Turner's Arena.

O'Mahoney, who once was hailed as undisputed ruler of the heavyweight burpers, of course, will be the top-heavy favorite. He has never even been extended hereabouts, much less defeated. In fact, the defeats chalked up against Danno can be counted on the fingers of one hand.

That O'Mahoney may be the victim of an upset is made possible by an unusual condition prevailing at the present time in the Rudy Dusek-controlled circuit of heavers. It seems that as the result of Yvon Robert's suffering a broken leg against Cliff Olson here a few weeks ago, the Dusek troupe is left without a legitimate heavyweight title claimant.

Olson would do very well as a claimant, but he is much too small and many refuse to take his claim seriously as Robert broke his leg not while actually grappling with Cliff, but when he turned his ankle while on the other side of the ring from Olson.

Garibaldi Good Prospect.

Now it behooves the Dusek organization to get another claimant for the throne and a more suitable representative than Garibaldi could hardly be found. Gino is an experienced workman, a master showman, tough, active and more colorful than the run-of-the-mine grappler.

O'Mahoney has had his day as ruler of the wrestlers. He no longer is a top drawing card in many of the large centers. Not only that, Danno lacks the experience and polish necessary to keep him on top. Even those who insist that the large majority of wrestling matches are "bagged" must admit that it takes a very good wrestler indeed to hold the title for any length of time, bagged or not bagged.

Garibaldi's thrilling victory over Joe Cox here last week stamps him as one of the outstanding candidates for the top spot on the circuit and may have been just the first step in a climb to the very top. O'Mahoney may be the second step.

Wheat Prices Reach Highest In Three Years

European Situation and Export Demand Are Factors.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—High prices unreached heretofore since 1933 distinguished wheat trading today. Strained political conditions overseas, together with unusually active export demand, did much to hoist wheat values. It was currently predicted Italy would purchase fully 16,000,000 bushels more wheat than previously had been believed probable.

Excess Reserves Drop $60,000,000

By the Associated Press.

Reflecting withdrawals of funds for holiday business, member bank excess reserves were reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board to have declined $60,000,000 during the week ended November 25 to $2,210,000,000. The decrease left these reserves, which provide the basis for credit expansion, far above the $800,000,000 level deemed necessary by the board for "easy money" conditions.

The drop yesterday followed a series of weekly increases since August 15, when the board raised reserve requirements by 50 per cent. Accounting in part for the decline was a $54,000,000 increase in money in circulation, bringing this to $6,429,000,000, or $609,000,000 over the same week a year ago. Gold stocks increased $35,000,000.

Pennsylvania's Net Gains in October

The principal gain was in freight revenues which rose $6,530,576 to $32,690,051. Expenses for the month increased $5,809,960 over October, 1935 to $28,988,939.

Freight Traffic 12.6% Higher Than in 1930

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended November 21 totaled 789,500 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 141,576 cars or 21.9 per cent compared with the corresponding week in 1935, 227,558 cars or 40.5 per cent above the corresponding week in 1934, and 88,450 cars or 12.6 per cent above the crresponding week in 1930. Loading of revenue freight for the week of November 21 was an increase of 4,828 cars or six-tenths of 1 per cent above the preceding week.

Grain Loadings Gain.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 36,894 cars, an increase of 2,947 cars above the preceding week, 3,524 cars above the corresponding week in 1935, and 8,935 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended November 21 totaled 22,475 cars, an increase of 2,179 cars above the preceding week this year, and 1,261 cars above the same week in 1935.

Livestock loading amounted to 19,346 cars, a decrease of 3,272 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 3,934 cars above the same week in 1935 and 187 cars above the same week in 1934. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended November 21 totaled 15,372 cars, a decrease of 2,878 cars below the preceding week this year but an increase of 3,754 cars above the same week in 1935.

All districts reported increases in the number of cars loaded with revenue freight, compared with the corresponding weeks in 1935 and 1934.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Recover Vigorously After Holiday Rest; Bonds Higher; Wheat Advances.

New York, Nov. 27.—On sales volume that recrossed the 2,000,000 share mark the stock market found its bullishly inclined friends refreshed by the holiday. Although sterling and francs moved up a little on dollars, no particular selling of securities for foreign account was reported. Leading stocks closed with gains of 1 to 5 points numerous. December wheat closed ⅝ of a cent nigher at 118⅝ cents a bushel.

News from the fighting zones of Europe over the holiday softened a little, but it still contained a menace to markets. The precipitation here showed a mixture which was neither especially bullish or bearish. Trade statistics continue to show a good rate of activity, but there is more gold on the surface than in the filling. What currently seems to be stimulating the imagination with regard to business is the large number of extra dividends voted, the wage increases and bonuses, and the considerable amount of equipment purchases for railroad and, more lately, for public utility and general industrial account.

Equipment purchases are sound business, and much of it will be done to make up for years of stinting. That business, it is hoped, will serve to keep wheels turning for a year or so, regardless of other happenings. On the other counts the future is less certain. Extra dividends in large measure are imprudent distributions of cash by corporations, forced by the penalty tax law. Such cheerfulness over the state of corporate earnings as was justified came with the realization that earnings were up.

Credit Control.

At the moment the stock market is perhaps more sensitive to influences outside the circle of current earnings, dividends and wages. More attention is being paid (1) to credit control and (2) restrictions on the freedom of men to buy and sell securities. Clearly the SEC has decided, now that the election is over, to draw in the reins. It may be that the authorities at Washington are expecting an inflationary movement in stocks (if no measures are taken to offset it) and they wish to see that professional Wall Street does not thrive too ostentatiously.

It is now conceded that the Federal Reserve Board early next year will lift the reserve requirements of the banks, in order to bring down excess reserves to, perhaps, under a billion. With the climb of excess reserves that usually comes in the first two months of the year, such an operation, the official view holds, will not endanger the cheap money market, but will put the credit surplus into an amount which would make further measures quickly effective in curbing a tendency toward inflationary use.

The experiment will be an interesting one to watch, although the game is an open one so far as the ultimate effect is concerned. What would most disturb the stock market at this time is an increase in the margin requirements, something also under the control of the Federal Reserve Board. Nobody knows what the board intends to do.

Wide Gains.

Stocks found conditions to their liking in nearly all parts of the country, and prices moved higher. Gains ranged as high as 8 points, most of the wide advances taking place in preferred issues. Many of them had favorable markets, particularly in the utility and railroad equipment sections. Common shares of the railroad utilities also continues under the inspiring reports of heavy locomotive and car buying by leading railroads. Lima, Baldwin and American Car & Foundries were leaders, with climbs of 5 and 8 points in the first two.

Attention was drawn to a revival in building construction shares, the sleeping dogs of the market for a long time. Motors came to life. Chrysler hardened more than a point. Rails moved forward 1 to 2 points. Southern Pacific, Baltimore & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson, Central and Great Northern were the most active. Steels added a fraction to 2 points to their prices.

American Telephone set a fast pace for the investment forces. In rising nearly 5 points to above 190, the shares reached the best price since 1931. North American and Consolidated Edison also expanded. International Paper & Power issues were buoyant.

Among the principal fast movers of the day were American News, Champion Paper, Cluett Peabody, Crown Zellerbach, Westinghouse, Gulf States Steel, Libbey Owens, Ford Glass, Liquid Carbonic, Mead, Penney, Raybestos, Montgomery Ward, Stone & Webster, U. S. Realty and Walworth.

Oil shares did better and were buttressed a little by the report crude oil prices might be increased next month. Rubbers held their strength. Speculative bonds also hardened and the tone of the Government list was firm.

Treasury Finance.

The Treasury's decision to add $50,000,000 of new money to the current offering of bills heightened interest in the Government bond market in the announcement to be made by the Secretary of the Treasury next week about the December financing. From several Washington sources a figure of $300,000,000 of new money is persistently mentioned. Some market observers feel that the Treasury may confine its December operations to refinancing maturities, raising new money only through the bill market.

Advance Rumely.

This morning the market proceeded to complete the job of writing off jigglery and tipstering from the price of Advance Rumely shares. In the break of 3½ points that came late Wednesday, after news tickers had printed a statement from the president saying the only remaining liquidating value of shares was between $2 and $3, came a further drop of three-quarters of a point. At 2¾ the stock was down 4½ points from its best price of Wednesday, reached just before the disturbing news was printed. The SEC is busy on the case, and the Stock Exchange also ought to be able to find something to stir its investigators as well as its committee which determines its policy on trading in securities undergoing liquidation or reorganization.

Sweetening.

The sharp rise of the past several days in the Cuban sugar shares had for its justification the intention of Secretary Wallace of the AAA to lift the Cuban sugar quota. Some hint of his intentions, or some shrewd guessing, must have been made, but the public had to wait until yesterday or today to learn of what is coming. No SEC action on that is contemplated.

Exchange Memberships.

In some brokerage circles the probable lower limit to the current decline in membership prices for the Stock Exchange is expected to be around $80,000. Bid and asked prices today were $87,000 bid and $105,000 offered. The big guns of the SEC probably will shoot away a number of less robust traders, but the outlook for business is relied upon to make seats attractive somewhere around the present level. A movement is under way to revise upward the commission rates and to change the arrangements between clearing and non-clearing firms.

Pepco October Net Up 20.71% Over Year Ago

Income for Ten Months Is Reported as $3,743,105.

The Potomac Electric Power Co. reported a net income of $415,972.49 for October in its monthly report filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, which compares with $344,601.85 for the same month last year, an increase of 20.71 per cent. For the first ten months of this year, net income of $3,743,105.59 compares with $3,290,021.55 for the corresponding period in 1935, an increase of 13.77 per cent.

Operating revenue of $1,202,322.12 last month compares with $1,098,537.28 for October, 1935, an increase of 9.45 per cent. Operating revenues for the ten months ended October 31 of $11,680,295.14 compares with $10,849,760.45 for the same period a year ago, an increase of 7.47 per cent.

Reserve Board Sees Industrial Gains

By the Associated Press.

A general advance in industrial production, employment and pay rolls was reported yesterday by the Federal Reserve Board, in its monthly review. For October, the board said, its seasonally adjusted index of industrial production stood at 109 per cent of the 1923-25 average, unchanged from the high September level and 15 points up from October last year.

Steel production was in larger volume than in any month since 1929, it was reported. Automobile production increased sharply from September to October and continued to swing upward in the first three weeks of this month.

Factory employment, at 94.3 per cent of the 1923-25 average, increased more than seasonally from September to October, with uptrends most noticeable in the durable goods industry.

London, Nov. 27.—The stock market closed steady, although trading was less active. Steel, silk and tobacco shares were strongest in the industrial section and prices for oil and mining issues also moved higher. Argentine rails and gilt-edged securities advanced, while transatlantic issues and foreign bonds remained quiet but steady.

Paris—The bourse had a generally firm tone, although prices were mixed at the close. Royal Dutch finished with a net gain of 161 francs, while rentes showed losses ranging from 60 to 80 centimes. Bank of France was quoted at 7,925 francs, a drop of 210 francs. International shares were mixed.

Group of strike pickets gathered outside of union headquarters at Cumberland after they obtained necessary medical attention following a skirmish with guards at the strike-closed Celanese plant. Gov. Nice dispatched additional State police to the scene of yesterday's disorders.

On the Air Today

Saturday night, one-time orphan of broadcasting, is making its apologies to no one this season. Once there was a theory that "everyone" went out Saturday nights. Radio is learning, however, that there is no such thing as "everyone." Even Maj. Bowes and Jack Benny cannot and do not capture more than 50 per cent of the listening audience. And they are tops.

Joining the parade of Saturday night shows tonight is "The Man Next Door," WMAL, at 7:30. It was conceived last summer at N. B. C., but the premiere was delayed by a combination of politics taking up the slack on the air schedule and a feeling that the program, as originally outlined, would be regarded as copying Phil Lord's "We, the People."

As a matter of record, "The Man Next Door" was completed and virtually ready for the air when Lord's show suddenly popped up on the Blue network. However, "The Man Next Door" is purely a Washington program—for Washington and by Washington listeners. The only marked similarity between the two programs will be the presentation of interesting persons.

"The Man Next Door" will bring to WMAL's microphone tonight a doctor's office assistant who will tell how she "sees" us as we pass through the reception room; a jockey, known to all who visit the Maryland tracks; a man who has organized an escort service for lonely Washington misses; the head of the Bureau of Rehabilitation, who will present a one-time prisoner who has been reclaimed by society, and a burlesque chorus girl. All are residents of Washington.

Hugh McIlreavy and Lee Everett will conduct the program. Incidentally, the radio audience will be invited to suggest persons for future programs. An unusual job or the unusual angles of a very prosaic job; unusual hobbies, extraordinary experiences here or abroad—all are prospective material for this newest-of-air adventures.

Other features today:

Naomi Miller—Pianist with two seasons of instruction, will be presented with three other children in junior music federation program, WMAL, at 10:30 a. m.

"Hot fountain pen"—Adrian Rollini, piccolo specialist, featured in "Saturday Swing Club," WJSV, at 6:45.

Rudy Vallee—Is Ed Wynn's guest star, WMAL, at 8. Vallee and Wynn will play a saxophone and violin duet.

Joe Cook—And Charlotte Symons, Metropolitan opera soprano, feature "Speed Show," WJSV, at 9.

National Barn Dance—Turns Yankee with a "Down-East" broadcast of all Eastern tunes, WMAL, at 9.

"Hit Parade"—Lists "The Way You Look Tonight" for another week as America's No. 1 dance hit, WJSV, at 10.

• • • •

"Amos 'n' Andy" again break tradition. A minstrel show has been scheduled for the night of December 4. Bill Hay will serve as interlocutor, Amos and Andy as end men. Frank Parker as "guest" soloist. All under the auspices of the "Mystic Knights of the Sea."

Miss Erma Mitchell Wed to John F. Dyson

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cambridge, Md., Nov. 27.—Miss Erma Louise Mitchell, teacher in the elementary school at Cheltenham, Prince George County, and John Francis Dyson, of Washington, were married Wednesday in Zion M. E. Church by Dr. J. J. Bunting, Salisbury, district superintendent of the Wilmington annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Mitchell, was given in marriage by her father. Miss Nellie Mitchell was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Mary Gertrude Dyson, Washington, and Mrs. T. Clifton Mitchell, Cambridge. Laurie Dyson, of Washington, was his brother's best man.

Prosecutor Re-elected By 20 Votes on Recount

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Keyser, W. Va., Nov. 27.—Vernon E. Rankin, formerly of Berkeley Springs, was notified by the Mineral County Court that he had been re-elected prosecuting attorney by 20 votes more than given Harry R. Taylor, who demanded a recount. The original return gave Rankin a lead of one vote. He gained on the recount although the county court allowed Taylor 10 ballots cast in Ridgeley, the legality of which Taylor had questioned.

There is a possibility that Taylor will take the matter to the circuit court and if the decision is adverse there, will go to the Supreme Court of Appeals.

Montgomery Farmer Feared Bandit Victim

Missing Man Carried $600 When Last Seen on Saturday Night.

Elwood D. Matthews, 65, of Four Corners, Md., widely-known and wealthy truck farmer, last night was the object of a wide search by Montgomery County police who fear he may have been slain by robbers.

Matthews was last seen Saturday night when he left a store in Four Corners with $600 in his pockets to walk to his home a short distance away in the Old Bladensburg road. Charles Matthews, who lives with the missing man, told police his brother had never stayed away from home overnight before.

Police said they did not become alarmed over Matthews' disappearance until they learned that he had displayed a roll of bills in the store before starting home.

Matthews was described as being 5 feet 8½ inches in height and weighing about 150 pounds. He is slender, partially bald, has brown eyes and several missing teeth.

WomanM.P. toTalk At Town Hall Meet

The Hon. Agnes MacPhail, only woman member of the Canadian Parliament, will speak at Town Hall meeting in the Shoreham tomorrow evening.

Her subject will be "Canadian-American Relations," a topic much in the news lately. Several tariff experts have been asked to sit on the panel, which will question her after her speech. They are Alexander T. Dye, director of the Bureau of Foreign-Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce; William E. Armstrong, former professor of international relations in American University; E. Dana Durand, member of the U. S. Tariff Commission, and Kemper Simpson, former economist with the Tariff Commission, now with the SEC.

Camalier Resigns D. C. Dental Post

Recently elected president of the American Dental Association, Dr. C. Willard Camalier yesterday announced his resignation from the position he has held for 14 years as secretary of the District of Columbia Board of Dental Examiners.

"The new office and my private practice would not leave me enough time to devote to the secretaryship," he said, "but I shall continue to be a member of the board for a few months."

Dr. Camalier graduated from George Washington Dental School in 1912 and has been practicing dentistry here since then. He is married and has three children, one studying medicine at Duke University.

N.Y. Journal Signs Labor Agreement

New York, Nov. 27 (AP).—William A. Curley, managing editor of the New York Journal, a Hearst newspaper, today confirmed announcement by the New York Newspaper Guild that an agreement had been reached on a schedule of wages and hours for editorial employes, including the five-day week, to be established by January 1, 1937.

Points in the agreement include the following: A scale of wages for reporters ranging from $25 a week for the first year of employment to $55 after three years; a weekly minimum for rewrite men, copy readers, artists, photographers, etc.

Dismissal bonuses ranging from two weeks' pay after employment of from six months to one year, to six months' pay after ten years.

Police Question Man On Baby Kidnaping Tip

Detroit, Nov. 27 (AP).—Police late today questioned a man they were told professed knowledge of the whereabouts of Harry Browe, who was abducted September 5 when he was 19 months old.

Detectives quoted the man as saying two chance acquaintances told him the baby was in Buffalo, N. Y. Robert Browe, the baby's father, said the man told him his son was in Bridegport, Conn.

Former Actress Dies In 7-Story Plunge

Beverly Hills, Calif., Nov. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Mina Rudolph Graves, 55, a former actress, plunged to her death today from the seventh floor of a hotel here.

Police Lieut. B. E. Magee said that September 24, she tried in vain to kill herself by taking gas, and two days ago attempted to purchase a revolver which was refused her on the advice of police.

The officer said Mrs. Graves was depressed because she recently lost her home. A few days ago her pet dog died.

Great Northern Plans $30,000,000 Program

St. Paul, Nov. 27 (AP).—W. P. Kenney, president of the Great Northern Railway, today announced a $30,000,000 improvement and maintenance program for 1937, based on expectations of a continued rise in general business.

Rebuilding, in the company's shops, of 11,000 freight cars, air conditioning of passenger equipment and purchase of new equipment were included in the program.

Capitol Funds for Air-Cooling Threaten to Reach Zero Mark

Workmen Busy Installing Ducts to Carry Frigid Blasts to Congressional Offices, but Money for Refrigerating Plant May Run Short.

Architect of the Capitol David Lynn, whose job it is to keep the Capitol hot in winter and cold in summer, is having temperature trouble, and it may take a Congressional deficiency appropriation to cure it.

It seems the $2,550,000 Congress provided to cool the Capitol and its three office buildings during the steamy summer months, isn't quite going to stretch.

Workmen for weeks have been hacking away at the heavy building masonry installing the metal ducts that will carry the artificial blasts of frigid temperatures to the torrid brows of the members.

By the time Congress convenes on January 5 the ducts will all be ready for their first gust of frosty respiration. But the rub comes in finding enough money for equipment to complete the refrigerating plant that supplies the frost.

Officials will pass the next few days going over bids for the work, looking for deduction items that might bring the appropriation into line with outlay. They are seeking a solution that will enable the refrigeration to get going when May brings spring fever and warm weather.

Quirk Promoted By Hecht Company

George M. Quirk, store manager of the Hecht Co., was made vice president and assistant secretary of the Hecht corporation at a meeting of the board of directors Wednesday, according to an announcement by Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of the organization.

J. W. Roedel, chief auditor and secretary, becomes vice president also as a result of the elections, which were held by the board of the corporation at Baltimore.

Quick, who was born in Erie, Pa., received his education at Georgetown University. He joined the Hecht Co. in 1913 and went to work in the accounting division. He was made controller in 1919 and became store manager in 1933. He is a member of the Board of Trade, Lions Club, Manor Club and other civic and fraternal organizations, and was made director of the Bank of Commerce and Savings at the annual stockholders' meeting held in September.

Marital Status Stumps Mae West's 'Husband'

New York, Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Frank Wallace, who claims to have been married to Mae West, movie actress, filed an affidavit in New York supreme court today asking that his marital status be clarified.

He said he had married again after being assured in 1914 by Miss West's lawyer that she had divorced him. Now Wallace's affidavit added his attorneys are unable to find any record of the divorce.

Offer to Repay Fee Is Charged To Bondsman

Pumphrey Denies Proposal Alleged by Woman Plaintiff in Suit.

Charges Elmer Pumphrey, Prince Georges County bondsman, offered to repay the $151.70 she gave him to settle a traffic charge against her were made yesterday in an affidavit by Mrs. Dorothy Bowers, 2000 Newton street northeast.

Mrs. Bowers submitted the affidavit to Harvey Cobb, Keystone Automobile Club attorney, who recently appeared before the county grand jury with charges Washington motorists are being mulcted on traffic charges.

Pumphrey stoutly denied Mrs. Bowers' allegations and explained he went to the home of the woman's father, James Gorrie, 3607 Twentieth street, at the latter's request to confer with Cobb.

Mrs. Bowers recently filed suit against Pumphrey for return of the money she paid him on the traffic charge. Her suit declared she paid Pumphrey the money in April for a purported bond fee, fines and costs.

She contended the money had not been used for that purpose and asked the court to order Pumphrey to repay her.

Mrs. Bowers, in her affidavit, declared Pumphrey offered to pay her $170 if she would drop her suit. She said she refused the offer in the presence of her father, her mother, and her brother, James E. Gorrie, 28.

Cobb said Mrs. Bowers' affidavit will be turned over to the county grand jury when it reconvenes Monday to continue its investigation of charges policemen, bondsmen and justices of the peace collaborated in "fixing" traffic charges against District motorists.

Mrs. Bowers said she paid the money to Pumphrey on April 21, 1936.

Profit Taxes Due Even Though Firm Weak Financially

By the Associated Press.

The Internal Revenue Bureau ruled yesterday corporations with impaired capital must pay the new Federal taxes on undistributed profits even though they are prevented by State law from declaring dividends.

The bureau said that between 1932 and 1935 a corporation sustained substantial losses, impairing its capital. Its adjusted net income for this year will be substantial, it was said, but not sufficient to equal its capital impairment.

Under a State law the corporation can declare dividends only out of surplus, and, therefore, cannot pay dividends on 1936 earnings without violating the State statute.

No exemptions for corporations facing this situation are contained in the 1936 revenue law, the bureau said, and they thus are subject to taxes on the undistributed profits.

Bruno Not Alone, Hoffman Insists

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 27 (U.P.).—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was not solely responsible for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, jr., and "as long as there are other people connected with the crime at large, our children are not safe," Gov. Harold Hoffman of New Jersey said today.

The Governor said that he had held several conferences with Mrs. Anna Hauptmann since her husband's execution and they have not abandoned efforts to cast further doubt on the conviction.

"I am by no means convinced that the crime has been completely solved," he said today.

Security Trading Rises in October

The dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in October amounted to $2,570,692,872, an increase of 36.6 per cent over the value of sales in September and an increase of 18.1 per cent over the value of sales in October, 1935. Stock sales had a value of $2,241,462,458, an increase of 40.6 per cent over September. Bond sales were valued at $329,488,417, an increase of 14.5 per cent over September.

Total sales of stock in October were 79,901,599 shares, or 34.2 per cent above September's total. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $420,739,375, an increase of 11.2 per cent over September. The two leading New York exchanges accounted for 95.7 per cent of the value of sales on all registered exchanges, 95.1 per cent of stock sales, and 99.9 per cent of bond sales.

On the Washington Stock Exchange for October, stock sales were $201,897 and bond sales, $48,457; a total of $250,354, which compares with September stock sales of $119,795; bonds, $46,548, a total of $166,443.

What's new about the British Lounge V-8? Many things. It is the first ready-to-wear suit to carry out successfully the English custom tailoring principle of a body-tracing line plus the comfort which its name implies. The suit is actually cut on loose, full lines, but the suit is permanently moulded in by deft needlework. Notice the triangular V-line formed by the sharply-angled lapels. This special feature creates a broad-shouldered, full-chested effect and serves to slenderize the waist. In this V-8 model the short man looks taller . . . the stout man looks slimmer . . . and the tall man looks broader-shouldered. It's a suit for practically all builds of men and exclusive with The Hecht Co. in Washington.
